SHYLOCK

Shylock was the man who wanted a pound of human flesh. There are many Shylocks now, the convalescent, the consumptive, the sickly child, the pale young woman, all want human flesh and they can get it—take Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion is flesh and blood, bone and muscle. It feeds the nerves, strengthens the digestive organs and they feed the whole body.

For nearly thirty years Scott's Emulsion has been the great giver of human flesh.

We will send you a couple of ounces free.

A Recipe Worth a Fortune.

What is believed to be the most valuable book in the world is not a literary volume, but a mere recipe. It contains a remarkable story, however, dating back hundreds of years; and the telling of it at this time has special reference to the ecclesiastical troubles that have stirred France to its depths. When a few months ago, the monks of the Grande Chartreuse were expelled from their ancient monastery, the senior abbot carried with him a casket of tempered steel that never left his possession for a single instant. Other treasures—pictures, tapestries, jewels even—might go as ordinary freight but not this casket, for therein reposed the written secret of how to make the world-famous twin liqueurs—the chartreuse, green and yellow. For centuries the precious script had lain secure in the monastery's strong room. Originally it consisted of a single sheet of parchment six inches by nine. But as time went by other ingredients for the liqueur were discovered—there are said to be no fewer than 137 of them now—and hence supplementary instructions and directions were added until the single sheet of skin has grown to a volume of more than one hundred pages. Its lucky possessor, supposing that he were a private individual, would be more secure from want, it is believed, than if he owned the richest mines in the world. And the queer part of the story is that the mendicant friar that first invented Chartreuse thought but little of the discovery.

Whisperings.

Many a man is pound-foolish who isn't even penny-wise. The policeman who patrols a cemetery knows all about dead beats. Every stage has its wings, but it takes an angel to make them flutter. In the game of life lots of girls would rather win a diamond than a heart. The funniest thing about many a comedian is the fact that he thinks he's funny. It is natural that the musicians who play wind instruments should come to blows. When a man is his own worst enemy it is up to him to make friends with himself. No, Maude, dear; there is no similarity between a dinner coat and an Eton jacket. The girl who fishes for a husband should know the difference between a nibble and a bite.

It was a handsome wedding,
And happy was the bride,
The men all swore it was a bore,
And all the women cried.

Levy and Cohen came out of the synagogue on New Year's Day. It was the day of atonement, of forgiveness, of making up.

Levy approached Cohen and extended a great flat hand.

"Cohen," said he, "Ve haf not shpoken for dvendy years. Come! Ve make frends." Cohen silently shook.

"Now, Cohen," continued the reconciliant, "ve go ofer to Bunglehelm's unt haf a drink." Arm in arm they crossed the street. Drinks were ordered and set before them.

Cohen convinced at last of the sincerity of the other's advances, spoke for the first time.

"Levy," he said, "I am glad of it. I raise my glass to you, Levy. Vish me some-dings!"

"Mit all my heart," replied Levy, and raised his glass in turn. "Cohen, my dear frendt," said he. "I vish you shoost vat you vish me?"

The growing smile faded from Cohen's face and he set his glass down with a bang.

"Py Abraham!" he exclaimed. "Now you're shtarting it all over again!"

Chronic Bronchitis.

After repeated attacks of acute bronchitis, especially in those past the middle of life, there is, says Youth's Companion, a tendency for the disease to become established as a chronic affection. When this occurs a perfect cure is hardly to be expected, unless, perhaps, the patient is able to take up his residence permanently in a warm climate. Even when a cure appears to have been effected the mucous membrane of the bronchial tubes remain vulnerable, and very slight causes will then bring about a return of the trouble.

There is usually more or less cough accompanied by thick expectoration, especially in the morning. Sometimes the chest is sore and coughing excites a rasping pain. The heavy cough, returning in repeated attacks and finally becoming almost constant, at least from early summer well on into the autumn, at last causes a dilatation of the air-cells in the lungs. This condition—pulmonary emphysema, as it is called—induces a sort of asthma in which expiration is difficult, longer than usual, and accompanied by more or less wheezing.

There is usually little to do for chronic bronchitis in the way of drugs. The so-called expectorants or cough mixtures are needed, as a rule, only when there is a fresh cold caught on top of the chronic condition. At such times the cough may become racking and incessant and call for quieting remedies. Codliver oil is almost always good for these patients, unless it spoils the appetite. When it cannot be borne—and when it can also the sufferer should eat plenty of butter and use cream freely.

When the patient is gouty, a not unusually contingency, an anti-gout regimen should be adopted. If possible, the colder part of the year should be spent in a warm climate. The dry air of the interior is preferable to the Atlantic coast; but as the heart may be affected secondarily to the lung trouble or to the kidney trouble which is frequently associated with, the high altitudes, such as the Rocky Mountain region, are to be visited with caution.

As will be seen from the general line of treatment indicated, hope for suffering from chronic bronchitis lies in doing all that is possible to keep the general condition built up by hygienic living and a generous diet.

Eternity

Eternity is incomprehensible. When the laziest snail has carted every drop of water in all our ocean and every grain of sand all our land to the farthest away star and brought in all back again stopping for a century rest at each planet on the way both ways, then will we see the first rays of the sunrise of eternity's endless day in the east of the beginning.

This being the case, it is suggested that we don't cram ourselves with this world's foods and drink so much of earthly water that it will take half of the everlasting to get our systems in shape to enjoy what's left of eternity.

Editor Versus Lawyer.

A lawyer in a courtroom may call a man a liar, scoundrel villain or thief, and make a complaint when court has adjourned. If a newspaper prints such reflections on a man's character there is a libel suit or a dead editor. And this is owing to the fact that people believe what an editor says; what a lawyer says cuts no figure.

ARE YOUR KIDNEYS SICK?

Let your morning urine stand for 24 hours in a glass vessel, and then if it is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish brick-dust sediment, or if particles or germs float about in it, your kidneys are diseased. If the kidneys are well they filter just so much blood, but if they are sick or weak from any cause, they leave the poison in the blood, and this poison affects the entire system.

It is natural to pass urine three times a day, but many who regard themselves as healthy are obliged to pass water six to ten times daily and are obliged to get up frequently during the night. They have sick kidneys and bladder and don't know it. Smith's Buchu Lithia Pills cure Rheumatism and all Kidney and Bladder diseases, and make new, rich blood.

We will send you a generous sample post paid free, together with our large book on the above mentioned diseases. Address, W. P. Smith Co., 185 St. James Street, Montreal, Canada.
