Society's Misfits.

The old policy of imposing a sentence of imprisonment, proportioned in some uncertain way to the magnitude of the transgression, is still the method employed in dealing with those who violate the laws essential to a communal existence. Everyone is expected to fit into and conform to the complicated usages that have developed through many generations of growing civilization; and for those who fail to conform there is the one resource of punishment. Society takes cognizance of acts done, and does not venture into the less certain field of tendencies and predispositions. But there is a growing improvement in this respect which will result in the saving of some, now regarded as criminals, to lives of usefulness. The first improvement to be effected is the separation of the mentally diseased from the other classes of criminals. At present the question of sanity is determined by a jury after a debate by opposing counsel, each sometimes sustained by expert testimony. Of 144 criminals in Germany found to be insane only 38 were recognized as insane when on trial. A large number of criminals in every country are removed from penal institutions to asylums for the insane, and in a great many cases the mental diseases have developed before the acts of criminality, which were but symptoms or manifestations. And there are many now serving out criminal sentences who should be under treatment for mental diseases.

The moral imbecile is a type of criminal familiar to penologists, but not yet recognized by law. His leading characteristic is the absence of moral sensibilities. This gives him a happy nature, for he is incapable of serious feelings, and he falls into criminality through having no regard either for his own rights or the rights of others. The sentences which follow his criminality are accepted in stolid indifference. Such men require constant supervision, and that necessity should be recognized. There are also occasional criminals whose peculiar weakness is manifested only under exceptional circumstances. They are abnormally endowed with the weaknesses common to all humanity. Under favorable conditions they live, and desire to live, an exemplary life. But when the pressure of misfortune comes they fall into crime. Such cases are the most hopeful if properly guided and cared for, and they speedily become the most hopeless when subjected to the established punishments. Another distinctive class is made up of the victims of ungovernable passion. A sailor recently condemned to death in New York for the murder of his captain is an extreme type. He objected to the application for a reprieve, as he feared his temper would lead to another crime. Proneness to temporary outbursts of passion is a difficult and dangerous weakness in many men otherwise normal. The real criminal of vicious instincts represents but a small element in prison population. His tendencies are quite as strongly marked when in prison as while he is at liberty. He is unfitted for life in a civilized communal State, and should be kept in detention.

The wisdom of dealing intelligently with the criminal rather than mechanically with the crime is recognized in the growing frequency of suspended sentences, the parole system, and the indeterminate sentence. These methods are capable of extension, and there is room for reform in the surroundings and occupation of criminals in prison. The march of improvement is naturally slow, but the idea of reform rather than punishment is coming to the front.

Marriage in Fiction.

Small wonder that novelists content themselves with making matches, and refrain from examining too closely the result of their handiwork. They would have more conscience about it, if it were not so easy for them to withdraw. They are almost as irresponsible as poets, who delight in yoking unequal mates, as proof of the power of love. Poetry weds King Cophetua to the beggar maid, and smilingly retires from any further contemplation of the catastrophe. Shakespeare gives Celia—Celia, with her sweet brown beauty, her true heart, her nimble wit, her grace of exquisite companionship—to that unnatural sinner, Oliver; and the only excuse he offers is that Oliver says he is sorry for his sins. So I suppose Helen of Troy said she regretted her indiscretion, and this facile repentance reinstated her in happy domesticity. But the novelist is not at play in the Forest of Arden. He is presumably grappling with the dismal realities of earth. Nothing could be less like a fairy playground than the village of Thrums "If the Auld Licht parishioners ever get to heaven," said Dr. Chalmers, "they will live on the north side of it"; yet it is in Thrums that Mr. Barrie marries Babbie to the Little Minister—marries her with a smile and a blessing, as though he had solved, rather than complicated, the mysterious problem of life.

The world of the novelist is full of such strange mishaps, and our sense of inquietude corresponds with our conviction of their reality. Mrs. Ward probably does not expect us to believe that Jacob Delafield and Julie Le Breton lived happily and harmoniously together. There is something as radically inharmonious in their marriage as in the union of conflicting elements. It is not a question of taking chances of happiness, as Sophia Western takes with Tom Jones (very good chances to my way of thinking); it is a question of unalterable laws by which the gods limit our human joy.—Agnes Repplier, in Harper's Bazar.

Acadiensis.

Special Champlain Number, July, 1904.

