

News of Hartland and Vicinity

FRED. H. STEVENS, Reporter, and Manager Hartland Branch Office.

WOODSTOCK, N. B., JAN. 3, 1906

Adair's Camp.

This camp is located on the north branch of the Becaguimac and is now in charge of Herbert and William Adair who are getting lumber for F. E. Syres & Co. There are fifteen men and two pairs of horses getting out spruce for next season's cut in Sayre's big mill at Hartland. Herbert Adair is one of the finest bosses a woodsman ever worked for. He treats his men like men and his employees find it a pleasure to do their level best for him.

Our cook is Mr. Adams from Millville and is one of the cleverest in the province. One cannot say too much of the quality of his bread and general cooking. When we come to the camp at night with an able-bodied appetite we are always dead sure of finding the great lay-out just immense.

Scott Shaw, son of B. N. Shaw, has a big bay team and the crew consists of Scott himself, the teamster, his brother Frank who is team-tender, George Lindsay who prepares the road through the forest, Jacob Wallace, yard-tender and James Lindsay and Leslie Wallace, choppers. This outfit is able to foot up from 90 to 125 logs every day.

Adair's fine team of grays is driven by Joseph L. Thornton, Wardie Thornton tends grip, Herbert Adair and Woodie Jones, choppers, and Mr. Allen, swamper, and they put up about the same number of logs per day.

Any person who wants to visit an ideal 20th century lumber camp will find one here and be sure of a hearty welcome and a good bite to eat.

Mrs. Murdoch Matheson.

Mrs. Murdoch Matheson, one of the oldest residents of the village, died on Wednesday evening, December 27th, after a tedious illness of a little more than a year. She was 62 years of age and had lived here for upwards of 50 years. Her husband who was a well-known railway contractor, and who also conducted a blacksmith business here, died some half dozen years ago. Five children survive, who are D. W. Matheson, of Woodstock, Mrs. J. E. Barrs, Moncton, Mrs. D. H. Pyne, Fitchburg, Mass., Mrs. W. D. Keith and Miss Clara Matheson, Hartland.

Mrs. Matheson was a woman of large sympathies and kindly disposition. She therefore bore the esteem of all who knew her. Her long illness was borne with remarkable patience.

The funeral services were held at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Keith, where she died, and were conducted by Rev. H. H. Marr and Rev. G. A. Ross. The remains were laid beside her husband in the burying ground near the home where they lived so many years.

Rev. Burton W. Morgan occupied the pulpit of the Lower Baptist church on Sunday morning and delivered a sermon highly acceptable to the congregation. Mr. Morgan is proving himself to be one of the brightest young men that Hartland has turned out.

The union movement among churches is making itself shown in Hartland to a gratifying extent. For some time the two Baptist and the Methodist congregations have been having their week-night services together, where heretofore they had been held separately; and on Sunday the Baptist Sunday schools united.

At the meeting of the local lodge of I. O. G. T. the other evening there was a Christmas tree and program to add zest to the occasion.

A Happy New Year

For friends and patrons. We wish you a Happy New Year, Plenty and Prosperity. Trade with us and these three blessings will be a sure bet assured. The good values in all the varied lines we handle will do for your welfare. Our old patrons and new ones will find it true. Number, we make a specialty of carrying the best grades of goods, and in most cases prices are no more than others for inferior qualities.

LOCALS.

The village and country schools reopen next Monday.

Flaming's mill began its season's operations on Monday.

Among his other Christmas gifts E. Alexander reckons a fine baby girl born on December 25th.

There was a union Watchnight service in the Lower Baptist church, conducted by Rev'ds. H. H. Marr and C. T. Phillips.

The hauling and shipping of produce is in full blast now; the roads are good and loaded teams come in great numbers from every direction.

One evening prior to Christmas Rev. O. E. Steeves was presented with a substantial sum of money as a token of appreciation by his parishioners.

The New Year dawned with a bright smile as broad as the land we live in. It gave immediate, if not lasting, promise of a very happy New Year indeed.

The congregation of the Lower United Baptist church presented their pastor, Rev. C. T. Phillips, with a fur cap and to Mrs. Phillips a hanging lamp as a Christmas remembrance.

While splitting wood the other evening Guy McMullin cut his foot so severely that the surgical attendant found it necessary to take six stitches in the wound. He will be laid up for several weeks.

Near midnight on Friday the rain fell in a torrential downpour, there was a flash of lightning and a roll of thunder. In many respects this has so far been a mild winter and most certainly a thunder storm in December reminds one of the July days.

PERSONALS.

