

MRS. BISHOP'S SUCCESS.

It's easy to make bad bread even though you use the very best flour.

The whole secret of good bread is not merely good flour.

The way it's made is most important.

This is why some people do not get such good results as others in their bread baking.

It is to quite an extent a question of method.

Mrs. F. B. Bishop, of Lawrencetown, N. S., made a batch of bread with "Royal Household" Flour. She made it according to directions and the bread was good.

She made a second, a third and many other batches, and a few days ago she wrote us that she found "Royal Household" Flour the best flour she had ever used.

This lady got good results because:

- 1st, She had the right flour.
- 2nd, She made her bread according to

"Royal Household" directions.

Had she failed in the latter her opinion of the flour might have been very different.

Both were essential to secure desirable results.

That Mrs. Bishop succeeded so well proves that others may do equally well and certainly those who have seen the best bread produced from "Royal Household" must admit that it is the finest bread in the world and worth going to some trouble to procure.

It is at least worth the trouble of getting "Royal Household" flour and making bread from it the "Royal Household" way.

The "Royal Household" way is described in a leaflet which will be sent you for the asking.
