— There is only one cure for it. "PSYCHINE" is the greatest remedy in the world for all forms of pulmonary trouble. Scores of people in Canada attest this fact. "PSYCHINE" stands without a rival as a permanent and absolute cure for Consumption and lung diseases. It reaches the sore spots, heals the decayed tissue, destroys the tubercle germs, creates rich blood, tones up the whole system, and cleanses from all impurities.

NEW DRESS SUIT.

Ardley Decides to Get One for Bob's Wedding.

(Chicago News.)

"Really, Fred, you should have a new dress suit for Bob's wedding," said Mrs. Ardley. "As Bob's best man, you'll be almost as conspicuous as if you were the bridegroom."

"Which is about as conspicuous as a violet by a mossy stone. I remember what Jenkins said to me at our wedding reception, Maud. After he had shaken hands with you he looked at me with the greatest surprise and exclaimed, 'Why, hello! You here! I didn't see you at the church.'"

"Just like Phil Jenkins. He has the queerest ideas of a joke. But, Fred, you must have a new dress suit. Your old one is shabby. It was so nice of your brother Bob to ask you to be his best man, instead of any of the bachelor friends, and I want you to do him credit."

"Bob would think it a good deal nicer of me if I spent that much more on a wedding present instead of investing in new togs."

"Why, that silver coffee urn is a beautiful present. Bob can't expect anything handsomer than that."

"Bob doesn't expect anything, but he won't mind touching me for some of his wedding journey expenses if he happens to run short, so I don't feel like tying up my surplus money in a dress suit," remarked Ardley with an air of finality.

But two days later he made a call at his tailor's. He usually accepts Mrs. Ardley's suggestions and he nearly always admits the wisdom of them. When the dress suit came home he was very much pleased with it.

"I believe you were right, Maud," he said generously. "My old suit was rather out of date. Bob is the last one of us to marry and I'll feel better to be rigged out in good shape for the youngster's wedding."

Mrs. Ardley agreed with him, saying incidentally that she too, as a member of the family, ought to be well dressed at the wedding. Ardley presently found himself urging her to get a pale green chiffon satin costume that she had seen in one of the shops, marked down to a price that exceeded only by a few dollars the cost of his dress suit.

"Weddings, especially family ones, are pretty expensive affairs," he said to himself as he ruminated on the bills that would soon be coming in, "but Bob is a fine fellow and I want to see him through all right."

When the great night came Mrs. Ardley was nearly dressed for the event before Ardley had finished his after-dinner cigar. He looked at his watch when she called him the third time and suddenly realized that he must hurry.

"I can't find my evening clothes," he said with irritation a few minutes later "I thought you said you laid them on the guestroom bed."

"I did. They are right there in plain sight. At least they are on the couch."

Ardley rushed into the guestroom and in a moment returned carrying a suit with him.

"They were here, weren't they?" said Mrs. Ardley, smiling in a superior way.

"Why, no, Maud, these are my old ones. Where is my new suit?"

"Oh, Fred, what have I done?" gasped Mrs. Ardley.

"I don't know, but I wish you'd help me; it's getting late."

"Fred, you'll have to wear that old suit. Your other one is—gone."

"Gone? Gone where?"

"Oh, I'm so sorry. Whenever I try to do a good deed things turn out wrong. I know you'll be angry, but old Sarah, who has done our washing ever since we began housekeeping and been so honest and faithful—"

"What about her?"

WOODSTOCK, N. B., AUGUST 9, 1905.

"Well, she came here last Friday and told me how her husband, Mike, had died suddenly and she felt so bad because she didn't have anything decent to bury him in, that I gave her your old dress suit. At least I thought it was your old one. It seemed so selfish for us to have two, when she didn't have a fit rag, as she said, to put on her poor dead husband. I just thought, 'Suppose it had been Fred.'"

"I should have thought myself pretty lucky to be laid away in a brand new $70 dress suit," said Ardley as he violently brushed his old one.

While at the wedding supper, the groom, leaning over, said in a confidential aside to his best man: "Maud told me that you were talking of getting a new dress suit for tonight, but I'm glad you didn't go to the expense, old man. The fact is, I'm afraid I'll have to ask you for a hundred or so to see me through."

Weaver, Ring-Smasher.

Every newspaper reader has become fully acquainted with the facts in the remarkable fight that is now being waged between the Republican machine in Philadelphia and the mayor it elected. By this fight John Weaver has been elevated by the newspapers to a pedestal next to Governor Joseph W. Folk of Missouri. Mr. Weaver was born in England, and started at the bottom when he came to America as a boy. The New York Tribune gives this sketch of his life:

"How he managed to keep himself in those early days of struggling only John Weaver knows, and he will not say a word about it. He first blossomed into the view of Philadelphia when he became the chum of his present brother-in-law, then a fellow clerk in the Wanamaker store.