Miss Marion Stevens returns to Presque today.

Gerald Beirsto, Lakeville, was here the other day.

Frank Hagerman has been quite ill, but is about again.

J. A. Hayden, Woodstock, was in the village last week.

George S. McLaughlan and family were in Woodstock last week.

Miss Mildred McGibbon of Woodstock has been visiting Mrs. C. T. Phillips.

Mrs. J. Sterling King, Woodstock, was visiting her parents here last week.

Geo. A. Horton and W. H. Horne, St. John were at the Exchange recently.

Frank Campbell of St. John was here last week to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Campbell.

Rev. A. A. Rideout spent Christmas and last week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Rideout.

Mrs. Frank E. McGee of Beaconsfield, Victoria Co., has been visiting at Somerville and at Carlisle.

Mrs. Percy Graham and Mrs. W. W. Ross attended the Masonic "At Home" at Woodstock last week.

Mrs. C. J. Connelly of Harland and Mrs. Albert Plummer of Waterville have been visiting in St. John.

E. M. Sipprell of St. John was at Somerville over Sunday visiting his sister Mrs. Ruth Carpenter who is very ill of lagrippe.

George R. Burt left on Wednesday for British Columbia to visit his son, George F. Burt, who has been in the West for ten years.

J. W. Plummer of Fort Fairfield has been visiting his former home at Waterville. He expects to remove soon to Oregon to make his home.

Mrs. Gideon Steeves and young son who have been visiting in New England cities are visiting Hartland friends on her way home to Albert Co.

On New Year's Day Mrs. Percy Graham entertained a number of her Woodstock friends, including her father and sister, Mr. George F. and Miss Lou Smith, Miss Dibblee and Miss Dennison.

On New Year's Day a party consisting of Misses Florence Snow, Maud Steeves, Lena Hayward, Messrs. Geo. B. True, Harold Montgomery and Eldon Clarke drove up from Woodstock and took in the towns attraction's and departed for home in the evening.

On Wednesday Mrs. Matilda Day and her son Trueman, left on the long journey to Everett, Washington, to live with her older son, M. Nelson Day, who went there last summer. Mrs. Day is an aged lady and the trip seemed to her friends like a great undertaking. Both will be missed from this vicinity where they have spent their lifetime.

The Archbishop's Crusade.

Archbishop Bruchesi's crusade against intemperance within his diocese is a movement from which great results may be expected. There are dioceses in the Province of Quebec where for many years the retail sale of liquor to be consumed on the premises has been inhibited, but they are districts, so far as we know, in which there are no large cities. Archbishop Bruchesi's see, on the other hand, includes the largest city in Canada, and one in which the places where liquor is sold are altogether too numerous, and the consumption of intoxicants too great.

While there are wide differences of opinion as to what are the best remedies for drunkenness there is no difference of opinion as to the gravity of the evils which it inflicts on the community. One of the marked improvements in social conditions during the nineteenth century was the spread of temperate habits in the use of spirits. There was a time within the memory of living men when the man who refused the offer of drink was regarded as a curiosity. That has long since passed away, and today it is as common to find men who are teetotalers as it is to find the opposites. These encouraging results were reached by the introduction of rules of voluntary abstinence and by the increase of restrictive legislative regulation. It was natural that enthusiasts, seeing the enormous advantages of voluntary teetotalism were fascinated by the idea that there should be compulsory teetotalism. Much of the energy that used to be expended on the making of voluntary converts has of late been transferred to bringing about legislative prohibition. Contemporary with that there has been a reaction, and it is doubtful if our communities are as sober today as they were a few years ago. Certainly striking statistics can be produced which seem to answer the question in the negative. Never was there a time when intemperance brought severer punishment to the transgressor and, unfortunately, to those connected with him. In the machinery by which the highly-organized work of the world of today is transacted there is no room for the unreliable drinker, and he is ruthlessly swept aside. The consequences of insobriety are therefore more destructive and appalling than ever they were, while the tide of temperance propaganda, with its saving methods, has apparently abated or spent itself. There seems to be a need of the revival of the moral and restrictive movement. We must cease to think that because the sweeping legislative measures of which we dreamed cannot be obtained it is useless to try to do anything. The agencies of agitation and remonstrance have brought us a long way since the days when a teetotaler had to endure something very like persecution. Their value and efficacy are not spent, and there is still a great work for them to perform. It is along these lines that Archbishop Bruchesi is disposed to proceed, and his movement will be watched with interest and sympathy, and let us hope that it will be imitated and duplicated in many other parts of the Dominion.—Toronto Globe.
