

News of Hartland and Vicinity

FRED. H. STEVENS, Reporter, and Manager Hartland Branch Office.

WOODSTOCK, N. B., MAY 16, 1906.

Honors For Burton W. Morgan.

THE DISPATCH correspondent has received from Burton W. Morgan of Kingston a copy of the Ottawa Evening Journal which contains the following clipping which will be read with pleasure by his friends in this native county:—

Mr. W. B. Morgan, the new assistant general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., is a New Brunswick man, having been born at Hartland. He received his education in the local schools and at the Provincial Normal school in Fredericton. He taught school for a year and a half and then went to Montreal and took a literary course in the Presbyterian College.

From Montreal he directed his steps to the Canadian Northwest, and spent a year and a half there in the mission field—a year in the Barr colony and half a year in the Battleford district. He is greatly enamored of the West, and speaks of it in the most glowing terms. He also did mission work in St. John Presbytery.

Last fall Mr. Morgan entered Queen's University, where he is completing his arts course.

The new assistant secretary is regarded as a splendid man for the position he is now filling. Energetic, cultured and travelled, he will undoubtedly prove good.

LOCALS.

Dandelions and violets have come straggling along, almost a month behind the times.

The water in the river is much higher than it has been since the big ice jam of four years ago.

Eggs and butter have recently gone lower in price—the former 14 cents, butter 18 cents.

Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Miller entertained quite a large party of their friends on Monday evening.

There was a vaudeville show in the Foresters hall on Thursday night, which was fairly well attended.

Miss Edith Kennedy has become considerably improved in health, so that the services of Miss Phillips, professional nurse have been dispensed with.

Fred H. Stevens for a week has been confined to his bed, ill of acute gastritis. This department of THE DISPATCH is shy of news matter by this reason.

Still another, the third, base ball team is organized. This is comprised of the junior juniors, a class of lads from 9 to 12 years. The line-up of this and the "big" team is unavoidably held over this week.

Rev. B. E. Stockford was taken ill at the residence of Cook Bishop at Middle Simonds on Sunday night a week ago, but was able to take his appointments on the following Sunday. Dr. MacIntosh who was summoned said the trouble was a case of overwork.

Rev. O. E. Steeves, pastor of the Upper Baptist church, tendered his resignation at the Sunday evening service, the resignation to take effect about July. Rev. C. T. Phillips, of the other Baptist church, has also resigned. Both the reverend gentlemen are desirous that local Baptist union should be speedily consummated and that, of course, one pastor should attend the spiritual welfare of the flock.

Edward Weyman Shaw.

Another one of the pioneers of Aroostook County, Mr. Edward Weyman Shaw, was laid to rest at Mars Hill, Wednesday, May 2nd. Mr. Shaw was born in Wakefield, N. B., about seventy-six years ago, married Elizabeth McClintock, July 20, 1853, and moved to Mars Hill in 1857 and has lived in that vicinity ever since. His first wife died in 1900 and in 1902 he was married to Henrietta Wilson of Mars Hills, who survives him. He leaves two sons, James W. Shaw, of Victor, Col., and Hon. R. W. Shaw, of Houlton, Maine, five daughters, Mrs. Andrew Beckwith, of Centerville, N. B., Mrs. J. A. Noble, of Cripple Creek, Colo., Mrs. S. J. Gray, Mrs. C. D. Campbell, and Miss Elizabeth Shaw, of East Somerville, Mass., of the first family and four children of the second family.

Mr. Shaw was formerly a contractor and builder, and has also been engaged extensively in lumbering and farming, had a wide acquaintance in Aroostook County and New Brunswick. He was a man of kind heart and excellent character and is mourned by a large circle of friends and relatives. The funeral was from the Free Baptist church of Mars Hill and was under the direction of Aroostook Lodge of Free and Accepted Masons; the sermon being preached by Rev. Charles Orsen. He was interred at the Mars Hill cemetery which was conveyed to the town of Mars Hill by his father, James B. Shaw, who was also one of the pioneers of that town.—Houlton Times.

Death of William F. Lindsay.

William F. Lindsay, a prosperous farmer and respected citizen of Lindsay, died at his home on Tuesday morning last, after a long illness, in the 41st year of his age. He was the only son of the John A. Lindsay, and leaves a widow, a daughter of Mr. Wm. Baker. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. A. Thomas, of Lindsay, and Mrs. D. Gray, of Caribou. The funeral will take place this afternoon at two o'clock. The remains will be interred in the Baptist burying ground at Lindsay. Rev. J. C. Berrie will officiate, assisted by Revs. Fred Todd, J. C. Turner, C. T. Phillips and W. Taylor.

