

CURED HER BOY OF PNEUMONIA

Newmarket Mother is loud in her Praises of the Great Consumption Preventative

"My son Laurence was taken down with Pneumonia," says Mrs. A. O. Fisher, of Newmarket, Ont. "Two doctors attended him. He lay for three months almost like a dead child. His lungs became so swollen, his heart was pressed over to the right side. Altogether I think we paid $140 to the doctors, and all the time he was getting worse. Then we commenced the Dr. Slocum treatment. The effect was wonderful. We saw a difference in two days. Our boy was soon strong and well."

Here is a positive proof that Psychine will cure Pneumonia. But why wait till Pneumonia comes. It always starts with a Cold. Cure the Cold and the Cold will never develop into Pneumonia, nor the Pneumonia into Consumption. The one sure way to clear out Cold, root and branch, and to build up the body so that the Cold won't come back is to use

The Germans in Brazil.

"Germans long for a foothold in Brazil, its mighty area of unpre-empted virgin wealth fulfills their dreams of an economically independent Greater Germany over-sea. They are marching to realization of their hopes with a plodding precision and that patient confidence born of well-organized plans." This is the opening passage of an article by F. W. Wile, entitled "German Colonization in Brazil," in a recent number of The Fortnightly Review. Already 500,000 Germans, emigrants and their off-spring, are resident in Brazil. One hundred million dollars of vested interests—banking, street railroads, electric works, mines, coffee plantations, and a great variety of business undertakings—claim the protection of the Kaiser's flag. German colonies in Africa, Asia, and the South Seas have proved to be nothing but graveyards for German soldiers and subsidies. The German people yearn for a land where their surplus population may go and multiply and preserve the distinctive German civilization. In Brazil they find a land whose resources equal those of the United States, which is in the hands of a Latin people without the enterprise or energy to make them available. Colonizing companies have been formed, with concessions covering 8,000 square miles of territory. The propaganda of these companies is incessant and intelligent. Literature is scattered broadcast throughout the Fatherland. The German language is propagated in Brazilian schools, for which the German settler is taxed. The negro workman in the German settlements is learning to speak German instead of Portuguese.

One thing stands in the way of making this in fact, as it is in spirit, a German colony namely, the Munroe doctrine. Against this doctrine the German publicist levels his guns. German professors deride it to their classes. Prof. Gustav Schmoller of the Department of Political Economy at the University of Berlin challenges the doctrine frankly in his work, "Commerce and Power." He declares that the development of a nation of twenty or thirty million Germans in Brazil is impossible without a connection that is guaranteed by warships. The tendency of the United States to exclude Europe from the markets of North and South America necessarily pre-arranges grave conflicts in the future. "Without settlements," he continues, "such as Germany possesses in Kiaochau (China), and without the protection of a powerful fleet, exploitation and the holding open of middle and South American markets will be impossible." The same language is held in publications that are recognized as organs of the German Court.

The question just arises whether the powerful German fleet which is now forming is being prepared for the time when the Munroe doctrine will be challenged. The doctrine can only be upheld while it is undisputed by a nation with a fleet stronger than that of the United States. Englishmen imagine that the German fleet is being strengthened to cope with them. This seems such a hopeless stern chase that it is altogether likely Germany has not the faintest idea of throwing down the gauntlet to so redoubtable a foe. It is useful, however, to create that impression, for its effect may be to lull the foe which is really in view into a sense of security and inactivity. But the people of the United States are awake. They know that the Munroe doctrine without a conquering fleet to enforce it is a mere piece of waste paper. Their Department of State is well aware what is going on. The effect of the situation must be to force the United States and Great Britain to a species of alliance. The latter is committed to the policy of the open door, and Germany does not keep the open door wherever she gains possession. A large question however, is whether some of the fairest parts of the earth's surface are to be left to wither in the enervating grasp of the half-breed Latin races which hold South and Central America. —Toronto Globe.

