How to Hit Mail Order Houses.

The majority of retail dealers are not good salesmen and are untrained in up-to-date methods of distribution.

A retail dealer who is wide awake need never fear a mail order house. The sight of the goods on the shelf, the personal influence of the dealer-salesman is a thousand times stronger than the mailed circular—again if the retailer will spend a little money in advertising just as the mail order houses do, he will do so much more business and cause his trade to appreciate him so much more, that he can afford to laugh at competition.

It the retail dealer could see it plainly the mail order house instead of harming him is doing him good. In the first place it is waking him up—and again it is increasing desire for the very things the retailer handles. Not more than one circular in fifty sent out by a mail order house brings in business. The other forty-nine who receive them are taught to want the goods, and if the retailer knows his business he will get more orders out of the mail order house circulation in his section than the mail order house itself.—W. N. Aubuchon, in Judicious Advertising.

Get Your Bowels to Move.

Now see here a minute, my friend. You ought to know that you cannot cure pain in the head, or heartburn or shooting pains in the stomach with headache powders and liniments. That stuff you rub on doesn't remove the cause. You have got to get down where the trouble is. What you want to do is to get your bowels to work. Take three Huteh tonight. Take one after each meal. It takes out these pains by stopping the fermentation of food. It is easily taken and does not contain any injurious substances. It is a hundred times better than Elixirs, Sarsaparillas, iron and acid preparations. Don't lose time fooling with such things, but start using Huteh as quickly as you can. It's a doctor for ten cents.

No Rise in Rent.

"Mrs. Jones," said the landlord of a little house in a mean street of a suburbia, as he called for the rent the other morning. "I have come to tell you that—that—"

"That you are going to raise the rent two shillings a week," she interrupted.

"Well, y-e-s. Rents are rising in this neighbourhood you know."

"Well, we shan't pay it."

"No, I suppose not; and you'll shift next Saturday."

"Yes; and meanwhile you can put a 'To Let' card in the window. I shall only be too happy to show people over."

"Indeed; but you are very kind."

"Oh! no, I ain't. Our cat died this morning, and I'll put her body into a box in the cellar and tell everybody we are going to move on account of the drains."

"Eh! What?"

"And, if one cat isn't enough, I'll get another, and also add a decayed codfish."

"Madam, do you like the house?"

"Fairly well."

"And is the present rent satisfactory?"

"Perfectly so."

"Then stay on. I prefer to keep a good tenant, even if I don't get quite so much rent. Good-day, madam, and, if you want any repairs done, let me know."

WOODSTOCK, N. B., NOV. 1, 1905.

"If forty-seven janitors for forty-seven days Should scrub the Life Insurance Graft along the mystic maze, How many things would happen in how many different ways?"

"If forty kalsominers with a thousand tins of white Should work on the Insurance Dodge, employed both day and night, How long would it require, think you, to make the thing look right?"

"If ninety dozen bookkeepers attempted to inscribe The fakes and facts and fancies of the Equitable tribe, How many years would it require to make the figures jibe?"

"If twenty thousand ministers should pray on bended knee For all the fake Directors who have done for you and me—"

(But the father answered never a word, for a frozen corpse was he.)

A Great Satisfaction.

"You owe me five hundred dollars." It was a gay scene at the house of Mrs. Pincher-Puncher. The guests were just about to disband as the young man, who had been playing bridge all evening, with blanched face gazed at his hostess.

"Five hundred dollars," he repeated. "Why, I thought it was a friendly game of bridge. I didn't know it was for money."

"That is your own fault, I'll trouble you for a check, please."

The guest hesitated. Apparently he was being held up. And yet he realized Mrs. Pincher-Puncher's power in the social world. She could ruin him. He saw there was nothing else to do.

He drew a check-book from his pocket, and accompanying her into the library, wrote out a check for the correct amount and passed it over.

The next day the young man sat in the humble dwelling of one of the most skillful burglars in the country with a letter of introduction from a politician.

"What can I do for you, sir?" said the burglar.

"A simple thing. Last night I was held up and robbed of five hundred dollars by Mrs. Pincher-Puncher, one of our well-known society women. I want you to call there this evening, if possible, and get my money back. Here's a plan of the house, and you can have all you make less five hundred."

Twenty-four hours later the burglar's card was sent up.

"Well, what luck?"

"Here is your five hundred. And five hundred more."

The young man smiled. "You must have made a good thing out of it," he said, "when you are willing to pay me twice as much as I wanted."

"Yes, sir. But it wasn't so much the money I made as the satisfaction."

"What do you mean?"

The burglar smiled.

"You see, it's this way," he said, "I got there beforehand and looked in through the window. My conscience used to trouble me some. I used to think I was wicked. But now that I've seen the operations of some of those smart people, it's worth almost any amount of money to me to know that I am guileless and good!"—N. Y. Life.

Like Some Other "Booze"

A Japanese verse-maker thus breaks into the praise of the native liquor, sake:

When you drink sake

You feel like the springtime,

And the loud voices of impatient creditors

On the outside

Sound like the voices of nightingales

Singing most sweetly.

—New York Times.

In the year ending 30th June last the taxpayers of Canada contributed over a million dollars in the form of subsidies to owners of various steam-ship lines plying to and from Canadian ports. In the same year $2, 224,000 was drawn from the same source to pay bounties to iron and steel manufacturers and the owners of other favored industries. Next to being president of a New York life insurance company, about the best thing going is to be interested in a bounty-fed industry in Canada.

Good tea must be grown under proper conditions

LOW, damp or swampy lands in a warm, humid climate produce tea of rank, rapid growth, coarse in texture, woody fibred, rudely flavored—makes a cup heavy, murky in color, rough-tasting—it is poor tea.

But the Indian and Ceylon teas used to make the Red Rose brand are grown on the high lands of India and the mountain sides of Ceylon.

These teas are grown in clear dry sunshine, they mature slowly, the leaves of the Ceylon tea, are tender, delicate, finely flavored, but not strong.

The Indian teas thus grown are full bodied, richly flavored, smooth in texture, strong.

Such Indian and Ceylon teas combined in Red Rose Tea produce a cup of a rich rosy brown, strong and smooth—all the richness and strength of Indian, all the delicacy and fragrance of Ceylon teas—that "rich, fruity flavor" which belongs alone to Red Tea—more qualities of tea excellence than any Indian or brand of Ceylon alone can possess.

Red Rose Tea is good Tea

THE FLEURY PLOW

There never has been a plow yet manufactured that has given the farmer the satisfaction that the Fleury has. Farmers who have bought other makes of plows have discarded them and replaced them with the Fleury. One of the greatest points about the Fleury is the lightness of the draught. A ten hundred pound team can haul a Fleury Plow more easily than a twelve hundred pound team can haul any other plow.

These plows can be bought direct from our store at Woodstock or at our branch stores at Centreville and Hartland.
