SHYLOCK

Shylock was the man who wanted a pound of human flesh. There are many Shylocks now, the convalescent, the consumptive, the sickly child, the pale young woman, all want human flesh and they can get it—take Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion, is flesh and blood, bone and muscle. It feeds the nerves, strengthens the digestive organs and they feed the whole body.

For nearly thirty years Scott's Emulsion has been the great giver of human flesh.

We will send you a couple of ounces free.

SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, Toronto, Ontario, 50c. and $1.00; all druggists.

His Guess Was Natural.

Many tales are told of the aged postmaster of a little seaport village of New England whose position allowed him a speciality intimate acquaintance with the affairs of his fellow townfolk upon which his kindly spirit often moved him to offer unsought advice. They were used to him, and were seldom either offended or abashed, but temporary residents sometimes had their tempers a little ruffled. His, however, remained quite unperturbed under their rebuffs.

One season a very pretty young teacher accepted a position in a village school, which had been resigned with inconvenient abruptness by her predecessor. The postmaster soon observed that she mailed many letters to her native town, of which half were addressed to her mother and the rest to a young man,—to a man, at any rate,—and that he was young and her admirer was the prompt inference of the amiable, official busy body, who considered himself an expert in judging love letters from the outside. Ordinarily, he delighted in a love-affair; indeed he had been known to follow the progress and vicissitudes of local lovers with such keen interest that at the first slackening in their correspondence he had asked the girl, in a penetrating whisper, heard all over the place, if she and Tommy had had a falling out. But this particular affair only half-satisfied him. At last he put his objections into words.

"Looky here, Miss Gray," he said handing out a particularly plump letter with exasperating slowness. "Here's another o' those Hentley letters for you from John White; its the third this month. Well, folks have a right to do as they please, I s'pose, but I do hope, Miss Gray, you'll give the school committee fair notice. It was dretful annoying last time, their not knowing till a week before the wedding. I think you'd ought to give 'em warning a full month beforehand—honest, I do."

The pretty schoolmistress looked puzzled a moment, and then flushed.

"Mr. John White, with whom I correspond is my half-brother, sir," she said, walking out with her chin held rather high.

The old postmaster sat himself on the edge of the counter, pushed back his spectacles, and reached for a pickled lime.

"Well," he drawled, between sucks, in a hurt tone, "she needn't ha' been so touched up about it if he is. I didn't suspect her of burglary nor arson; just plain matrimony. But some girls are such high-stepping, highy-tighty creturs there's no pleasing 'em. I don't see what she's got to blame me for, anyway, do you? Sweethearts are commoner than half-brothers be, and I guessed nateral."

Sleep as a Restorative.

Without sound sleep neither health nor beauty can long be retained. Much of the discomfort and nervousness that people complain of when they rise in the morning is due to the fact that each does not sleep alone. There is nothing that will so derange the nervous system of a person who is eliminative in nervous force as to lie all night in bed with another who is absorbent of nervous force. The latter will sleep soundly all night, and arise refreshed in the morning, while the former will toss restlessly, and awake in the morning fretful, peevish, fainthearted, and discouraged. No two persons, says a medical authority, no matter who they are should habitually sleep together. The one will thrive, the other will lose. This is the law. The grandmother with a little grandchild is a case in point. The aged one keeps strong; the little one pines away and becomes enfeebled. A lady in middle life informed us the other day that she habitually arose in the morning nervous worried, and weak, while her husband would sleep soundly all night. The touch of his foot even would awaken nervousness and discomfort, while he seemed to be wholly unaffected.

It is wonderful how much may be done to protract existence by the habitual restorative of sound sleep. Late hours under mental strain are, of course, incompatible with this good work of sleep. A physician reports that he has traced the beginning of pulmonary consumption in many cases to late hours and evening parties, by which rest is broken and encroachments made on the constitution. If in middle-age the habit of taking deficient and irregular sleep be still maintained, every source of depression, every latent form of disease, is quickened and intensified. The sleepless exhaustion allies itself with every other exhaustion, or it kills imperceptibly by a rapid introduction of premature old age, which leads prematurely to dissolution.

A scientific writer says that sleep, if taken at the right moment, will prevent an attack of nervous headache. If the subjects of such headaches will watch the symptoms of its coming, they can notice that it begins with a feeling of weariness and heaviness. This is the time a sleep of an hour, or even two, as nature guides, will effectually prevent the headache. If not then, it will be too late, for after the attack is fairly under way it is impossible to get sleep until far into the night, perhaps. It is so common in these days for doctors to forbid having their patients waked to take medicines if they are asleep when the hour comes round that people have learned the lesson pretty well, and they generally know that sleep is better for the sick than medicine. But it is not so well known that sleep is a wonderful prevention of disease, better than tonic regulators and stimulants.—Times.

THE ART OF SUCCESS.

It is Nothing More Than Getting Along With People.

"What a fine fellow Percy X. is!" remarked a business man one day to a lawyer friend.

"Yes," rejoined the lawyer, "he is. But he has been with the K.'s—naming a great corporation—for ten years now and he is getting only $150 per month. He has a wife and three children, and, with their tastes, I fancy they have all they can do to live comfortably. He ought to be earning more with his education and capacity."

"Why doesn't he rise faster?"

"I'll tell you. He doesn't rise and he can't until he learns how to get along with people. He can't manage men at all. If he tries he gets himself disliked, and he keeps them in a constant state of irritation."

A similar conversation was recently overheard between two business men. Said one: "I hear that young Paul G., only four years out of college, has been placed at the head of the T. branch of the Y. Company. I didn't know he was so smart. What is his strong point?"

"He is a great fellow to get along with people," answered the other man. "No man would, of course, be put in a place of such responsibility without integrity, fair quickness and ability, and a good education. But there are scores of men who have all those qualities and yet they do not go forward, because they cannot exercise authority. If they receive any they either make the men under them cross and restive by petty tyrannies, or else they are too good-natured and lose the respect of the men—are imposed on by them and don't get good work out of them. It seems to be the rarest thing in the world to find young men who have dignity and keenness enough to maintain discipline, and yet can make their subordinates bear the yoke cheerfully and render good service."

A third young man was characterized by the president of a great railway thus: "I haven't had a chance to talk with him and find out how much he knows, but I have watched him several times as he manipulated a gang of men, and he has for weeks managed them wonderfully. We have rarely had a man in our employ who could get so much work out of a lot of men and at the same time could keep them so decently good-tempered."—Independent.

A Sure Winner.

"I've got a scheme," said a sharp-featured young man, "that I think will work like a clock. I'm going to put an ad. in the papers asking women to send their photographs and $2 and I'll tell them how to become beautiful."

"And how are you going to make them beautiful?" asked a listener.

"Don't have to. I'll just send back each photograph with a letter something like this: 'Dear Madam—After seeing your photograph we are surprised that you desire to become more beautiful than you already are. It sometimes seems that the very ones upon whom Nature bestows her greatest favors are the least thankful. One so divinely endowed with such loveliness as you possess should be
