A Danger Averted.

The Misses Malcolm were known to the little world of which Greenby was the centre as "the two Malcolm girls," in spite of their gray hairs and sixty odd years. They were also known as the best bookkeepers in all the region, and any lapse from the exquisite neatness of their domain seemed to the Misses Malcolm a terrible thing.

When Cousin Palmer Malcolm, a reckless Western relative, died, the Malcolm girls started for the Missouri town on four hours notice, although they had entertained thirty-two "Harvest Gleaners" the night before, too.

To Miss Sophronia, the elder, was allotted by mutual consent the task of putting the lower rooms in order, so far as possible, while Miss Eudora attended to their bedroom and their simple packing.

When they were at last seated in the train after a two miles' jolting ride in the old coach, Miss Eudora noticed that Sophronia's face wore a troubled and anxious look. As Cousin Palmer Malcolm had been a great trial to the family, Miss Eudora felt that his death could not be the cause of her sister's worry, and after a few moments of silence she decided to probe the matter. At that very moment Miss Sophronia spoke.

"Eudora," and her tone was one of distress, "I let Mrs. Goodwin go up to the spare room just before supper last night to get the measures of our quilt and bolster-spread, and the bell rang while she was measuring, and she hurried down, leaving the quilt on one of the chairs and two of the curtain shades up to the top. She told me, and I forgot it. Suppose the house caught on fire while we're gone, and the neighbors went in and saw that quilt on a chair, and all, what would they think of us?"

"Now, Sophronia, you ought to have trusted me, and not worried," said Miss Eudora, calmly. "Something led me to open that spare-room door the last thing, and when I saw what a fix 'twas in, and knew I hadn't another minute, I just locked the door and put the key in my pocket, for the thought of the fire came to me just as it did to you."

Miss Sophronia's face cleared.
"I'm thankful," said she, simply. "I shouldn't have had one mite of pleasure or comfort in the journey or the funeral if that door had been left unlocked."

Peter Fisher, Not Calvin Hatheway

Dr. W. O. Raymond writes to the Sun under date November 9th:

"On page 7 of the Sun of this morning there appears under the head of "The Climate of New Brunswick in old days," an extract from Calvin Hatheway's Interesting Description of early climatic conditions in this province." This extract should be credited to Peter Fisher (father of the late L. Peter Fisher of Woodstock and of Hon. Charles Fisher, and and grandfather of W. S. Fisher of this city.) Some years ago the Sun published a very useful bibliography by W. G. MacFarlane of N. B. books and other authors. On consulting this you will see that Calvin Hatheway's little "History of New Brunswick from its first settlement, etc., etc.," was printed at Fredericton in 18-46.

Peter Fisher's "Sketches of New Brunswick, etc., etc.," was published at St. John by Chubb & Sears in 1825. The book was really written anonymously "by an inhabitant," but it is known that Fisher was its author, and to him appertains the honor of being the author of the first printed history of the province.

She Needed Rest.

"Well, honey-bug," said one of the trained nurses to the other who rents the flat in partnership with her, "isn't it fine that

WOODSTOCK, N. B., NOV. 22, 1905.

we're both off duty at once? Lie down on the couch there, and tell me about your case, and then I'll tell you about mine."

"Agreed, on one condition," said the other, dropping down on the couch. "Don't call me honey-bug!"

"Why, deary! You never objected to my nice little pet name before!"

"Don't say deary! My name is Mary."

"Your name is fuss-budget! What's the matter?"

"Nothing in the world, except that I've been for the last two weeks where pet names are a mania. The first night I was there my patient's husband came into the room and said to her, 'Well, quennie, I've been mowing the lawn, love, and it's made my back ache, darling.'"

"Mary!"

"No joke; I remembered that verbatim, purposely for you. And that isn't a circumstance! By the second day I found that if Mrs. Blackall told me 'press' thought thus and so,—that was short for 'precious,' you know,—it meant your husband. And when he asked after 'hun,' it stood for 'honey,'— his wife! 'Lambie' and 'birdie' were favorites, too, and 'dearest' and 'darling' and 'sweetheart' were the cheapest kind of by-words, tossed at everybody and everything on the premises. The cat and the dog and the bird were all sweethearts, and from the first hour I was there Mrs. Blackall addressed me—a perfect stranger—as 'deary' whenever she spoke to me! The last few days she has been calling me 'darl.' That means 'darling.' What do you think of it?"

"W-well," came the judicial answer, "don't you like that sort of thing better than coldness and crossness?"

"Foolish questions! Might as well ask whether I prefer too much molasses, or too much quinin! I don't want too much anything. Yesterday, just before I left, Mr.
Blackall came in and found his wife sitting up, and what do you think he said? 'Why, you little apple-dumpling dear!' And she looked up at him—big burly man!—and said, 'Oh, do you really think I look better, pet-heart?'"

"Vaudeville!" asked the jud cial one, suddenly turning human.

Continuous. Do you wonder that I want to be called plain, straight 'Mary' for at least a week? I need complete rest!"

Confidence Misplaced.

A pretty young woman slipped and fell on the steps of her father's house, spraining her knee. She disliked doctors, but finally the knee grew so bad she was persuaded to call in medical aid. She would not have this doctor and that one, but said she would consent to have called in a certain spruce-looking young man carrying a homoeopathic medicine case who passed the house every day.
The family kept a sharp lookout, and when he came along called him in. The young lady modestly raised her skirts and showed the disabled member. The young man looked at it and said, "That certainly is quite serious." "Well," said the young lady, "what shall I do?" "If I were you," he said, "I would send for a physician." "But cannot you attend to it?" asked the girl.
"Not very well," answered the young man,
"I am a piano tuner."

A Desired Change.

"How would you like to hear your children crying for bread, sir?" impertuned the beggar.

"I'd welcome the change," said the man, hurrying on; "they're forever crying for candy now!"

Why Tea Quality Varies

YOU know how the quality of strawberries from the same patch will sometimes vary from one day to another.

One day sweet, compact, well ripened, well colored, richly flavored—next day it rains, is cloudy,—following picking is soggy, sour, green, coarsely-flavored, poor.

Tea, also, on account of its volatility of flavor, after picking and during the curing process is very susceptible to weather changes. A few hours of sunshine or bad weather after picking may make the difference between good and poor tea.

So that while one picking may be first class, the next from the same garden may be very poor.

I select only the pickings which come up to the Red Rose standards of richness and strength in Indian, and delicacy and fragrance in Ceylon teas, and thus that "rich, fruity flavor" of Red Rose Tea is produced and maintained.
