

Great Tonic

"PSYCHINE" is a wonderful tonic. It contains medicinal elements not found in any of the patent medicines. "PSYCHINE" is a regular practicing physician's formula. A tonic for weak people, for men of business worries, for the tired mother, the pale, languid girl. Young girls just budding into womanhood; elderly people who feel that weakness due to old age find it a remedy they cannot do without. It restores vitality, creates rich, new blood, removes all impurities, strengthens the nerves. If you need a trial ask druggist for "PSYCHINE."

The Health Fad.

"Trade's been sort of slack the past few weeks," said the hardware merchant as the "regular sitter" made his appearance, "and I've been amusing myself by figuring up what I ought to do to reduce my flesh, straighten my back and be perfectly well physically and sound mentally and happy generally. In the morning I drink no water. I eat fruit and a light cereal, and move my arms briskly. I also drink two quarts of water to cleanse the system, eat a hearty breakfast and let my arms hang limp at my sides. At noon, luncheon consists of a clear soup, rare meat without fat, no vegetables and a wineglass of wine and water, and it likewise consists of any kind of meat, as many vegetables as I fancy and two bottles of beer. For dinner I take a walk, one vegetable and one small portion of meat with no liquid, according to one doctor, and according to another authority I cut out the walk and take six courses. Going to bed I sleep with my head low on a single pillow, and I sleep with it high, propped up with several pillows to relax the muscles and take the strain off the neck. I close the windows to keep out the night air, and after that I open them and remove the side of the house to let it in. This giving advice with a view to building up and preserving the constitution has got to be a bad in most of the newspapers and all the magazines, and I know it must be fool advice because it is contradictory. Now I couldn't do all those things; and if I could do them and did do them I couldn't keep store because I wouldn't have time. Seeing that I have been tolerably comfortable for a good spell of sixty-two years, I've no notion of doing any of them."

Life Would Have More Happiness

IF THE LIVER WERE KEPT ACTIVE BY THE USE OF

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Most people realize that, if they could only avoid the sufferings of indigestion and keep the bowels regular and active life would have for them much more of comfort and happiness.

We believe that these results are best accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and let us tell you why:

It is the liver which, by filtering bile from the blood and passing it into the intestines, ensures good digestion and the natural, healthful action of the bowels. Keep the liver active, and you are sure of the proper working of the digestive and excretory systems.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have a direct and specific action on the liver. By invigorating this great filtering organ they guarantee the collection of bile from the blood, where it is poison, and the passing of it to the intestines, where it is necessary for digestion and a proper action of the bowels.

It is not as a mere relief from indigestion and constipation that Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are recommended, but as a thorough and lasting cure. Put them to the test. The dose is one pill at bed time as often as is necessary to keep the bowels regular.

Mrs. James W. Belyea, Belyea's Cove, Queens Co., N. B., writes:—"We have kept Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house as a family medicine for years and find them the most satisfactory of any remedy we can get. I can personally recommend them to any one suffering from kidney and liver derangements and stomach troubles."

A Hopeful Man.
Mrs. Nabelack's daughter's husband, Henry Pussett, is an optimist of the most cheerful description. Mrs. Nabelack resents this, naturally. "For what is the use and where is the sense of expecting things to turn out for the best, when when you ought to know that they don't and never will?" Mrs. Nabelack argued.

"Oh, I don't know," said Pussett, smiling in his irritating way.

"Can you tell me how the fact of my trunk being lost is going to turn out for the best?" demanded Mrs. Nabelack, aggressively.

"They'll trace it, all right," said Pussett, easily. "It's just a question of time. And they're liable, you know. We'll hope they find it."

"Much good hoping will do," snorted Mrs. Nabelack.

"I think so," said Pussett. "It puts one in a much more pleasant frame of mind."

"What do you mean by that?" asked Mrs. Nabelack. "Do you mean to say that I'm in an unpleasant frame of mind?"

"I hope not, I'm sure," replied Pussett, earnestly.

"Oh, he doesn't mean anything, mother," said Mrs. Pussett, hastily. "He just likes to look on the bright side of things."

Just at that moment there was a diversion in the shape of loud bumping in the hall. It was the expressman with the missing trunk.

"I know they've smashed every last living thing in it," predicted Mrs. Nabelack, as she rose from the table.

"I hope not," said Pussett. His mother-in-law shot a withering glance at him as she left the room, accompanied by her daughter. It certainly was irritating.

"I think he's about the most exasperating man I ever had anything to do with," said Mrs. Nabelack to her daughter later in the day. "You mustn't mind my saying it. You don't look well."

