Sporting Man at Church.

The religious editor of a certain paper published in New York State took a vacation last Sunday, and, as he had no one to leave in his place, he asked the sporting editor to attend church and report the sermon. Here is what he wrote, unblemished by the editorial pencil:

"The weather was perfect, and the grandstand and bleachers were packed. The Rev. Dr. — was in the box for the Christians, and he certainly had everything in the book.

"When he tackled New Jerusalem he used the slow ball artistically but when he warmed up in hades he had speed to burn and whipped them over like a shot.

"He had swell control and never lost sight of the plate for a minute, especially after it had been passed around.

"The choir did a good deal of rooting from the players' bench, and occasionally a voice from the bleachers yelled 'Amen!' Although it was an extra-inning game he never let up, and had the visitors properly backed up throughout, putting some of them to sleep.

"If he can only keep up the pace—the big league for 'his' next season."—Buffalo Times.

For all Children.

Baby's Own Tablets is a medicine good for all children, from the feeblest infant whose life seems to hang by a thread, to the sturdy boy whose digestive apparatus occasionally gets out of order. The Tablets instantly relieve and promptly cure all stomach and bowel troubles and all the minor ailments of little ones. Thousands of mothers have proved the truth of these statements, among them Mrs. Robt. Moncton, Deerwood, Man., who says: "Baby's Own Tablets have helped my baby more than anything I ever gave him. I can conscientiously recommend the Tablets to all mothers." We give you a solemn assurance that the Tablets do not contain one particle of opiate or harmful drug. They do good—they never can do harm, and all children take them as readily as candy. Sold by medicine dealers or sent post paid at 25 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

French-Canadians in New England.

The problem of the repatriation of the French-Canadian has long been of engrossing interest to Quebec. The church and the laity have joined hands in a movement which looks to settling a percentage of the New England factory-hands of French-Canadian birth on the unworked agricultural lands of Quebec. Mr. G. A. Gigault, the Deputy-Minister of Agriculture of the Province, has given the subject long and serious thought, and not without results.

In The Atlantic Monthly, Professor William Z. Ripley, who occupies the chair of Economics in Harvard University, has a luminous article on "Race Factors in Labor Unions." We Canadians are not greatly interested in the part which the Pole, the Czeck, the Finn, or the Slav plays in such organizations, but the finding of Professor Ripley as to the French-Canadian is of importance. He says:

"The French-Canadians who are flocking into New England in increasing numbers show little liking or aptitude for trade-union organization or discipline. This is partly due to their low standard of living making them content under conditions which would engender a strike among other peoples. But I am inclined to the belief that the main reason for their backwardness lies in the transient character for their employment. They are birds of passage to a considerable extent. It is estimated that from fifty to seventy thousand come and go from Canada to New England for employment in the cotton mills alone. In this respect they resemble the South Italians and the 'Blue-noses' who come down from Nova Scotia to work in competition with American carpenters. Most of these people, especially the French-Canadians, remain only as long as times are good. When the mills are shut down, as in the recent Lowell strike, they return to their farms again. Only when the French-Canadians have been long enough in the cities to become thoroughly Americanized do they respond to the demands of the trade-union leaders. The New England cotton mill operatives have never succeeded in building up any organization of importance. This is doubtless due to the general amicable relations which have subsisted between the employers and operatives; but it is also due in part to the large number of French-Canadians who dominate the situation."

The good-humor and willingness of the French-Canadian also act as a deterrent factor against strikes. There are French-Canadian unions, and strong ones at that, in Montreal, yet the labor situation there is not often troubled. The Professor also neglects to speak of one class of French-Canadian factory hand that has a large existence. It is composed of the men who go to Massachusetts or Connecticut to earn and save enough money to buy a Quebec farm. It may be objected that such sojourners "take money out of the country." But they earn the money, and there is many a farm in Quebec today which was paid for by such earnings, just as there are some men in the United States who have become rich by investments in Canadian mines and wood-pulp lands.

A Plague Which was Profitable.

Mr. A. F. Cahusac, The London Daily Chronicle's correspondent, writes from Tokio: Rats and soldiers do not seem to have much connection with each other, perhaps. But rats suggest plague, and plague and war are sometimes bracketed together as twin scourges. Among the measures the Japanese adopted for exterminating the plague was the extermination of rats, a reward of five sen (about one penny) being given for every rat brought to the police station. The rodents began to arrive in such large quantities that the police began to ask what was to be done with them. To their rescue came a modern Japanese Pied Piper, who said, "I will relieve you of your rats. I will send to the stations and remove all the bodies free and save you all trouble out of gratitude for and admiration of the way in which the government has grappled with this terrible scourge." The offer was received with gratitude, and the rats were duly collected. When the war broke out, the soldiers who were despatched to the bitterly cold northern regions wanted furs, which are expensive things, and they could not afford them. But presently some of the shops displayed waistcoats lined with a nice soft grey fur at a most tempting price, and the soldiers bought these up in large numbers, and went off to the front happy and warm. The contractor smiled as he conned his bank pass-book, remarking: "Rats have a nice strong skin which works up into a good fur, and they were all carefully disinfected; and I am happy to be able once more to render a little assistance to my beloved country."

I.

THE LOVE OF A MAN.

The foam on the crest of a billow.
The head on a brimming glass,
The South Wind's kiss and its whispering sigh,
The throb of the heart, the flash as an eye:
Man's love, and it's sure to pass.

II.

The hush of the waiting morning,
The night bird's tremulous call,
The voice that sobs from the yearning deep,
The soul awakened that may not sleep;
A love that endures through all.

"There isn't very much to eat," said the Esquimo hostess, as she handed a candle to each guest. "Just light refreshments."
