

"Weak Heart"

Palpitation and irregular action of the heart are due largely to a thin, watery condition of the blood. The heart and nerves refuse to perform their proper work for want of support. Pale, weak, or anemic people should use "PSYCHINE" and avoid heart troubles. "PSYCHINE" makes rich blood, tones the system, regulates the heart action and restores vitality. All weak people should have a bottle handy in case of sudden heart troubles.

Advice in Rhyme.

The Okmulgee Democrat makes the following novel argument in favor of persistent advertising:

"If you toot your little tooter, and then lay aside your horn, there's not a soul in ten short days will know that you were born. The man who gathers pumpkins is the man who plows all day, and the man who keeps a-humping is the man who makes it pay. The man who advertises with short and sudden jerks is the man who blames the editor because it never works. The man who gets the business has a long and steady pull and keeps his trade and paper from year to year quite full. He plans his advertisements in a thoughtful, honest way, and keeps forever at it until he makes it pay. He has faith in all the future, can withstand a bankrupt stock, and, like a man of Scripture, has his business on a rock."

Dyspepsia Hurts.

My goodness, how dyspepsia hurts and pains! And it isn't the pain that is to be dreaded but the loss of time and wages. There is today many a person who lays off one or two days a week all because of indigestion and in consequence loses many a dollar in wages. What a pity these people don't try Hutch and cure themselves. Why don't they take one little tablet after each meal and get back to their work? Maybe they will try Hutch some of these days, and they will find out for sure that there is one medicine in the world which can be depended on to cure sour stomach, indigestion, headache, heartburn. It's a doctor for ten cents. One gives relief.

The British Working Man.

The following description of the British working man, taken from The Liberty Review (London), and subsequently reproduced in the Toronto Mail and Empire hits off a number of situations that appeal to us with a strange air of familiarity.

For years past "the British working man" has been a standing joke. The comic papers have exhausted their ingenuity in portraying him in his true colors; his name has long been a synonym of laziness, fraud, and imposture; his habits have become the object of universal derision. By working as little as he can and by drawing more wages than he earns, "the British working man" has benefited the foreigner more than all the tariffs in existence.

On the other hand, the foreign workman does work. Compare the men who do the asphalt in our streets with the roadmen and paviors employed by the municipal corporations. The other day we observed some gangs of these men. The foreign asphalters worked as they should work, the municipal shirkers shirked as they always shirked. We saw nine of these latter standing either with folded arms, or with hands in pockets, or resting on tools, watching another clipping pitch off a wood brick—fifteen strokes to the minute. Recently a gentleman living in a large house twenty miles from London desired his drawing-room decorated in a particular way and in a stated time, and obtained estimates for the work from several London houses. The prices were immaterial, but not one of the firms could guarantee to complete the work in the time stipulated, their workmen refusing to work more than a few hours a day, and the union to which the men belonged objecting to overtime. The gentleman thereupon applied to a Paris house, who sent men over without an hour's delay; these men finished the job in half the time specified time, and the price was less than half the lowest quoted by the London trade.

We know of many similar cases. Why have so many industries left England of recent years? For no other reason than that the "British workman" won't work reasonable hours for reasonable wages. He is made an idol of by the politician, a slave and shirker by the union, and then he demands to be protected against the industrious, unfettered, and unspoiled foreigner.

What a farce it is! Old England is becoming madder every day. The conspiracy against honest work is extending in all directions. Objection is taken by one set of cranks to women earning their own living as barmaids, while another set object to men earning a livelihood by selling refreshments on Sundays. Various forms of employment are denounced as degrading, and soon we shall have a proposal to abolish work altogether, and to make men and women angels pure and simple. A Fulham schoolmaster rejoicing in the name of Fooks objects to boys being employed in farriers' shops, on the ground that "the men use coarse language to the animals, and are sometimes cruel to the animals." This, in his opinion, "tends to blunt a boy's susceptibilities." Surely the proper thing would be to prohibit farriery altogether, and have done with it.

"And Don't Go Near The Water."

There lives in Washington a physician who has a ten-year-old son, a boy of great spirit but with no overabundance of strength. Not long ago the boy secured his father's permission to join a camping party organized by boys in the neighborhood; but in the parting instructions there was one restriction.

"Now, my boy," said the father, "I don't wish you to go out in your cousin Bob's canoe. He and those other lads are quite used to the water, but you are not; and you haven't as yet learned to sit still anywhere. You'll be with them but a short time, and with the other amusements you'll have, you can afford to let the canoe alone this visit, so that your mother will not be worrying all the while you're away."

The boy promptly gave the desired promise. On his return he was most enthusiastic with regard to the pleasures he had enjoyed.

"Didn't mind not canoeing a bit, father," said he. "The only time they used the canoe, anyway, was the last day, to go over to the other shore. But I remembered my promise, and I wasn't going to break it at the last minute. So I swam across."

How About "ez"?

No two people in the world have precisely the same idea as to what constitutes the highest enjoyment of which they are capable. Mrs. Jennings had an ideal which did not appeal at all to the persons who should have been in fullest sympathy with her.

"Go to the picnic! No, I guess not!" and the energetic woman looked scornfully at the acquaintance who had ventured to suggest such a mishap. "I don't enjoy lugging my food three or four miles into the bush for the sale of letting other folks criticize it, and get all eat up with gnat-flies into the bargain. My notion of pleasure is something quite different."

"What is your notion of pleasure?" inquired the visitor, curiously.

"Well, I expect to have about as good a time this afternoon as ever I need," said Mrs. Jennings, briskly. "We've got a load of Josiah Pond's elegant stove-wood coming this morning, and when my work's done this afternoon, I'm planning to take my crochet-work out into the shed, where it's cool and shady, and watch Ez saw and split for a couple of hours. That's what I like about as well as anything I can think of. I do admire to see things going on!"

Some of our high-class papers brag once in a while, possibly because there is nothing else to do, that they do not sell their news columns for advertising purposes. The Belisaire (III) Northwest, there is an exception to the rule, though it fails to mention the name of the publication. It says:

A Western editor has come to the conclusion that those desiring "puffs" in his paper must pay for them and has established the following schedule of prices: For telling the public that a man is a successful citizen when everybody knows he is lazy as a government mule, $2.70; referring to a deceased citizen as one who is mourned by the entire community when we know he will only be missed by a poker circle, $18.13; referring to some galsvanting female as an estimable lady whom it is a pleasure to meet, when every business man in town would rather see the devil coming, $8.10; calling an ordinary pulpit pounder an eminent divine, sixty cents; sending a doughty sinner to heaven, $5.

Two little girls were playing, when Margaret made a misstatement of fact. "That's a lie," said Beatrice.

"Oh," ejaculated Margaret. "Do you know where you will go for saying that? You'll go to hell."

"Where's that?" returned Beatrice.

"The idea," replied the other; "you a Methodist and don't know where hell is!"

"Well I don't care," responded Beatrice.

"I'm only in the second book and we just started geography."

The Pandora Thermometer

The thermometer on the Pandora range oven means precisely in accuracy to the cook what the square and compass mean to the draftsman. Without the square and compass the draftsman would have to work entirely by guess, just as you do without an accurate and reliable thermometer on your oven.

The Pandora thermometer reduces cooking to an exact science. You know precisely how much heat you have and what it will do in a given time. It is one of the small things which makes the Pandora so much different and better than common ranges.