During the past nine months extensive preparations have been made for the Special Champlain issue of this valuable magazine. The forthcoming issue, which contains about 200 pages of printed matter, and is handsomely illustrated, is probably the best magazine issue of its class, that of a purely historical nature, yet published in Canada.

Considerable journalistic enterprise has been exhibited by the publisher, who has had extensive research made both in the British Museum, London, England, and the Biblioteque Nationale, in Paris, under the supervision of Mr. Victor Hugo Paltsits, of the Lenox Library, New York, for data regarding the authenticity of existing portraits of de Monts and Champlain, six of which are reproduced in full page size. The topic is ably dealt with by Mr. Paltsits.

A special correspondent was sent to Brouage, on the south-western coast of France the town at which Champlain was born. The town, as it appears today, with its ancient walls, the old church where Champlain probably worshipped, and the monument to his memory erected there, are all well illustrated. This is the first publication in America to present to its readers a sketch of the monument erected to this great Frenchman at his native place by his fellow country men.

Professor Ganong contributes an exhaustive article upon the voyage of Champlain, during which the discovery and naming of the St. John River took place. The pages relating to Champlain's experiences in Acadian waters are reproduced by the photo-engraving process, from its original work, published in 1613. This work is now extremely rare, so that the reproduction will be valuable to the linguist and the historian.

The French flag of the time of Champlain, with illustrations, by Dr. George Stewart, of Quebec; the Colonists at St. Croix, by Edwin Asa Dix, Fellow of Princeton University, and author of "Champlain, the Founder of New France"; The Indians of N. B. in Champlain's Time, by Montague Chamberlain; Champlain, a poem by S. E. Dawson, Litt. D., Honorary Secretary of the Royal Society; Men-ah-quesk, by Dr. W. O. Raymond, and other contributions, will make this issue of ACADIENSIS practically a Champlain hand book.

Single copies to non-subscribers, $1.50; for sale at all book-stores, or upon application to D. R. Jack, Editor and Publisher, St. John, N. B.

Artist's Friend—My dear Harold, I like your picture very much, only I fancy the original doesn't look quite so red as you have painted him. He hasn't a ruddy complexion—quite the reverse.

Impressionist Artist—Whom on earth are you talking about?

Artist's Friend—Why, your uncle, of course.

Impressionist Artist—Heavens, man! that isn't my uncle—it's a sunset!

NOTICE OF SALE.

To William H. Bragdon, of the Parish of Northampton, in the County of Carleton and Province of New Brunswick, labourer, and Elsie Bragdon, in wife, Chester U. Bragdon, formerly of the same place, and all others whom it may in any wise concern:

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a power of sale contained in a certain indenture of mortgage bearing date the first day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety seven, recorded in Carleton County Records in Book "Y" No. 3, on pages 368, 369 and 370, made between the said William H. Bragdon and Elsie Bragdon his wife of the one part, and Frederick H. Hale, Esq., then of the Parish of Northampton, in the County of Carleton, and Province of New Brunswick, lumberman, of the other; there will for the purpose of satisfying the moneys secured by the said Indenture, default having been made in the payment thereof, be sold at Public Auction in front of the law office of Louis E. Young on Main street in the Town of Woodstock, in the County of Carleton, on Friday, the eighth day of July next, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, all the mortgaged lands in the said Indenture of Mortgage described as follows:

"All that certain piece and parcel of land situate in the Parish of Northampton aforesaid and bounded as follows, (that is to say) beginning at the main highway road and extended back from said road eighteen rods containing two acres more or less and being same land conveyed by John Ring and May, his wife, to Denis Ring by deed dated the 14th day of July, A. D. 1874, reference to said deed of conveyance may be had for a particular description of said lot. Also all that other piece or parcel of land lying between the before mentioned road and the River Saint John being eighteen rods in width and two or more rods in breadth and containing one half acre more or less and conveyed as aforesaid from said John Ring and May his wife to the said Denis Ring, the whole containing two and one half acres more or less as described in the deed before mentioned from said John Ring and May his wife to said Denis Ring and also being same land deeded by said Denis Ring to Patrick Haney and by said Haney to said Frederick H. Hale by deed recorded in Book "H" No. 3, of Carleton County Records on pages 280 and 281 and by the said Frederick H. Hale and wife to the said William Bragdon by deed of even date herewith."

Together with all and singular the buildings and improvements thereon and the appurtenances thereto belonging.

Dated this sixth day of June, A. D., 1904.
WARREN C. BULL,
Assignee of Mortgage.
