

Weakness FROM Poor Blood

CAUSES FEEBLE ACTION OF THE BODILY ORGANS.

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD ENTIRELY
OVERCOMES WEAKNESS OF EVERY FORM.

It may be weakness of the muscles or weakness of the nerves, weak action of the heart or feebleness of the organs of digestion, weakness of the liver, kidneys and bowels or weakness and irregularities of the organs peculiarly feminine.

WHEREVER LOCATED WEAKNESS IS DUE TO POOR, WEAK BLOOD AND CAN BE OVERCOME BY THE USE OF DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD.

Because indigestion is impaired or the heart action irregular you have no reason to suppose these organs are diseased in themselves. They merely lack the nerve force which is in reality the motive power of the body and its organs.

A few weeks' treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will convince you of its exceptional blood-forming and nerve-invigorating power, and by noting your increase in weight while using it you can prove that new, firm flesh and tissue is being added to the body.

Paleness, weakness, cold hands and feet, sleeplessness, irritability and low vitality soon give way to health, strength and vigor when this great food cure is used.

MRS. ALEXANDER BUCHANAN, Island Brook, Compton County, Que., writes:—"My system was very much run down and I was troubled for a long time with weak stomach and dizziness. I could scarcely get about the house to attend to my work and felt very miserable most all the time. After having used a few boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food my condition is entirely changed and my system wonderfully built up. I can with all confidence recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to any person troubled with weak stomach or weakness of any kind."

If you would be well and live in the full enjoyment of health, restore your vitality by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Canadian Wheat in American Mills.

A discussion has for the past few weeks been going on in the newspapers of the United States over an extension of the drawback system designed to enable American mills which mix Canadian with American wheat to obtain the former free when the flour is for export. In order to produce a high grade of flour the soft wheat grown in the western States must be mixed up with hard wheat, such as is produced in Minnesota and Dakota, but nowhere else in the United States. These two States no longer furnish an adequate supply to the large mills at Minneapolis and elsewhere, and to meet their demand for free Canadian wheat the conditions under which it has heretofore been ground in bond have been relaxed as above indicated.

In making this change our neighbors have been acting to a limited extent in their own interest. It will tend to make the milling industry more profitable and more general as its raw material will henceforth be imported duty free. The curious feature of the situation is that Canadian wheat entered for consumption in the United States must continue, to pay duty, so that the American consumer is doomed to have the price of his flour factitiously kept high, while it sent abroad to the detested foreigner at a lower price. But this is not the only tariff absurdity perpetrated by Americans at their own expense.

The question, how this change of practice will affect Canadian farmers and millers, is an interesting one. It seems certain that it will improve to a quite appreciable extent the market for northwest wheat. On the other hand, it will make the competition more keen for the millers, who have to sell their flour in the same market with their American competitors on the other side of the Atlantic. Not improbably the change will promote the establishment of large Canadian mills, which would serve the double purpose of lessening the cost of transportation on the farmers' grain and of utilizing the offal for cattle feeding purposes. One admirable site for an immense industry of this sort is the shore of Thunder Bay, where two railways bringing wheat from the northwest now terminate while a third is about to be constructed. In the vicinity is the Kamiistiquia water power adequate to the production of electric energy to the extent of 80,000 horse power. At present this is not utilized at all, but it is quite certain that it will be made available, and it is reasonably probable that the necessary engineering works will be constructed and managed by the Ontario Government.

Col. Younghusband in London.

Colonel Frank Younghusband, C. I. E., the hero of the political mission and military expedition to Lhasa, has, says the London correspondent of The Scotsman, arrived in London. He has well deserved a long holiday, but that the Royal Geographical and other learned societies and circles are not likely to respect. Already a gold medalist of the Royal Geographical Society, since his wonderful exploration of Manchuria and his travels from Peking to India by Chinese Turkestan in 1886-7, and on the Pamirs, Hunza and Chitral thereafter, it is difficult to see how his unique exploit in opening up Tibet at last can receive further recognition save from the King a month hence. I understand that the still youthful officer and traveler need not be expected to display any trophies or even curiosities from the centre of Lamaism. His strict prohibition of looting was carefully respected even by the poorest camp follower. No doubt his officers paid large prices for the quaint and monstrous curios which the Lamas pressed on their attention. Their leader's solitary possession is two pieces of brocade, which, as reported at the time, he was compelled to accept as a parting remembrance. It is enough that he has brought home the treaty, duly signed at Lhasa, but yet to be ratified at Peking. His one curiosity is the table and the Union Jack on which the treaty was locally signed, and that will doubtless be reserved for the King himself. His arrival is contemporaneous with the news that the Dalai Lama has been interned by the Chinese Emperor in Urga, where Peking still exercises a protectorate over the Yellow Church which all mongols recognize.

Private Murphy's "Waterloo."