Diet.

In much that is written concerning the matter of diet there are so many sweeping statements, impossible rules and foolish conclusions that it is no wonder that many persons brush the whole subject aside as being too complex for them.

The trouble is that there are too many persons try to enforce their own personal ideas on this subject. There are the "cranks" who must have something to be cranky about in any case, and a "crank" who has picked up a little scientific jargon and thinks he has cured himself of something is a very persistent person. Then there are those who have really been cured of some ailment by a diet that happens to suite their own individual cases. They go about forever afterward finding the same ailment in everyone they meet and offering the same remedy. There are also the one-food people, who go about seeking what not to devour, and who would reduce every one to whole wheat or pecans.

Whole wheat and pecans are excellent foods and do much good, but so do black-heart cherries, lobsters, and corned beef and cabbage. If John discovers that he has a nightmare every time he eats lobster he does well to renounce that dish, but he need not renounce it because Dick has the nightmare.

Again, one hears much of the good judgment displayed by those persons who rest for at least half an hour after eating, and it would, undoubtedly, be well if the world were so arranged that we could all do so; but unfortunately the business of the day rushes along, and most persons, at least until they come to their evening meal, must go to work as soon as they have eaten.

It is true that this fact constitutes a strong plea for light and easy digested meals in the daytime, leaving the principal one till the work is finished.

It is absurd for persons who have not made themselves somewhat familiar with the chemistry of foods to try to talk learnedly about their action on the human economy, and it may be taken as an axiom that within the individual capacity (which can be learned only by individual experiment) a variety in diet is better than a monotony. A diet that is too strictly limited to a few things trains the stomach to adapt itself to those few, and it is in danger of losing its power to digest things outside of that list.

The Right Answer.

When the late Secretary Hay applied for admission to the bar at Illinois he was summoned to appear before a committee of prominent Chicago lawyers to be examined as to his qualifications.

He went to the place appointed and found the committee assembled; but for a long time they took no notice of the young candidate, but continued to talk vigorously together on various subjects. At last one of the lawyers, turning to him, said:

"Mr. Hay, what would you do if a client should come to you with such a case as this?" and he proceeded to describe very elaborately a complicated legal case.

"I should ask for a retaining fee of fifty dollars," promptly replied Mr. Hay, "and tell him to call tomorrow."

"Mr. Hay, you are admitted," said the gentleman, and with a hearty laugh from all present the proceedings closed.—[American Spectator.

A Genuine Change.

A Church Army officer tells a story of a Welsh miner who had previously exhibited a distinct faculty for expletives of the baser kind. With his changed life, however, it became customary for him to meet the most disagreeable expressions with the exclamation "Praise the Lord!" His mates, not approving the situation, one day stole his dinner. But all they heard the converted collier say was, "Praise the Lord! I've still got my appetite. They can't take that."

"Maria, what's the use of your telling the girl to be sure and wake you at 6 o'clock? She does it every morning and you never get up."

"John, I don't want you to interfere with my way of running the house. I know just what I am doing. When that girl calls me at 6 o'clock I know she's up."—Chicago Tribune.

A Gallant Boy.

A Bostonian was talking about the late Henry Harland.

"Harland was a graceful, gallant soul," he said. "Even in his boyhood he turned the prettiest compliments."

"In his boyhood he studied Latin under a charming young lady. This young lady calling him up in class one morning, said:

"Henry, name some of the chief beauties of education."

"The boy, smiling into his teacher's pretty eyes, answered:

"School-mistresses." —Boston Herald.

Officially Confirmed.

The Washington correspondent hastily called up the Cabinet officer by telephone.

"Pardon me for disturbing you, Mr. Blank," he said, "but will you please tell me whether or not the rumor that is in circulation as to your retirement is true?"

"Yes, sir," answered the Cabinet officer. "It is. I was just about to retire when you called me. Good night."—[Chicago Tribune.
