

ROMANCE OF A RECLUSE.

The Death of a Wealthy Englishman Forfeiting His Estate to the Crown Reveals a Life Mystery.

One of the most pathetically romantic careers known is recalled by the news that letters of administration have been granted to the Crown of the estate of Captain George Lindsay Anthony Wilson who died at Folkstone worth something over £150,000.

The son of Sir John Wilson, who at one time commanded the forces in Ceylon, he seemed to have the world at his feet. But his brilliant career, says the London Leader was cut short by the disclosure of a dark secret.

Rich, handsome and a favorite, he was educated at Cambridge, became a captain in the Guards, and travelled across the world. He was in the best society, and in his young days often visited Buckingham Palace. In fact, an oil painting of a dog which Queen Victoria gave to him hung in the dining room at his Alexandra gardens house in Folkstone.

With the death of his father came the disclosure which altered his whole life. He learnt for the first time that he was illegitimate, and that the beautiful woman who lived with his father, and whom he had always known as his aunt, was his mother. The news was a terrible blow, and the favorite of royalty and society cut himself adrift from everybody and sought solace in seclusion. He threw up his commission in the Guards, and attended only by a few servants went to live on a small estate in Brentwood, which, with a huge fortune in consols and property, had been left to him by his father.

But he made no attempt to keep the place in order; horses and other animals roamed about at will, and the property was rapidly going to rack and ruin. Then, people thinking that his queer conduct amounted almost to madness, communicated with the Lord Chancellor, and presently the rich recluse found himself in Brentwood Asylum. His friends however, exerted themselves to such an extent that his immediate release was ordered.

Naturally, Mr. Wilson was angered at his treatment, and, but for the fact that an action would have given to the world the story of his birth he would have taken proceedings against the people who had brought about his incarceration.

As it was, the experience made Brentwood so objectionable that Wilson, leaving his horses, the carriages and other property to take care of themselves, moved to Folkstone. Taking the name of George Boreham, he first settled in Bowerie Square, his only attendants being his faithful housekeeper, Miss Mary Campbell, and a man servant. Here his life was more rigidly blank than ever. He sought no company, rarely went out, and only when night had fallen. The house and its owner were shrouded in mystery. Then came his death and the giving to the world of the recluse's secret.

Though his huge fortune of over £150,000 goes to the Crown, Wilson having died intestate, he made ample provision for the companion of his darkest days, in fact, he is known to have purchased a number of houses in Miss Campbell's name.

The granting of letters of administration to the Crown of the estates of father and son is the last act in his real life drama.

Protecting the Water-Supply.

The protection of the water-supply of an army during a campaign is an important means of reducing disease to the smallest possible figures. Where it is not possible to obtain water free from pollution, some means of sterilization must be employed, and one of the most recent methods is that devised by a British medical officer. He has found that if two grains of chlorine be added to 100 gallons of water, within five minutes all organisms of cholera, typhoid and dysentery are destroyed. In order to take away the taste and other effects of the chlorine 22 grains of powdered sodium sulphate are then added to the water, and double decomposition results, so that the water is rendered absolutely tasteless.

The practical method of applying this idea is to carry the chlorine in liquid form in iron flasks, and to allow the proper amount to flow into the water through a valve. While this system answers admirably for use on a large scale, yet there is another method suitable for employment by the individual soldier whereby he can sterilize water for himself. This consists of supplying him with tablets containing iodide and iodate of sodium, which, when dissolved in water, liberate free iodine. This substance is a most efficient germicide, and in five minutes is able to destroy all pathogenic organisms.

To deodorize or "kill" the iodide and iodate the water is made sodium sulphate tablet is added as before, and the water made drinkable. The reagents are used in small quantity as to have no effect on the digestive system, and the action is said to be as swift as it is rapid. The cylinders of chlorine, not to speak of the tablets, are extremely portable, and no difficulty whatsoever is to be experienced in making a practical trial of the system.—Harper's Weekly.

Existence is a pleasure and the greatest, but there is always something to worry you. It comes as regularly as sunrise.

Rest assured you must go through every trial that is peculiar to men of your organization.

Everyone loves power, even if they do not know what to do with it.

Very few people reach posterity. Posterity is a most limited assembly. As a general rule, nobody has money who ought to have it.

Next to knowing when to seize an opportunity the most important thing in life is to know when to forego an advantage.