"This young man, Jennings by name, was a stenographer. Stenographers in those days commanded what now seems like big money. The friendship between Jennings and young Weaver ripened to the point where Weaver was invited to the house of Jennings' parents. The Jennings family being an English one the lonely boy from Kidderminster was welcomed.

"The mother of young Jennings had by this time come to regard Weaver almost with the same affection she felt toward her own children. It was suggested that John Weaver be taken into the family. Jennings, senior, objected, on the ground that his wife was already overburdened with her own cares. A room was obtained, however, from a friend of the family, a woman, like Weaver, from Kidderminster.

"John went to his new home, but the prospective foster mother had failed to provide the extra bed required and John sought refuge for the night at the Jennings home. He slept with his chum that night, and somehow or other he remained in those quarters until all talk of his going had ceased. Nor did he leave the Jennings home until years after, when he hurried from the front door amid a shower of rice and old shoes, bearing on his arm his bride, the sister of his chum.

"It was work, work, work with John Weaver. He studied law, he plodded along at the office, earning golden opinions from his employers, he strove and saved and pushing his way up until the stepping-stone to the mayoralty, the office of district attorney, was reached. Now he is talked of for Governor of the State, and his present popularity is wide enough for any goal.

"Every Sunday John Weaver teaches Sunday school in the Tioga Baptist church. He will never talk business on Sunday. Reporters have ceased to bother him on this day, for they know his lips are sealed, no matter how urgent the demand. He is pious, but not ascetic. The mayor loves a good dinner and a good cigar. He owns a gasoline boat roomy enough to accommodate twenty persons, and is commodore of the Seaside Park Yacht Club. He is an enthusiastic motorist, and has recently essayed to learn to ride a horse. He drives a spanking team which was presented to him by an unknown admirer. He lives with his wife and only son, Roy, in a fine house at Overbrook, a suburb of Philadelphia."

STEADILY ADVERTISED.

A Good Range, Given Proper Publicity, Finds A Big Sale.

McCLARY'S "PANDORA" A HOUSEHOLD WORD IN ALL CANADA.

The McClary Manufacturing Co., of London, Ont., start their fall advertising in this issue, and are again specializing on their Pandora Range. The Pandora is practically a new range, having been placed on the market about three years ago. During that time its makers have advertised in the best weekly papers to a very large extent, with the result that the Pandora is well known from one end of Canada to the other. The advertising, of course, has been backed up by a high-class, modern article. The present series of ads. explain a few of the leading virtues of the Pandora range, and doubtless every woman wanting a good stove will examine this famous range before buying.

THE INCREASE OF THE INDEMNITIES.

The Toronto World publishes the following in a dispatch from Ottawa relative to the action of parliament in voting an increase in the indemnities of M. P.'s and the salaries of judges. The remarks are probably the product of the caustic pen of the World's Editor, the great Billy McLean.

"Sir Wilfred Laurier's $1000 increase in indemnity and $4000 increase in salary, $5000 in all, and a pension of $6000 a year for life on retirement. Pretty good for Sir Wilfred. Nobody denies his claim for increase in salary and a modest pension.

R. L. Borden, leader of the opposition, $1000 increased indemnity and $7000 additional as recognized leader of the opposition, $9500 in year in all.

Messrs. Fielding and Fitzpatrick, each a pension of $3500 on retiring and $200 a year added to the judgeship that Mr. Fitzpatrick is said to be going to. Sam Barker, as representing the Tupper family, securing $4000 for the old gentleman and $3500 a year for the young Sir Charles, $7500 a year for the Tupper.

Judged by his excellent health, the longevity of the grandfather, and the continued soundness of the baronet, young Charley, will probably live to draw his $3500 a year for forty years, or at least about $150,00 in all. So Mr. Barker did well for the Tupper and for Borden, who was the Tupper nominee for the succession after the defeat of Sir Charles.

Next come Mr. Foster and Mr. Haggart with $3500 a year pensions and $2500 indemnities; $6000 a year each.

So that the men who conferred did remarkably well for themselves; they also incidentally looked after the members, the judges and a few other ministers. Sifton, costing $6000 a year, and the same provision for Sir Richard Cartwright and Hon. R. W. Scott, who are to retire in a few weeks. Even Sir Mackenzie Bowell is to get $6500 a year.

Outside of Sir Wilfred's increase of $4000, every one of these votes is scandalous. No retiring allowance above $1500 or $2000 at most should be recognized in this country. Two thousand dollars a year would have kept the wolf from the door of any retired minister of the crown. But giving men like Costigan, Haggart, Foster, Sifton, Carling and Bowell $6000 or $6500 a year for life is scandalous. The seasonal indemnity should have been deducted. It is scandalous to provide $4000 a year for Sir Charles Tupper, $3500 for Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, Sir Adolphe Caron, Sir Hector Langevin and Messrs Blair and Tarte. Two thousand a year while they draw no other government pay would have been handsome treatment."
