Waltz And Two-Step.
(Boston Advertiser.)

The sun of the erstwhile popular two step is setting. The sun of the pre-erstwhile popular waltz is rising. This seeming astronomical miracle is being accomplished by the American Society of Professors of Dancing, who are resolved that the two-step must go back and that the waltz must come back.
The professors have put their hand, so to speak, on the public pulse. And if the public pulse does not beat in accordance with the plans of the professors, then the hand is going to pinch and squeeze the pulse till it gets into step, though not in two-step. At least that is what is on the programme—or the dance card. How the dancers in the mass are going to greet it remains to be seen. If they want to stand in with the professors they will stop hopping, and start gliding.

There is no doubt that there is more poetry in the waltz. The two-step is not poetic.
It has its good points, but it is shy on the rounded corners. And the language of the two-step is weak. When she remarks that she "could die waltzing," it is fine and beautiful. But if she said she "could die two-stepping" the wonder would be that she did not. The two-step never caused a wedding in all its history. The waltz, aided and abetted by dreamy music, has been responsible for many a boom in the ring trade. There would be less race suicide if there were more weddings. There would be more weddings if there were more waltzing. Let us have more waltzing.

Great
Tonic"

"PSYCHINE" is a wonderful tonic. It contains medicinal elements not found in any of the patent medicines. "PSYCHINE" is a regular practicing physician's formula. A tonic for weak people, for men of business worries, for the tired mother, the pale, languid girl. Young girls just budding into womanhood; elderly people who feel that weakness due to old age find it a remedy they cannot do without. It restores vitality, creates rich, new blood, removes all impurities, strengthens the nerves.
If you need a trial ask druggist for "PSYCHINE."

SEPTEMBER.

September, swarthy and serene, Treads stately the silent path That climbs the dreaming hills between The fields of summer's aftermath.
Before her goes the cavalcade Of sprites that spread with eager hands The carpet of the sun and shade Across the tawny autumn lands.

In long festoons the woodbine droops, A drapery above her way;
The ripened corn in sturdy troops Salutes her in its proud array And rustles now its penons fair When she comes regal in her pride, With crimson poppies in her hair,
And dusky robes all trailing wide.

The drifting haze that veils the dawn,
The starry cosmos, fairy pink;
The scented, purple grapes whereon The drunken bees are fain to drink;
The apples rich with cider tang And red as summer's sunset glow As autumn's scented censer's hang And in the breeze sway to and fro.

The cricket's song, the locust's whirr, The firefly's flash across the night, Are of the welcome made for her Whose step is slow and soft and light, The leaves flush into red and gold—With scepter made of golden rod, The empress of the new and old, September treads the dying sod.

A Yarn From The Wild West.

(Checotah, Ind. Ter., Times.)

The terrible news comes from the western part of the Cherokee nation that a boy climbed a cornstalk to see how the corn was getting along, and now the stalk is growing up faster than the boy can climb down. The boy is clear out of sight. Three men have undertaken to cut the stalk down with axes and save the boy from starvation, but it grows so fast that they can't hack twice in the same place. The boy is living on nothing but raw corn and already has thrown down over four bushels of cobs.

If a Dyspeptic, Use Hutch!

"Not a foul smelling nasty tasting dose," but a palatable, appetizing corrector of acidity, heartburn and water-brash. It washes away fermenting matters, and the tough mucus that coats the dyspeptic's stomach, leaving it clean, refreshed and ready to digest proper food. Its a doctor for ten cents. If you can spare $1.00 you can buy 200. By mail from Woodward Chemical

Among the Moors.

No visitor to Morocco has ever asked himself what he was to do for entertainment.
There is sport of every kind, from wild-boar hunting down to quail-shooting; and further south one may even shoot panthers and hyenas. The lion does not begin until the Atlas mountains are reached. Horses may be hired in Tangier for about a dollar and a half a day, including an America saddle; and for the ladies there are always comfortable mules provided, with any number of Arab and slave servants.

The slave market, by the way, is no longer one of the 'sights' of Tangier, since Christian influence long ago abolished it. This does not mean, however, that the slave trade is not carried on.

Indeed, the traveller 'in the know' may frequently see an old Arab merchant leading round a negro boy and girl by the ears from door to door, and he will learn that these are all that remain of an enormous slave caravan, obtained by Arab raiders as far south as the Niger and Mysterious Timbuctoo, in central Africa.—'Four-Track News.'

As the World Goes.

A fellow walked up to a seedy individual the other day and said, 'Hello, Bill; I saw you in the parade yesterday. Who were those prosperous men riding ahead in carriages? 'Oh, those were the brewers.'

'Who were those fellows with diamonds and silk hats who followed? 'Oh, they were the saloonkeepers.'

'And what was that rabble, trailing on behind with you? 'Oh, they were the consumers.'—New York 'World.'

Did Not Need It.

A country doctor tells this story on himself. After writing a prescription for a patient the physician told him that the druggist would probably charge him sixty cents for filling it. Then the patient asked the doctor to lend him the money. Thereupon the physician carefully scratched out a part of the prescription and handed it back with ten cents, remarking: 'You can have that filled for a dime. What I scratched out was for your nerves.'—New York 'World.'

Envious.

In the dog days' doggoned simmer When she sunshine melts the bricks, When the mercury's at ninety And my thirst's at ninety-six;
And the rills of perspiration down my wilter-ing collar roll,

It is then that work seems dreary
And with languid sighs and weary I quite envy Mr. Peary Who is going to the Pole.

—New York Globe.

Shun the man who drinks to excess, for it is a habit that leads to wretchedness.

Avoid also the man who is selfish, the man who considers always his own interests before those of his wife.

Suppose you do like the tea you are using. How do you know it is the best tea you can get for the money?

MANY were satisfied with the tea they were using before they tried Red Rose Tea.

When they tried Red Rose Tea they found it had that "rich fruity flavor," found it was strong—that it requires less to make a cup of good tea than the brand of Ceylon alone they had been using.

Now, why not be sure you are getting the best tea to be had.

You cannot be sure till you try Red Rose Tea.