Always have distinguished friends; never have fools for friends; they are of no use.

To be king of your company is a poor ambition; yet homage is homage and smoke is smoke, whether it comes out of the chimney of a palace or of a work-house.

To govern men you must either excel them in their accomplishments, or despise them.

To rule men we must be men. Our wisdom must be concealed under folly and our constancy under caprice.

Talk to women as much as you can. This is the way to gain fluency, because you need not care what you say, and had better not be sensible.

Religion is civilization, the highest; it is a reclamation of man from savageness by the Almighty.

The divine right of kings may have been a plea for feeble tyrants, but the divine right of government is the keystone of human progress.

The first great duty of a monarch is to know how to bow skilfully. A royal bow may often quell a rebellion and sometimes crush a conspiracy.

"What Are Piles?"

You May Ask.

AND WHY ARE THEY ALWAYS RELIEVED AND CURED BY THE USE OF

Dr. Chase's Ointment.

The itching, burning sensations of piles or hemorrhoids, the feelings of uneasiness and discomfort, and the loss of blood, are familiar to many who may not know the name or nature of their ailment.

Piles are small tumors, which form at the opening of the rectum, and are described as itching, bleeding or protruding, according to the symptom that is most prominent.

The cause of greatest suffering is the intense itching, which is an almost constant symptom, while the greatest danger arises from the loss of blood. You can scarcely imagine one in greater misery than the victim of a severe case of piles.

By reason of its remarkably soothing effect Dr. Chase's Ointment brings almost instant relief from the dreadful itching. It heals the ulcers, stops the loss of blood, and makes a thorough cure of this obstinate and loathsome disease.

The old idea of a surgical operation, with all the accompanying pain, expense and risk, as the only cure for piles, has given way before the extraordinary success of Dr. Chase's Ointment, which has demonstrated its power in thousands of cases where operations had failed.

Mr. James Hurley, Fockshaw, Gloucester, County, N. B., writes: "I cannot find words of praise to express my opinion of Dr. Chase's Ointment. For thirty years I was troubled with itching piles and tried all sorts of remedies none of which gave me more than a temporary relief. What other treatments have failed to do Dr. Chase's Ointment has done. It has positively cured me of my itching piles."

Do not make the mistake of dropping this treatment as soon as the itching stops. Make the cure lasting by persistent use. Dr. Chase's Ointment, 60 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmansons, Paton & Co., Toronto.

The Literary Jag.

"Did you ever get on a literary jag?" asked the man who reads. "You don't know what it means? Well, neither did I until today, so I'll tell you all about it. According to the account of a friend of mine who indulges in these spasms occasionally, a literary jag is about the most exciting and, without one of the most satisfying dissipations in which a person can indulge. The beauty of it all is that they have no permanent mental or physical after-effects. After the spree the normal man is satisfied to get down to a normal state and to take up his previous mode of life with renewed vigor and energy. This friend of mine, of whom I speak, is a great reader of books of the heavier sort, which, unhappily, are too little read at the present time. For six months at a time he will devote himself to ancient history. Then, maybe, he will take up Norwegian folk-lore or the synthetic philosophy of Herbert Spencer. Consequently I was somewhat surprised to see him trudging home with a bundle of nickel novels under his arm. They were about the worst lot you ever saw—worse than the Dead-Eye Dick or Nick Carter series of youthful memory.

"In heaven's name, what are you doing with those things?" I asked. He looked sheepish. "I'm going to a debauch," he said. "Finest thing to put you in good mental condition you ever saw! After you have pursued a solid course of reading for six months and feel mentally fagged out, just buy an awful of these things and read them. You will be amused at first, intoxicated in the second stage, and finally surfeited and nauseated at the windup. They act like whiskey. When you recover you can't bear to look at a dime novel, and the more solid the literary potations the better. It's a fine tonic for over-worked brains, but I would not recommend it to the extremely young. I hide these things from my kids just as I keep my whiskey bottle from their sight." As he spoke he had the unmistakable look in his eye which betokens the back-sliding man who has been on the water wagon.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Is your Coal Wasted or Used?

It is comparatively easy to build a range that will make a lot of heat, but it requires the exact science of Pandora range building to produce a range that will use all the heat in the coal without waste.

A common range may burn twice the coal that a Pandora will, and yet do only half the work. If you use a Pandora range you can be certain that your coal money is not wasted, but used.
