WOMEN AND DRINK.

Some Heart-Rending Cases Before the Recorder.

(Montreal Witness, July 25.)

'I cannot understand, Captain Fennell,' said Mr. Recorder Weir, on Saturday morning, 'why there are so many drunken women from your precinct in court today. It is sad beyond words.'

Mrs. Hughes, of Young street, was up on complaint of her husband on charges of drunkenness and assault. He said that one day last week, because he had found a bottle of gin in the house and smashed it, his wife had thrown his watch through the window. She was sentenced to one month at hard labor.

Mrs. McKeown, although the mother of seven children, was, according to Captain Fennell, of Young Street Police Station, hardly ever sober. It appears that a few months ago she had taken a cure. Asked by the Recorder if he thought he could do without his wife for a month, the husband thought he could. She was sent down for a month at hard labor.

Between nine and ten o'clock last night as Constable Tomkins, of No. 5 station, was making his rounds on Hermine street, he found two little children asleep on the sidewalk near Vitre street. He learned that the mother of the children, Mrs. Schwartz, who lived in the rear of 66 Hermine street, had been drunk for several days and that the children were utterly neglected. The constable called up Lieut. Morin, who sent the waggon. The children were at once taken to Mrs. Lajeunesse, the police matron. The mother was found in what, no doubt, she called her home, a wretched hovel, destitute of furniture or cooking utensils, but filled with empty whiskey and gin bottles. The woman was stupid from liquor. Seeing that it would be dangerous to leave the unfortunate creature by herself, the officer sent for the patrol waggon and in a few minutes the mother as well as the children were under the care of Mrs. Lajeunesse.

On Saturday morning Mrs. Schwartz was before Recorder Weir. She held an eighteen-months old child in her arms. A young woman, she was, good-looking and penitent. She begged piteously for mercy. Her sister-in-law and her brother-in-law came forward and said they would take care of the children and the mother, too, if she would only try and not lose the last vestige of her self-respect. The Recorder agreed to this, and after a most severe lecture he allowed her to go on suspended sentence on condition that she give her bond to appear before the court for sentence when called upon.

Maggie Sheridan, who has ruined herself by whiskey, was sent down for a month.

After Twenty Years of Suffering From Kidney Disease and Dyspepsia, a Perfect Cure is Made by

A medicine which will cure such a severe form of kidney disease as that described below can certainly be relied upon for any ordinary case of this ailment.

It seems folly to experiment with new and untried remedies when there are thousands ready to certify that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have positively cured them of this painful and fatal malady.

Mr. John Gearin, an old resident of Thorold, Ont., states:—"For twenty years I was badly afflicted with kidney troubles, indigestion and bladder derangements. During that time I was a great sufferer and had to get up six to twelve times nightly to pass water. I tried different doctors and used all sorts of medicines to no avail.

"Finally, I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and soon found relief. Thus encouraged I continued to use these pills and after having taken twelve boxes was again in perfect health and vigor. I can now sleep undisturbed, the pains in the kidneys and back are gone, and I am feeling well and strong. I consider Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills a great boon to suffering humanity and had I known about them when I was a young man could have escaped suffering all the best years of my life."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Use of the Hand.

Palmists pretend that in addition to being able to discover past and future events in one's life, there is no truer index to the temperament and character of a person than the lines to be traced on the palm of the hand. There is another feature of the hand, according to some, which betrays the secret of one's character to a more reliable degree as do the lines on the palm, especially in the case of a girl.

From the way in which she uses her hands, we are told, it is quite possible to gain a very good idea as to her characteristics and qualifications for the position of a wife.

Certain little tricks of the hand mean much to the observant man, and consequently every girl is advised to make a careful study of her hands if she wishes to create a good impression. It is not only an ungrateful pose, for instance, but also a sign of weakness of character, and some stupidity of mind, when a girl allows her hands to droop listlessly from the wrist.

The girl who carries her hands about as though they were weights is in danger of developing into an old maid. Use the fingers daintily, grasping things principally with the second and third fingers. The forefinger is the finger of the intellectual force, but the middle and ring fingers are the fingers of grace and sentiment.

By the way in which a girl takes the thread off his coat, fastens a flower in his buttonhole, or hands him a tescup, a man, according to this theory, can tell whether or not she would make him a good wife. He is, moreover, often able to judge the warmth of her heart and the sincerity of her love by the manner in which she gives him the tips of her fingers to shake.

Much of a girl's nature is betrayed by the little act of brushing a speck off a man's coat. If she picks off the thread very carefully between the thumb and forefinger it is an indisputable sign that she is a woman of a very practical and executive character.

On the other hand, if the girl should brush the coat lapel of her fiance very softly and tenderly with a second and third finger of her hand in her endeavor to remove an invisible speck, it is a sure sign that she is more sentimental than practical. The man who marries her will live in a continual atmosphere of romance and bad housekeeping.

There is still another type of girl, who will brush the speck off a man's coat with a broad sweep of the hand, in which all the fingers and thumb play a part. She is in all probability an athletic girl, who excels at tennis, golf, and the like, and who will prove a highspirited, strong-minded woman after marriage.

How Animals Commit Robberies.

A curious co-operative system obtains among animals, and a diverting account is given by a traveler of a highway robbery committed on a heron by three black rogues, aided by a couple of dishonest followers in black and white.

The heron had gone a-fishing, and had caught and eaten an eel and some smaller fry. On his way home he was accosted by a carrion crow and two hooded crows, and requested to stand and deliver his hard-earned supper, the magpies waiting to see if they could get any profit out of the nefarious business. They were sleeping partners in the firm. Driving the heron to an open space between two woods, the crows came to close quarters with their victim. One struck at his head from above, while another pecked at his sides. The third seized him by the feet, which are thrust out behind when flying, and upset him so that he turned a complete somersault. At this the villains cawed hilariously.

Unable to stand their treatment, the heron disgorged a fish, which the magpies seized and made off with. Another somersault was turned, and a second fish fell to one of the crows. Seeing he could not get rid of the remaining thieves, the heron at last yielded up the eel, and went home supperless, while the crows had a tug-of-war with the fish.

Hired Man and Boss.

How different things often are when a man becomes a merchant from what they were when he was a clerk is illustrated by the following story from a Philadelphia paper. One man asks, speaking of a man named Quimby: "He's still employed by that big wholesale house isn't he?" But the other replies: "No. I think Quimby is in business for himself now. He used to take an hour for lunch, but now he takes a bare five minutes." The same thing happens among the labor-unions. Let the man amongst them who shouts loudest for a thirty-minute hour and an eight hour day become an employer, and you will straight way find him working from twelve to fourteen hours a day. He may not do it, either, because he is making money so fast, but most often because of competition and the difficulties of business. What employees need most of all is some understanding of the troubles that perpetually beset business men. But the labor union men seem to think every manufacturer has got "money to burn."

Sig. Andrea Villani, we understand has established a colony of Italians in Labelle County, Que., on the slope of the Laurentides Mountains, for the purpose of carrying on Canadian silk industry. It is a surprising thing to hear, but it seems to be a fact that Sig. Villani has succeeded in producing silk of what is described by Italian Government experts as being of finer and more consistent quality than the Chinese and Japanese varieties. Sig. Villani is very enthusiastic as to the prospects for the new industry.
