WEIRD REVIVAL SCENES.

Thousands of People Walling and Shrieking for Mercy.

Thrilling scenes of religious fervor and frenzied excitement occurred at Evan Roberts' open-air mission meeting at Holyhead. There was a wild emotional outburst unprecedented in the eventful history of the Welsh revival movement.

Between 10,000 and 12,000 people were present, and the meeting proceeded for three hours without any manifestation of feeling. For a long time Evan Roberts remained in silence, while the crowd evinced no warmth.

At length Evan Roberts jumped up, crying "Where are you, ye professing Christians? Why don't you pray? I can do nothing. I leave Holyhead with a quiet conscience, but a wounded heart and spirit."

Then he broke into loud weeping and wailing. "Oh! Lord, bend these people."

The effect upon the gathering was electrical. A wave of emotion swept over the throng, thousands wailing and shrieking aloud for mercy. At last three or four thousand people were loudly praying at the same time. Tears were pouring down the cheeks of many.

Suddenly Evan Roberts underwent terrible convulsions and fell full length on the rostrum, weeping bitterly and crying out in agonized tones, "Bend them, bend them, Lord."

Those who have followed these services for months say that nothing like such a scene has been witnessed before. Men rolled on the ground and women fainted.

Then Evan Roberts jumped up with a laughing face, and, lifting his arms, waved them, shouting, "Thank God, we can now sing and rejoice. The victory is won."

The people responding leaped to their feet, frantically waving arms and shouting, "Glory, hallelujah! the victory is won."

Eyes glistened with tears, and there were hundreds with upturned, radiant faces fixed on the clouds above as tho expecting to see a vision.

Triumphant singing broke out, in which the whole crowd joined, Evan Roberts laughing while the crowd sang, shouting and cheered.

"The devil is conquered," cried Evan Roberts. "See him fleeing. Pursue him, O ye army of the Lord. Keep him fleeing from you."

Evan Roberts' face was radiant, and the ministers on the platform were pale with emotion. Large numbers of converts came forward.—Toronto Sunday World.

A Personal Application.

When one of the large benefactors of Harvard College Library was a business man in Lawrence, a customer of his firm contracted a debt which ran along for a year or more without any signs of settlement. Several letters, says the Boston Herald, failed to bring about liquidation.

One day, while glancing over the religious notices in a local paper, Harvard's benefactor saw something which gave him an inspiration and he went to his desk and wrote the following note to the debtor:

"Mr.— My Dear Sir. I see in the local press that you are to deliver an address on Friday evening before the Y. M. C. A., on 'The Sinner's Balanced Account.' I enclose yours, as yet unbalanced, and trust that I may have the pleasure of attending your lecture. Yours truly."

A check came by next mail.

Mr. Noble's Promise Given.

In the early stages of his ministry, the Rev. Mr. Noble preached for some time in a village in Maine. One day a committee called upon him to settle with him for his services, and after stammering a while signified to him that his further services were not desired.

"What does this mean, gentlemen?" asked the parson.

"Why," replied the spokesman, with some hesitation, "the people have got the impression that you are inclining to universal salvation."

"Gentlemen," answered Mr. Noble, "I never have preached that doctrine; but if I ever should I promise to make the people of this town an exception.—[Boston Herald.

The Arrangement of Flowers.

(Harper's Bazar.)

A fatal mistake is that of attempting to mix different kinds of flowers in one composition. It is not only not advisable to mix them in the same vase, but even in the same room, if the full color effect is to be obtained. Once in a while an exception may be made in the case of field flowers that grow together in masses, like goldenrod and asters, buttercups and daisies, or goldenrod and cardinal-flower, but generally these effects are more appropriate for the porch than for the house. An observation of their methods of growth gives one the needed indication of such a possibility. Garden flowers almost never combine well. Each flower has its own individuality, its own spirit and atmosphere, as well as its own color, so that even although the growth may be similar and they may be boon companions out-of-doors, it is safer to keep them apart where art and decoration are to become the mistresses of nature.

Was too Old for That.

A young lawyer whose love of flowers and all things green and growing compelled him to establish his home in one of the suburban towns of New York invited his old chum, Brown, also of the bar, to spend Sunday on the farm, says the New York Sun.

Brown was received with all appropriate honors, and all the attractions were duly displayed to his polite but not overkeen gaze, for he was somewhat deficient in that primal passion for a garden which has come down through the generations from Adam.

At each meal he listened courteously to eulogies of "our own make" viands. He bore patiently "our own milk, lettuce from that frame you saw, peas off the vine in the back lot," and so on. But at last it got to this:

"Harry, I can recommend this chicken especially. I raised it myself."

Then the worm turned.—after the first mouthful of chicken,—and with a sad smile remarked:

"No, Will, I can't believe that. You've been here a little over two years."

The Red Rose Flavor and Strength

NO Ceylon tea nor Indian tea alone can have the "rich fruity flavor" of Red Rose Tea, because neither variety in itself possesses all the qualities of strength, richness, delicacy, and fragrance. Each has its own peculiar qualities, but each has its weaknesses.

By combining the two in the Red Rose proportions, I produce a tea with the "rich fruity flavor" and strength of Red Rose Tea, a flavor and strength found in no brand of Ceylon alone.

What he was Paid For.

"What do you make a week?" asked a magistrate before whom an Italian organ-grinder appeared, charging a fellow musician with breaking his instrument.

"Twenty-five dollars," was the answer.

"What?" exclaimed the magistrate, "twenty-five dollars a week for grinding an organ?"

"No, sare; not for grind; for shut up and go away."—Harper's Weekly.

She Knew That Dark Man.

Flora: "You see that tall, dark fellow standing watching us? How would you like, if you were a man, to have such a magnificent flowing moustache on your upper lip?"

Maude: "Well, pet, although I'm only a woman, I've already had that magnificent flowing moustache on my upper lip."—Toronto Sunday World.

A Man of Experience.

Two breezy Westerners who visited Wall Street in search of funds for mine development, says the New Orleans States, were introduced to a perspicacious financier.

"Suspicious old chap, isn't he?" remarked one, when they had left him.

"I didn't notice. How is that?"

"Didn't you see how he counted his fingers after I had shaken hands with him?"

Professional Advice.

The new doctor had been called in to see a lady with a swollen jaw.

"Does it hurt you to talk?" asked the pill dispenser.

"Yes," she replied.

"Then don't," said the M. D. "Two dollars, please."

Why She Hesitated.

Maud: Were you not embarrassed when young Dr. Jones asked for your hand?

Ethel: Dear me, yes. I hardly knew whether he wanted to take me or my pulse.
