For 33 Years

Shiloh's Consumption Cure, the Lung Tonic, has been before the public, and this, together with the fact that its sales have steadily increased year by year, is the best proof of the merit of

Shiloh

as a cure for Coughs, Colds, and all diseases of the lungs and air passages. Those who have used Shiloh would not be without it. Those who have never used it should know that every bottle is sold with a positive guarantee that, if it doesn't cure you, the dealer will refund what you paid for it. Shiloh thousands of the most obstinate cases of Coughs, Colds and Lung troubles. Let it cure you.

Has Cured

"Last winter I suffered for three months, and thought I was going into Consumption. I took all sorts of medicines, but nothing did me any good until I used Shiloh's Consumption Cure. Four bottles cured me. This winter I had a very bad cold, was not able to speak, my lungs were sore on the side and back. Six bottles of Shiloh made me well again. I have given it to several people and every one of them have been cured.—D. Joseph, St. Hyacinthe, Que."

Some Women's Economy.
Women certainly are the conservatives of the race. Long ago men learned that time was too valuable to waste on useless details. But women still cling to their idols. One reads in the correspondence column of women's magazines perfectly absurd paragraphs on small economies. One woman recommends saving the gummed ends of old letters and circulars in patching books, sheet music, baking tins, etc. Imagine wasting time cutting old envelopes to pieces for gummed paper which may be purchased by the yard for a few cents. A roll of passepartout paper, the thinnest kind, costs about four cents. One piece would last for mending purposes at least a year. Another economist writes with evident pride that she saves all the empty breakfast food boxes, pastes a white paper hinge on the flap to strengthen the cover, buys a wooden box to hold a number of the paper boxes, and labels the latter empty spoons, string, rubber rings, and other things, mostly not worth preserving. Such small savings are not worth while at the expense of time and energy, and the sooner women get that into their heads the better.

Paper Napkins and Towels.
Every one knows the value of paper napkins, and in many households the useful and inexpensive little squares have been substituted for linen napkins for breakfast and luncheon. A few independent souls use the paper napkins altogether for doilies as well as napkins. It remained for a school to introduce a new use for paper. The towels used in this school are all paper. They are about twice the size of the napkins, and are no heavier. Great bunches of them hang in the toilet rooms of the schools, attached to hooks, something like those on letter files. About two of the towels are needed to dry the hands and face. After using they are simply crumpled and thrown into a waste paper basket at hand. The sanitary advantage of the paper towels for public washrooms school and institution use is readily apparent. Why are they not just the thing for the kitchen? Purchased in quantities they cost about an eighth of a cent apiece, and the saving in laundering is even greater than the cost of buying.

She Also Had a Pet.
When the thin woman in the long gray ulster sat down in the subway car opposite the fat woman holding a bright little Scotch terrier it could be seen at once that they had points of common interest and that those points of common interest consisted of dogs.
"What a dear little fellow he is," chirped the thin woman.
"Isn't he dear?" cooed the fat woman, snuggling her pet so closely that he had to sniff for breath.
"Mine is a French poodle," ventured the thin woman. "I hear those gray terriers are coming into style, though."
"Yes, they're all the rage," said the fat woman. "I had to give up fifty for Sandy."
A handsome young woman who occupied the seat by the thin woman was an interested listener to the colloquy. She was good looking enough to attract attention anywhere, and she looked as if she loved everything that was worth loving in this world, including dogs. She leaned over and gave Sandy's head an affectionate pat, and Sandy tried to lick her gloved hand.
"You love dogs, too?" said the fat woman.
"Oh, yes," was the reply. "Who could help it?"
"What kind is yours?" came the eager query.
"Mine? Oh, I haven't any. I have a baby."
And the fat woman and the thin woman raised their brows, turned up their noses and gazed coldly silent, just as if some one had said something to shock their sense of feeling.—New York Press.

A College Amateur.
Another honest, hard-working college football player has been compelled to take his claim for his proper playing wages to court for settlement. The Cleveland Plain Dealer sends us details of the case: A young man named Cleveland J. Sufinsky has prepared a suit to be brought in a local justice's court against the Western Reserve University Athletic Association for $75, which he claims is the balance due on a contract under the terms of which the association was to pay his running, $100 for a year, if he got out with the football squad and booked with the college team. In order to bind the contract, it is claimed, Sufinsky was paid $25 at the time it was made. The young man is in good health, large and robust, and it was particularly through his participation in the team that his services on the football team are said to have been sought and secured. To what extent Sufinsky worked out with the team is not stated in the petition. It is claimed that there has been a breach of contract, at all events, and that the athletic association should square its account with the student. On account of the $75 not being paid, the attorneys say Sufinsky has been obliged to quit his school work. The student manager of athletics, it is only fair to say, is determined to fight the claim. He says that no promise was made to pay Sufinsky, and that the $25 the player obtained was borrowed from the association's president.

WOODSTOCK, N. B., JAN. 3, 1906

The Age for Fattening.
It requires about half as much grain to produce a hundred pounds of gain on calves as on two-year-olds. The Missouri Agricultural College has definitely demonstrated that the most profitable age to fatten cattle is while they are still young. The older the animal the more food is required to produce a given gain. Other stations have arrived at the same result. The Central Experimental Station Farm at Ottawa, Canada, found by comparing 1,000 pounds live weight in the case of calves, yearlings, two and three-year-olds that the profit for each one thousand pounds was: Calves, $31; yearlings, $27; two-year-olds, $19.10; three-year-olds, 12.80. When all the cattle of all ages were purchased at 4 cents a pound and sold fat at 5 cents, the profit on $1,000 invested in feeding was: Calves, $557.50; yearlings, $284; two-year-olds, $198.75; three-year-olds, $177.50.—F. The British "Combine."
A contribution to the discussions on the existence of combines in England is furnished by the history of certain contracts entered into recently by the Central London Railway. The railway asked for tenders for the construction of 560 cars. An examination of the bids submitted showed that the manufacturers of railway rolling stock were acting as a huge "combine." The variations in quotations were slight, and the net result would be that if the railway accepted the most favorable of them the price would be £1,300 per car. The company did not propose to be held up in that way, and it invited tenders from the continent, with the consequence that contracts were given abroad for 280 cars at £850 per car, 140 were given to the Brush Company at a similar figure, and the remaining 140 were distributed among the British firms at £975—the same firms who formerly demanded £1,300 per car. This is how the "combine" works in a free-trade country, and those who profess to see no difference in its operation there and its operation in a highly protected country can only be commiserated on the severe case of mental astigmatism with which they are afflicted.
