

To Enliven the Liver

KIDNEYS AND BOWELS—TO PREVENT DISEASE BY CLEANSING THE SYSTEM—YOU MUST USE

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

There's a need in every home of a medicine that will promptly cure biliousness, kidney derangements and constipation.

A medicine that by cleansing the filtering and excretory organs will remove all poisonous waste matter, and by so doing prevent fevers, colds and such deadly diseases as dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease.

No medicine satisfies this need so well as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

This is no idle boast, but an absolute fact that is backed up by the testimony of a hundred thousand homes.

The reputation of Dr. A. W. Chase as author and physician is the guarantee which first made this great medicine popular.

Now it stands on its record of cures—a record which has seldom, if ever, been paralleled in the history of medicine.

As a treatment for backaches, headaches, indigestion, aching limbs, liver derangements, kidney disorders and constipation, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are prompt, thorough and effective.

Once their merit is tested they are kept in the house and relied on in cases of emergency. By keeping the liver active and the bowels open they positively prevent serious disease.

MR. Wm. A. McDougall, police court clerk, Moncton, N. B., states:—"As a remedy for lame back, pains in the small of the back and all forms of kidney and liver trouble, I consider Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills ahead of all treatments. I have used these pills myself for liver derangements and always found them most satisfactory in relieving the trouble at once."

"I have also heard a number of people praise this medicine and have no hesitation whatever in recommending it to anyone affected with any of the above ailments. We always keep a box of these pills in the house in case of sickness."

One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson Bates & Co., Toronto. Dr. Chase's Backache Plaster promptly eradicates pain and may be used on any part of the body.

MAN VS. WOMAN RE POWERS OF OBSERVATION.

Jones and His Wife Have a Difference of Opinion.

(Philadelphia Telegraph.)

"That's just like a woman, Mary! That's just like a woman!" remarked Pa Jones, with an air of superiority, as he glanced up from the newspaper he was reading. "I don't wonder that the graveyards are so full of females! I don't wonder that heaven is—"

"What is just like a woman, Mr. Jones?" interrupted Ma with a caustic vein in her sweet voice. "What are you talking about?"

"What is the cause of your grouch this time?"

"Butting into locomotives, madame! Butting into locomotives!" rejoined Pa, with considerable emotion. "Here is a story about a woman who tried to walk all over one and got mixed up in a head-on collision! Still it is no more than you can expect! You women folks never look where you are going!"

"You don't see anything! You just sail in with your eye shut and never see a thing two feet ahead of your nose! You are—"

"Is that so, Mr. Jones?" was the scornful response of Ma. "Well, don't you really think that a woman can see quite as much as a man?" Don't you—"

"Well, I should say not, madam! I should say not!" was the only answer of Pa, as he bestowed a condescending glare on his little Mary. "They haven't the same keen sense of perception! They are not of the same observing nature! They don't care to devote time to the study of minor details! They permit the little but important things to escape their notice! Do you think for one moment that a man would have omitted to see that locomotive? Do you think that a man would gloss over an essential detail like that? Not on your life, sweetheart! Not on your life! A woman, on the other hand, overlooks everything! She would walk along a railroad track all day and never notice what makes the steel trust so happy! She would take lobster salad and champagne on a 310 clerk and never know what causes the pain in his face! She would—"

"O, forget it, you sweet old heathen! For get it!" exclaimed Ma, with evident annoyance. "Your egotistical talk makes me tired! You have done nothing but boast for twenty years, and the older you grow the more garrulous you get!"

With this Ma picked up little Fido and dashed from the room, leaving the old man to think it over in peaceful solitude.

"Mary," said Pa Jones, when he returned alone the next evening, "I was invited around to see Parker's new house this afternoon. They have just moved in, and—"

"Oh, Henry!" was the eager exclamation of Ma. "How is the place furnished? Have they got carpet on the floor or a rug? Is the carpet body brushed or axminster? Have they got a new piano? Mrs. Parker said they were going to get a baby grand! I'll bet it is that old brass band of theirs done over! What make is it? What kind of paper have they got on the wall? Is it anything like ours? Don't you think that ours is the prettiest? What kind of—"

"I didn't notice the carpet, Mary," broke in Pa, "and as for—"

"You surely noticed the windows, Henry?" rejoined Ma, with a questioning glance at Pa. "What kind of lace curtains did they have? Were they new? Did they look like the old ones they used to have? Were they ruffled renaissance or swiss tambour? Were they clumsy lace or savvy? How did she have them hung? Were they looped back or were they—"

"To tell the truth, Mary," replied Pa, "I didn't notice just how."

"O, dear me!" was the impatient rejoinder of Ma. "What did you notice? Did they get that new sideboard that Mrs. Parker was talking about? I'll bet it isn't as good as mine! Is it walnut or quartered oak? I thought Mrs. Parker was bluffing when she was talking mahogany! Has it a French plate mirror? How many shelves are there? Has it got goose-neck posts and carved claw feet? What kind of a china closet did they get? Is it one of those with bent glass doors and sides and rub polished? Have they got rope portieres, or—"

"Holy smoke, woman!" interposed Pa, with a glacial glance at Ma. "I don't know—"

"Hen Jones," ejaculated Ma, "do you mean to tell me that you walked all over the house and didn't see anything? What kind of a rug did they have in the library? Was it oriental design? Did it have the medallion effect? Have they got Mission furniture in the room? What does the bookcase look like? Do you think that it cost more than ours? Do you see the bedrooms? How were they furnished? Was it birdseye maple or golden oak? Did you see any brass beds? Mrs. Parker said they were going to get at least three and perhaps four! She talks through her hat! Did you notice the hall rack? What kind of chiffoniers—"

"For mercy's sake, woman!" interrupted Pa, "cut it out! Break it off! I didn't see any chiffoniers! I wasn't introduced to the hall rack! I didn't notice the golden oak, the birdseye maple or any other potted plants! Do you think for one moment that I can recall—"

"Is that so, Mr. Jones?" was the scornful interjection of Ma. "Well, don't you ever again start that cackle of yours about the superiority of man! Don't you ever tell me—"

"What's that, madam? What's that, angel wife?" was the shoutful rejoinder of Pa. "What are you talking about? What are you driving at? What do you mean by that insinuating remark? I want you to distinctly understand that—"

"Shut up, you old freak!" was the stinging response of Ma. "You haven't any argument! Any luncheon who goes through a house without seeing a single thing in it hasn't any license to come bawling to me about man being more observing than woman, and don't you forget it!"

"Bow wow," said little Fido.

Other words were spoken. Other sweet things were said, but poor old Pa Jones was not in the running at any stage of the game.

Her Little Mistake.

(From the Chicago Record-Herald.)

"Excuse me, madam," he said, "but—ah you remember, in the restaurant after the theatre the other night you were kind enough to notice me. I hope I am not mistaken in supposing that your interest was—ah—not altogether—"

"Oh, no, not at all. I remember now. I thought for a moment that you were the coachman my husband discharged a few weeks ago for trying to make love to the cook, and I wondered how you could afford to eat in such an expensive place."
