Obesity.

The tendency to put on fat may be congenital or acquired; that is to say, it may be due to some inherited nutritional fault or it may be the direct result of overeating, or the eating of an undue proportion of fat-forming foods. It may manifest itself in childhood or early adult life, and is then in most cases an inherited condition; but usually it first shows itself in troublesome form in middle life, when an excess of food is not needed for growth and when the vital processes are getting slower, so that this excess cannot be so rapidly eliminated as it was earlier in life, and is thus stored up in the tissues as fat.

Obesity in middle life is not always due to overeating, for it occurs not infrequently in those who are very moderate in their indulgence at table, or are even abstemious. Then the fault is usually one of inheritance, but this does not mean necessarily that the parents or grandparents were corpulent; they may, on the contrary, have been spare, but they were gouty or suffered from diabetes, or gave some other evidence that the processes of nutrition were not properly performed.

Obesity, diabetes and gout are interchangeable conditions in heredity, and are all referable to some nutritional fault; they are also, for the same reason interchangeable conditions even when not hereditary—in that case resulting from overindulgence or unwise indulgence in the pleasures of the table.

After growth has ceased much less food is needed to support life and make up for the ordinary waste, yet there is seldom at this time any reduction made in the quantity of food taken.

There are two kinds of obesity, called usually the plethoric and the anemic. The plethoric, which is the common form in men is due to the taking of too much food of all kinds: the anemic, from which women suffer more often than men, is due rather to the eating, not of too much food, but of improper kinds of food—of sweets, candy, cakes and the like.

It is almost always impossible to reduce flesh and to prevent further accumulation, but it is not always easy and is seldom agreeable. A curb must be put on the appetite, whether for quantity or for quality of food. Habits of indolence must be overcome, and often the struggle must be kept up for the rest of life. A good figure, like liberty, is to be had only at the price of eternal vigilance.

Colors Most in Vogue.

White's first.
Champagne's next.
All blues are good.
Rose shades are lovely.
Willow green is exquisite.
Coral color is in high favor.
Maggie effects will not down.
Lilac is among the favorites.
Wedgewood blue has real vogue.
Hyacinth blues are particularly good.
Hydrangea shades are most beautiful.
Maize shades combine well for evening.
Deep cinnamon color is good in mohair.
A bit of any brilliant color is good style.
Light grays are good all times of the day.
Gun metal green is a smart shade in veiling.
A touch of orange is lovely with brown shades.

Brown in various tones continues in high favor.

Black chiffon is noted in one lovely evening dress.

Panne in poinsettia red gives a vivid touch to a black dress.

Some good combinations are salmon and gray, navy and hyacinth blue, and coral and brown.

That classic blending of blue and green, though anything save new is as smart as it is attractive

The smartest turban seen lately is of straw between cerise and pink. It is draped with black Chantilly.

Fine Mustard Pickles.

The proportion given will fill a two gallon crock. One-half peck small cucumbers, two quarts of small silver-skin onions, two heads of cauliflower (picked apart), soaked overnight in salt water. In the morning mix one dessertspoonful of tumeric powder and three-fourths of a pound of best mustard with sufficient vinegar (from three quarts) to make a smooth paste. To the balance of the vinegar, heated, add one pound of brown sugar, one half ounce each celery seed and white mustard seed, one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and cloves and five cents' worth of mixed spices for pickling. Carefully add the mustard paste, and let it boil well, then add the mixed vegetables with two red peppers finely chopped, and after it begins to bubble, allow it to boil well for five minutes. Do not be persuaded to add tomatoes, green or ripe, to mustard pickles.

A Suburban Cottage.

The complicated architecture that so often identifies suburban cottages is wanting in a very attractive example pictured in the October Delineator. Simplicity is the keynote of this cottage, which is on the Dutch Colonial order, the exterior being of wide boards and shingles, and the furnishings largely in "Mission" style. Spacious verandas and comfortable settees are adjuncts to outdoor living, and the rooms within are planned economically and conveniently, quaint fireplaces and latticed windows lending an air of individuality. Altogether, it is a cottage that should appeal to prospective home builders.

WOODSTOCK, N. B., SEPT. 14, 1904.

The Mule's Vindication.

Colonel George E. Jenkins, quarter master and commissary of the Nebraska State Guard, who has had a large and rich experience with mules, gives them this testimonial:—"After a life time of close associations with the mule, I have never known him to kick a man; nor have I ever met a man who knew another man of his own knowledge who had been kicked by a mule. This is a bold statement, but it is true, nevertheless. You can question soldiers of the army everywhere, and I confidently predict that they will bear me out in this. I know I am uprooting a popular belief, but I ask you to stop and think and see if I am not doing our mule friend a deserved justice. Horses' kicks are plenty—mule kicks are as rare as promotions."

It is unkind of Colonel Jenkins thus to upset general belief. The mule has borne with patient indifference his evil reputation, but what is man to do with out the expression, "Kicks like a mule?"

A Seaside Chat.

How do you do?" said the man-o'-war as he sailed in past the light-ship Arabella B.

"Why, howdydo, Mr. Newsarge?" replied the lady lightship, waving her bow at him.

"How are you enjoying light housekeeping?" asked the man-o'-war, continuing his progress up the channel.

"Pretty well," she answered; "but it is so hard to keep my buoys behaving properly. I think two or three of them ran away last night. If you see any of them playing about in the channel please tell them to hurry home, won't you?"

"Oh, don't be too severe with them," urged the man-o'-war. "We older fellows can get along all right, even if they do try to play pranks on us. Remember that buoys will be buoys."

And he bade her farewell as he turned to salute the fortress gallantly.

Were Great Sufferers From Kidney Disease and Pains in the Back—Now Unite in Praise of

KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Those who are best acquainted with the merits of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills do not wonder at their immense popularity as a family medicine.

In thousands of cases they have cured where physicians and ordinary medicines have failed. This is the test by which they have been proven.

Here is a letter we have just received from Prince Edward Island.

Miss Kate Doyle, lot 1, postoffice, P. E. I., states:—"About three years ago my father was seized with a severe form of kidney disease, which caused him much suffering, as well as anxiety lest the ailment should become chronic or prove fatal. We immediately obtained Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and he began at once to improve under this treatment, the symptoms gradually disappearing, until he became quite well again. Since then we always keep these pills in the house for use in case of sickness of this kind."

"For some time I suffered from pains in the small of the back and accompanying ill, and though I was treated by a doctor at considerable expense, I could obtain no lasting benefit until I used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, which seemed to be exactly suited to my ailment. Father and I are greatly pleased with the excellent medicine and wish to recommend it to others."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box of his remedies.

An Insulted Scotchman.

The following story heard at Killarney shows how differently an Irishman and a Scotchman will take a joke. An Englishman who had been fishing in the lower lakes said to his boatman: "An extraordinary thing happened to me some time ago. I lost a pair of scissors out of my fishing book at the end of the lake. The next year I was fishing here again and hooked and killed a very large pike. I felt something very hard inside of him, so I opened him, and what do you think it was?" Begorra, your honor, I'd think it might be your scissors only for one thing. What is that?" asked the other. "It's only just this, your honor, that there never was a pike in any of the Killarney lakes since the world began."

Afterward the same Englishman tried the same story on a gillie in Scotland. When he asked him, "What do you think was inside the pike?" the gillie replied: "Your scissors and nae guts, and the Duke of Argyll—and he's a far greater man than the king—would not have insulted me sae. I'll fish nae mare wi' ye." And off he walked.—"Seventy Years of Irish Life."
