SEED TIME

The experienced farmer has learned that some grains require far different soil than others; some crops need different handling than others. He knows that a great deal depends upon right planting at the right time, and that the soil must be kept enriched. No use of complaining in summer about a mistake made in the spring. Decide before the seed is planted.

The best time to remedy wasting conditions in the human body is before the evil is too deep rooted. At the first evidence of loss of flesh Scott's Emulsion should be taken immediately. There is nothing that will repair wasted tissue more quickly or replace lost flesh more abundantly than Scott's Emulsion. It nourishes and builds up the body when ordinary foods absolutely fail.

We'll send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

How They Lost Their Home.

Through the gambling instinct. They let their insurance run out. They bought things they did not need because they were cheap.

They did not use good judgement or right proportion in their expenditures.

They subscribed for everything they could pay for on the installment plan.

Money enough went down in drink and up in smoke to have saved the home.

The father always intended to get his life insured, but died without doing so.

They did not realize how easy it is to get into debt and how hard it is to get out.

They tried to do what others expected of them rather than what they could afford.

They thought it small to insist on having an agreement or understanding put in writing.

They could not say "No" and could not afford to tell their friends, "I cannot afford it."

The sons thought they must "sow their wild oats" as well as other "fellows of their set."

The daughters thought it beneath them to work for a living, but were bound to dress well.

They drew their money out of the savings bank to put it into some "wild-cat" scheme and lost it.

They did not do business in a business way because they were dealing with relatives or friends.

They never formed the habit of putting in the savings bank money which they did not immediately need.

They did not know that giving full power of attorney to an agent or lawyer put their property at his mercy.

They put off payments on everything possible because it would be so much easier to pay to-morrow than to-day.

They signed important papers, without reading them or knowing their contents, just because they were asked to do so.

The mania to make an appearance beyond their means caused them to mortgage their property and ended in bankruptcy.

They feared that the people with whom they had dealings would think them suspicious if they asked them for a receipt for money.

They ran accounts at the stores instead of paying cash, did not realize how rapidly bills were running up, and never knew how they stood.

They entertained too expensively and a great deal more than they could afford because they wanted people to think they were in good circumstances.—Success.

Mean, Meaner, Meanest.

There were four of them in the smoking compartment of the car when the traveler from Chicago happened to say:
"That reminds me of a man out in my town who is so mean that he makes the members of his house write small hands in order to save ink."

"A friend o' my faather's, sub, wuz even wuz than thet," came promptly from the Baltimorean. "He stopped the clocks at night, sub, because o' the wear and tear on the works."

Then the Philadelphian: "Well, there's a good old Quaker out in Wayne who won't read the papers. 'Wears out his glasses,' says he."

All three looked inquiringly at the man from New York, but he merely smiled and rang for the waiter to take the orders.—Smart Set.

No Real Profit in it

The Monetary Times, in commenting on the withdrawal of the British naval forces from Halifax, offers these very sensible remarks:

"It is quite possible that the presence of the troops has not been always a good thing for Halifax. The influence of the land and naval forces socially has not been of the best. As a rule, they have set a pace for society which is unbecoming to a country such as ours; and have fostered ambitions among our young people to climb the social rather than the business or professional ladder. They have been responsible for a good deal of extravagance among our people which must have had its effect on our commercial progress; they have, to a certain extent, caused legitimate business—stigmatized as 'trade'—to be regarded with a feeling quite out of place in a democratic country. This has never spread so far in Halifax as it might have in some countries or cities; there has been too large a leaven of hard-headed common-sense and thrift in that city, particularly among the Scotch and Irish element; but that it has existed is undeniable. On the whole, as a Halifax man expressed it not long ago, 'our life without the troops will probably be saner, more wholesome, and more successful.'"

One Hundred Years Ago.

Here are a few facts which show how much more convenient life is to-day than in "the good old days" about which we hear.

Not until February of 1812 did the people of Kentucky know that Madison was elected President in the previous November.

In 1834 one of the leading railroads of the United States printed on its time-table: "The locomotive will leave the depot every day at ten o'clock if the weather is fair."

The first typewriter was received by the public with suspicion. It seemed subversive of existing conditions. A reporter who took one into a court-room first proved its real worth.

In England some centuries ago, if an ordinary workman, without permission, moved from one parish to another, in search of work or better wages, he was branded with a hot iron.

When Benjamin Franklin first thought of starting a newspaper in Philadelphia many of his friends advised against it, because there was a paper published in Boston. Some of them doubted that the country would be able to support two newspapers.

Comma And Death.

Value of the comma is shown by the following incident. An American firm recently sent an advertisement, which ran in this way to a leading American paper: "I am now able to report that I am completely cured, after having been at the gates of death (.) through having taken only five bottles of your medicine." In the process of passing through the press, the comma in parenthesis was dropped. Next day, when the vendor of the patent medicine read his advertisement, he almost tore his hair with utter vexation. He immediately went down to his solicitor, talked shop to the tune of a big fee for a considerable space of time, and finally made up his mind to sue at law the offending and insulting newspaper.—Advertising News, London.

A Prodigal's Return.

Dramatic scenes continue to be witnessed as the result of the religious revival in Wales. In a Glamorganshire town, says the London Chronicle, the pastor, in the course of an impressive address, appealed to all backsliders to return to the fold.

Sitting quietly in the gallery was a young man. Moved by the stirring appeal, he sprang to his feet, and begged to be re-admitted to the membership of the church. All eyes were turned to the suppliant, and the effect was startling when it was seen that the young man was the minister's own son.

Overpowered by his feelings, the father was unable to say a word, and he broke down with emotion. The organist struck up a well-known hymn, at the conclusion of which the minister, having mastered his feelings, welcomed his son's conversion with tears of joy.

"Don't give up, said Brother Williams to a discontented brother of his field. 'De worl' has left you, but you ain't all fergot. Satan is lonesome fer you!'—Atlanta Constitution.
