Stratton Harrison, violinist and vocalist, who are to entertain the music lovers on next Friday evening at the opera house are receiving warm words of praise and are meeting with unqualified success wherever they have been. We hope the weather will be favourable so that none shall be kept away. Everyone should hear them.

The Origin of the sword.

Professor E. G. Dexter of the University of Illinois was entertaining some students at his residence, when one of the young men spoke admiringly of a splendid sword that hung over the family fireplace. "Ah," said the professor, as he took down the weapon and brandished it impressively, "never shall I forget the day when I drew this trusty blade for the first time. He paused and smiled retrospectively. "And where did you draw it, sir?" asked one student much interested. "At a raffle," said Prof. Dexter as he hung it up again.

Looking for a Cinch.

Tommy: Are you and sister Ethel goin' to get married?

Mr. Stedily: Why, —r, what put such a question in your head, Tommy?

Tommy: Oh, nothin'; only Billy Daly wanted to bet me a nickle against a cent that the match'd never come off, and I'd like a little inside information.

The woollen Mills Case.

MR. EDITOR,—I trust it may be agreeable to you to permit me to answer through your columns an article published in your paper of last week concerning the Woollen Mills, signed by Carleton.

I wish to say in the first place, I object strongly to answering a communication from which the writers name is withheld for all men should be manly enough to allow their names to be published with their contributions, particularly when such communications contains charges and reflections which must necessarily injure the person or persons to whom they are directed unless refuted, dependant of course on the influence of the source from which it may have come, but as this article reflects directly upon myself, I feel obliged to answer it, though very reluctant about taking up any newspaper controversy.

Referring to the words of your correspondent "The talk referred to is only "bluff" a statement of this kind cannot be made truthfully by one acquainted with the facts, and to be made by another displays lamentable ignorance or a willful disposition to malign. The best people will not dare to thus traffic in matters so sacred to others, without being correctly informed, sufficient for me to say in this connection it is not "Bluff." Any statements made by us in connection with this matter are made knowing their full meaning and contain our definite purpose.

Your correspondent states further "There is a strong opinion that the company have not stuck very close to the terms under which the exemption was granted" making some unkind remark and going out of his way to emphasize this point. In this connection I would advise him to consult his scrapbook (if he has such a book) for minutes of city and county council meetings and see if he can produce a vestige of any agreement touching the matters to which he refers. I may say however, his search will be in vain for as a matter of fact Mr. Editor no agreement of any kind whatever was entered into, nor even proposed between the Woollen Mills Company and the town.

The Woollen Mills Company simply entered into the privileges granted to any company under the resolution passed by the town council, June 1892, viz., "That any company establishing a Woollen Mill in the town of Woodstock be exempted from taxation for a period of ten years." Which we must admit is very generous in its provisions.

Permit me to say here, though it may not be strictly in line with the matter in hand, that there was no agreement with the county either, in any form, bearing on the matter of which your correspondent speaks.

I think it a matter to be regretted that any man either in high or low public position in the town should so far forget the courtesies due to his fellow citizens to say nothing of the flagrant wrong committed, in writing an article such as I have referred to.

I again urge your correspondent to inform himself carefully before he undertakes to criticize others, for if he is a man connected with the business of the town and lacks information regarding other matters of public interest as he does regarding the matter in hand it is difficult to see how the duties can be well performed.

Any further correspondence concerning this matter will be answered by me only if signed by the writer.

Thanking you in anticipation of privilege asked,

I am yours very respectfully,

ANDREW MYLES.

April 18th, 1904.

H. E. Burt's New Store.

Howard E. Burt's new hardware store on Main Street next below the Royal Bank is one of the best appointed stores in town. In the front of the store are the shelves and drawers for lighter goods, while in the rear the heavier goods are carried. The store runs out behind the Bank to Connell Street, where Mr. Burt has practically another store with two good show windows and a good entrance. Here he will exhibit his stoves. Mr. Burt has the car warehouse down at the old station where he keeps Phosphate, Brick, Lime, Iron Pipe and other heavy lines and he also has his own warehouse on King Street where he carries a good line of stoves and carriages.

Mr. Burt is in a better position than ever to give the best satisfaction to his increasing list of customers.

Dark Secrets.

"Cupid lurks in all tunnels," said the romantic girl.

"Occurs to me it is Bacchus," responded the youth with the red cheeks.

"How can you say it is Bacchus?"
"Because more people hunt for flasks than they do for kisses."—From The Chicago News.

Mrs. Henry Moxon.

Mrs. Henry Moxon died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Little, April 9th, about noon. Last Christmas she was taken very ill and has been bed ridden ever since. Three years ago she had grippe from which she never fully recovered. The immediate cause of her death was cancer of the stomach. She did not suffer much pain until the last few days and even then did not tell those around her all her sufferings. She was very patient and considerate. Three years and six months ago her husband died and she did not seem to recover from the blow. Mrs. Moxon was 72 years, 11 months old.

She leaves seven children, four daughters and three sons. Of these two daughters and one son are in New Brunswick and the others are in California. Mrs. Moxon lived at Benton for many years.

The funeral service was held at the home of Mrs. Little with whom the deceased has resided since the death of her husband. The burial took place at Benton the following morning. Both services were conducted by the Rev. Z. L. Fash.

Mrs. Moxon is sincerely mourned by her children and friends. She was an excellent Christian woman.

John Arden Shea.

John Arden Shea died at his home in Grafton on Saturday afternoon of heart disease, at the age of 79 years. Though Mr. Shea had been slightly ill the day before, he felt better on Saturday and was out about his place and seemed to be as vigorous as usual. His death was a great shock to the community.

Mr. Shea was born in Grafton. He went to California in the early mining days but later came back to his old home where he has since resided.

He married Miss Barrows of the State of Maine, who survives him. There are also surviving on son, Greely, a merchant in Woodstock, and two daughters, Mrs. Sunder, wife of Major Sunder of the British Army, and Miss Ethel.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon. The service at the house was conducted by the Rev. F. Allison Currier, M. A., assisted by the Rev. W. B. Wigmore, B. A., and the Rev. Joseph Noble. The members of Woodstock Lodge of Masons, of which Mr. Shea was a member, attended the funeral in a body and conducted the exercises at the grave.

The pall bearers were H. P. Baird, Col. John D. Baird, Judson Shea and Frederick Sharp.

Mr. Shea was a most highly respected citizen and his bereaved family have the sincere sympathy of the community.

His Majesty's Cigars.

King Edward has reduced the art of smoking to its simplest terms. He usually smokes cigars of the choicest Cuban brand, and he generally makes use of four a day. The cigars used by the King are of a rather short, full-barrelled kind, of medium strength. They are usually smoked only about three parts through. Occasionally, when in the billiard room, the King prefers a pipe, and a pipe is usually used over the morning's correspondence.

Latterly, however, both pipes and cigars are much less in use than formerly. His Majesty's favorite method of using tobacco is in the form of cigarettes. He formerly affected a peculiar brand of Virginia tobacco, but since the Egyptian cigarette was first introduced to his notice by the Duke of Clarence, His Majesty has abandoned the purer American weed for the subtler aroma of the Latakia produced in the factories of Cairo.