"I feel well," said Mrs. Pussett.

"You look worried. You've looked worried all through breakfast. How is Henry's business now?"

"He says it is a little quiet just now, but he expects it to pick up after a little."

"Of course, he does," said Mrs. Nabelack, scornfully. "But it won't. You mark my words. Henry Pussett is slack and I know it, slackness in business doesn't do. You'll always have a home as long as I live, but I don't know how long that will be. I don't think I am going to last a great while, my dear."

"Why, mother!" exclaimed Mrs. Pussett, and began to cry. When Pussett returned home he found his wife in very low spirits. He found the cause was, principally, the lamentable tendency to special weakness in Henry Pussett, Jr., aged four months, according to Mrs. Nabelack. Henry, Jr., it seemed, was destined to go through life in an invalid chair, and the prospect was not pleasing to his mother.

"Who's been putting nonsense like that in your head?" asked Pussett. "Did your mother think he ought to be walking around by this time?"

"She says he isn't nearly as strong on his little legs as he should be," admitted his wife.

"That boy is going to be a football player," said Pussett. "I hope some time to sit on a bench and wave a blue and yellow flag while he stars in the game of the season. He's a Pussett right straight through, and there isn't a weak-kneed instance in the family history. Was your mother always like this?"

"Always," answered Mrs. Pussett. "I ought to know better than to let it bother me, I know. It's strange, for none of the rest of us is like her."

"I hope not," said Pussett.

Pussett bore nobly with her for the two months of her visit, but she never concealed the exasperation that his hopefulness caused; she maintained this feeling to the last moment. Perhaps there was a reason for it, in the last instance at least.

It was the trunk again. It was packed and corded and labeled, all ready for the expressman, but the minutes flew and the expressman did not arrive. She and her daughter went down to the gate two or three times as the scheduled hour for the departure of the westbound train approached to see if the man was coming. Pussett paced up and down the room, looking at his watch about every ten paces. He seemed to be nervous. As Mrs. Nabelack entered the room he looked at her inquiringly.

"No," said the mother-in-law, in response to the look.

"My land," she exclaimed, "I never will get away!"

"Oh, I hope so," said Pussett.

He put a great deal of fervor into it.

The talk was of diamonds; and the Israelite from Kimberley weighed in with a yarn. "Ikey Mo," he said, "of Mile End, appeared a few days after his brother's decease wearing a large diamond stud."

"Hello, Ikey," ejaculated a friend, "Abraham left yer that beautiful diamond?"

"Yeth—and no," replied Ikey. "Yer thee, it wath like thith. Abraham left five-hundred quid by hith will, ter be thpent on 'a sthone to keep my memory green.' Vell, thith ith the sthone! Thee?"

SICK!

When mother's sick the house is all so strangely hushed in room and hall! But mother never will admit She's suffering a single bit! She won't let people do a thing— There's nothing anyone can bring— She just lies there, and tries to fix herself, by cunning little tricks! And as for doctor—why, the word She scouts as being most absurd. And when he comes he has to guess At symptoms that she won't confess; And then he's apt to frown and say: "You should have had me right away. I'll come again this evening"—for It's bed, you see, a week or more!

When father's sick—I tell you, now, You ought to hear the dreadful row! The talk of "dying" and the groans! The orders in convulsive tones! The hasty runnings to and fro; To rearrange the pillows—so; To fix hot-water bag and shade; For mustard plaster, lemonade! Appeals to get the doctor, quick— And "Can't you see I'm awful sick?" And then the doctor sits and hears While father grunts his pains and fears. He leaves some drops, and tells us: "Hum!" Unless I'm needed I shan't come. Again, I think he'll do all right. And father's up, perhaps, by night!

—EDWIN L. SABIN in "In Lighter Vein," in the November Century.

A dying rabbi, who had been all his lifetime extremely religious, had likewise always suffered much want and misery. "Do you know," he said to those in the sick-room "if, after all the sad experiences I have had in the past, there is no future life, I shall be greatly amused."

Did you ever have your range grates burn out?

If you did you will know what that means in common ranges—it means plumbers, delay, muss and big bills—because common ranges are built that way.

As range grates must some time burn out you are certain to have that kind of trouble if yours is a common range.

If you have the Pandora you won't have any trouble, because you can take out the old grates and put in the new ones in ten minutes, and a ten cent piece for a screw-driver does it easier in the Pandora than a whole kit of plumbers' tools will do it in common ranges.

A ten cent piece for a screw-driver is all you need to take out old and put in new Pandora grates.