In the days when this country had a "frontier" every army post had to be in a constant state of readiness, for there was no telling when troops might be called out to suppress an Indian uprising or to rid the road of desperate highwaymen. Discipline, the Brooklyn Eagle says, was never relaxed, although the manner in which it was preserved sometimes savored of comedy.

Captain Troxell of the Seventeenth Infantry, an Irishman and a strict disciplinarian, had considerable trouble with certain members of his company who, being Hibernians from different counties, were disposed to quarrel overmuch among themselves.

Once when Captain Troxell was officer of the day the sergeant of the guard, a strapping Irishman, who himself disapproved these frequent fights as being subversive of discipline and disgraceful to the company, approached the captain with the customary salute and said:

"Officer of the day, sir, I have the honor to report that Private Murphy of your company, a prisoner in the post guard-house, struck at me with a pickax handle."

Captain Troxell returned the salute and merely said, "All right."

A few minutes later the sergeant of the guard presented himself again and, after saluting, said:

"Officer of the day, sir, I have the honor to report that Private Murphy, a prisoner in the post guard-house, struck at me again with a pickax handle."

Once more the captain returned the salute and said, "All right."

The sergeant of the guard stood at attention a moment, then deferentially said:

"But, sir, officer of the day, it is all right for a prisoner in the post guard-house to strike at the sergeant of the guard with a pickax handle?"

"It is," answered the captain, "if the sergeant of the guard is fool enough to let him."

Ten minutes later the sergeant returned and saluted.

"Officer of the day, sir," he said, in his gravest voice, "I have the honor to report that Private Murphy of your company, a prisoner in the post guard-house, desires to go to the hospital on sick report, sir."

"He That Loseth His Life."

The captain of the shipwrecked steamship Norge did not lose his presence of mind nor his rare and heroic unselfishness in the midst of the engulfing waves, even when a dishonorable safety offered. He was going down with the steamer, pinned between two rails of the bridge, says a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, with as calm an air as if sailing into a smooth harbor, when the play of the rushing water, far below the surface, released him. He rose to the surface, and swimming slowly about, came into close proximity to a life-boat.

"Better take me on board, boys," he quietly argued, when the men warned him off with threatening oars and harsh words that the boat was already filled. "You'll need me. Not a man among you knows how or where to go."

"It's the captain!" cried a member of the crew, and it was finally agreed that for the sake of his navigating knowledge the all but exhausted man should be taken on board. Then came the touch which proved the captain a true hero as well as a true man.

When he had risen to the surface, a sinking woman clutched him. He caught her and supported her. Now he prepared to assist her to climb into the boat.

"Not the woman! We're too low in the water already. We'll take you, but you only!" cried the fear-maddened occupants of the life-boat.

"Very well," came the quiet answer, "then I stay out, also. If this woman is to perish, so must I."

"He that loseth his life shall save it," came true in this instance. Because the captain's assistance was now so eagerly desired by the crew of the life-boat both he and the woman were drawn on board and saved.

Discouraging a Hen.

The propensity of some hens to sit, in season or out, on eggs, stones, door-knobs or anything that comes handy, is one of the most grievous afflictions of the poultry-keeper. In his interest is reprinted the description of a "sure cure" discovered by a correspondent of the Chicago Chronicle in Lesueur, Minnesota.

The cure consists of a cheap watch that ticks loudly and clearly, and is enclosed in a white egg-shaped case. When a hen manifests a desire to sit at the wrong time, the poultryman gently places under her this bogus egg, and the egg does the rest.

Cheerfully it ticks away. The hen soon begins to show signs of uneasiness. She stirs the noisy egg with her bill, thinking perhaps that it is already time for it to hatch, and the chicken in it wants to get out. She grows more and more nervous as the noise keeps on, and finally she jumps off the nest and runs round a while, to get cool.

Generally she returns to her self-imposed duty; but things get worse and worse with her. She wriggles about and cackles, ruffles her feathers and looks wild, until at last, with a frenzied squawk, she abandons the nest for good and all. The fever of incubation is broken up completely.

The Lesueur poultryman declares that he has never found a hen that could stand the strain of the conversational egg for more than three hours. In much less time than that, as a rule, the hen is ready to return to her legitimate business.

George Meredith on American Literature.

Mr. George Meredith, the novelist, has recently expressed some interesting views concerning American literature, a summary of which is presented in the current Harper's Weekly.

"Has America ever produced a great writer?" inquired the interviewer.

"No, not a great writer," was the answer; "but there you must emphasize 'great.' She has produced excellent writers, some of the best writers, but not great. . . . Some of the best literature in America. Take Emerson. Emerson is a grand fellow. . . . Lowell is excellent. Edgar Allan Poe is the best writer of short stories we have. Bret Harte is good. Henry James is admirable. . . . America is young, very young. . . . You must give her time. . . . Fifty years hence America will be the first nation in the world."