Hard Luck.

Barney Oldfield, the automobilist, was talking about a trip that he had once made through Manitoba.

"The most dangerous town in Manitoba," he said, "is Brandon. Hargrave is near Brandon, and on the outskirts of Hargrave, in front of a little inn, I dismounted.

"I found in the inn the landlord and another man. They sat side by side on a bench. They were both very old.

"Excuse me, landlord," I said, 'but can you tell me how far it is to Brandon?'

"The old man jumped up and hobbled behind the bar.

"Brandy?" he said in a thin quaver.

"Yes, indeed, sir, and very fine brandy it is."

"He put a bottle and a glass before me.

"I asked you," I said more loudly, 'how far it is to Brandon.'

"The best brandy, of course, sir," he answered. 'I don't keep nothing but the best.'

"In despair I turned from this deaf veteran to the other old man on the bench.

"Look here," I said, 'can you tell me how far it is to Brandon?'

"The other old man, with a grateful look, rose and limped hastily up to the bar.

"Thanks," he said, 'I don't care if I do.'

Unfortunate.

A certain merchant of Baltimore, who is well known for his philanthropic spirit, was approached one day by an Irishman, formerly in his employ, who made a touching appeal for financial assistance. Said he:

"I trust, sor, that ye'll find it convenient to help a poor man whose house an' everything in it was burned down last week, sor."

The merchant although he gives with a free hand, exercises considerable caution in his philanthropy, so he asked:

"Have you any papers or certificates to show that you have lost everything by fire, as you say?"

The Irishman scratched his head as if bewildered. Finally he replied:

"I did have a certificate to that effect, sor, signed before a notary, but unfortunately, sor, it was burned up with the rest of my effects."

My boys sometimes get discouraged and I to them: Go out and do something for somebody, go out and give something to anybody, if it's only a pair of wollen stockings to a poor old woman. It will take you away from yourselves and make you happy.

"HOME SWEET HOME."

What is Responsible for its Appeal?

It is said sometimes that Bishop's melody, not Payne's words, have given "Home, Sweet Home" its vogue, but that can easily be disposed of, writes Gustav Kobbe in the June Delineator. The melody was not new. Bishop had used it several years before as a "Sicilian Air" in a book, Melodies of Various Nations, where he had set it to words by Thomas Haynes Bayley, beginning "To the home of my childhood in sorrow I came." This was a "home" song; a leading London publishing house brought out the book under the distinguished patronage of H. R. H. the Duchess of Gloucester, the Princess Sophia, and others, but the melody then failed to carry the song into every heart as it did set to Payne's words. For every person who ever has heard of "To the Home of my Childhood" a million know "Home, Sweet Home." But for Payne's lines the tune would have been forgotten long ago. Together they make a simple, direct appeal to one of the most universal sentiments in the human breast. Each needs the other. They go hand in hand—words and music—the song and the soul of the song. Therefore, why endeavor to draw fine distinctions between the respective merits of Payne's lyric and Bishop's air? In happy union they have survived the vicissitudes of more than seventy-five years. They seemed destined for immortality. Whole libraries of intellectual volumes have been forgotten, tons of vocal scores have been sold for waste paper; but a simple little poem by a homesick American, set to music by a second-rate English composer, lives on because, forsooth, the author let us know that he was homesick by describing that longing which every one of us has experienced at some moment in his life.

It may be interesting to know that while the song earned a fortune for the publisher, it left Payne little or no better off than he had been before. He had sold it for a lump sum, and had retained no interest in the publishing rights; while, as to fame, the publisher did not even think it worth while to put Payne's name on the title page.

DELICATE BABIES.

Every delicate baby starts life with a serious handicap. Even a trivial illness is apt to end fatally, and the mother is kept in a state of constant dread. Baby's Own Tablets have done more than any other medicine to make weak, sickly children well and strong. They give the mother a feeling of security, as through their use she sees her delicate child developing healthily. Mrs. S. M. LeBlanc, Eastern Harbor, N. S., says,—"Up to the age of fifteen months my baby was weak and sickly and at that age could not walk. It was then I began using Baby's Own Tablets, and the change they wrought in her condition was surprising. She began to get strong at once, and has very since been a perfectly well child." Every mother who values the health of her little one should keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
