An Unofficial Transaction.

A young man entered a savings-bank in Chicago recently and handed the paying teller his book, on which appeared a credit of one hundred and sixty dollars.

"I'd like to draw it all out," he said. The teller looked the pages over carefully.

"What was that forty-five dollars you deposited yesterday?"

"Two New York checks."

"Sorry then, but I can't pay that till the check comes back—in about two days more.
I can give you the hundred and fifteen, though."

"But I've got to have it all. I've just been ordered to Portland, Oregon, and I must go today. I didn't know it yesterday, or I wouldn't have made that deposit. I absolutely must have that money today."

"I'm sorry for you," said the teller, "but I have no option. You may be honest but you must understand that that has been tried on us time and again. The checks from New York may be worthless. We must have security till return on them is made."

Argument did no good and the young man, angry and disappointed, pocketed without counting the hundred and fifteen dollars which the teller handed him. Two hours later he counted it in a ticket office and had fifty dollars too much. The teller, while talking, had put down a fifty dollar bill, and absent-mindedly counted one hundred and fifteen in fives and tens upon it. The young man went directly back to the bank.

"As I understand it," he said to the teller, "you allow I may be honest, but you can't risk forty five dollars on it?"

"That is the case exactly."

"Please count that pile of bills and compare it with the book. That is just as you gave it to me."

The teller started to say that he could not rectify mistakes after the depositor had left the bank, but changed his mind and counted the bills. He looked at the depositor, then slipping the fifty-dollar bill in the drawer, counted out forty five in fives, and put it through the slide.

"Officially," he said, "I suspect you of playing a very old game on this bank. But personally I reckon you are all right. There's your money."

A Political Year.

Every fourth year is of great political significance to the people of the United States for then they choose a larger number of important officers than at any other time. This year, for example, in addition to a President and Vice-President, a whole new House of Representatives is to be elected, besides the governors of thirty-three states. Next year four new governors only will be chosen, no members of the House of Representatives, unless to fill vacancies, and no President or Vice-President.

The concentration of elections in a single year has not come by chance. Men cannot talk politics and do other things well at the same time. So the business men have favored electing governors in "presidential" year.
The party leaders have favored it, too, because then the full party vote is cast, and the chances of electing their candidate for governor in a doubtful state are greater than when there is no candidate for President to be voted for.

Elections are won or lost through what may be called the floating vote, using that term in a good sense. A great majority of the electors support either the Democratic or the Republican ticket at every election. They believe in the traditional principles of their party, and will support those principles, even if they may not like the candidates. A small minority consists of men who are not strongly attached to one party, and if they dislike either the platform or the candidate of that party which they usually support, will vote against both.

All the speechmaking and all the demonstrations of whatever kind, from now till November 8th, are planned for the express purpose of attracting doubtful voters, of keeping in line those who are inclined to desert, and of inducing the disaffected to go to the polls on election day. If the party managers only knew from year to year who the doubtful ones are to be, they could direct their attention exclusively to them, but the waverers are not always the same men. So it takes about as much oratorical ammunition in political battles to bring down a voter as is required of another kind to do execution in actual warfare.

Testing Dairy Herds.

The Department of Agriculture, Ottawa has for some time been recommending the establishment among Canadian dairy farmers of co-operative testing associations, somewhat similar to those which have had such a marked effect in increasing the milking capacity and reducing the cost of production in Danish dairy herds. Under the direction of the Minister of Agriculture, an object lesson along that line is now being given in the district about Cowansville, Que., with the Government Cool Curing Room as the centre where the testing is done and the records kept. Arrangements have been made whereby 82 farmers in the vicinity undertake to keep accurate records of the daily milk yield of each cow in their herds. Samples of both morning and night's milk are taken three times a month and tested for butter fat at the Cool Curing Room. The milk record sheets are collected monthly, and these are compared with the books of the cheese factories to which the farmers send milk, so that a fairly efficient check on accuracy is provided. Some 1450 cows are concerned in this Cowansville cow census, which shows that the large dairymen of that district are alive to the importance of weeding out the unprofitable producers. This testing association is, as yet, merely in the experimental stage, but if it works out satisfactorily, it will doubtless lead to a considerable extension of the movement.

Mr. Fairbanks' Caution.

His habits are correct. He doesn't drink, he doesn't smoke. Once, a few years ago, he was in a runaway accident in Chicago.
He was thrown out of a carriage and shaken severely. They carried him into a house nearby and gave him a drink of whiskey.
Months later he was talking with an acquaintance "Do you drink whiskey?" he suddenly asked.

"Sometimes," said the acquaintance.
"Well," said Fairbanks, "I had a drink of whiskey once. They gave it to me when I was thrown out of a carriage in Chicago. Do you know, I can taste it yet. Do you really mean to tell me that people enjoy the taste of that compound?"

"I have reason to suspect that some people do," replied the visitor.

"Well," said the Senator after mature reflection. "I assume that that may be the case, and I must confess that that whiskey I once drank imparted a pleasurable glow, but," he added hastily, "this must in no sense be considered an indorsement of liquor. There are many temperance people among my constituents."—New York World.

Paint Economy

One of the best paint authorities in the world says that true paint economy is "the sum total of the cost of the material and its application divided by the number of times you have to repaint in a given term of years."

THE SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT MADE TO PAINT BUILDINGS WITH gives that sort of economy, always.

You will also find that the cost of material and application figures out best with S.W. P.
