An Ecclesiastical Hat.

A milliner who works in a large city says that one day a woman came into the store very much excited, and wanted the trimming on her new hat changed. She said that it had been trimmed on the wrong side.

"But," said the saleswoman, "the trimming is on the left side. That is where it ought to be."

"It doesn't make any difference whether it ought to be in front or back, or right or left, it's got to be on the church side."

"Church side!" gasped the astonished girl. "Yes, church side. I sit right next the wall in church, and I'm not going to have all that trimming next the wall. I want it on the other side, so the whole congregation can see it."

The trimming was promptly placed on the "church side" of the hat.

PAINS!

For Society Folk.

People of fashion do things sometimes that cause pains in the stomach and aches in the kidneys. Hard work and hard pleasure have pretty nearly the same results. A sour stomach, a bad breath and pains about the heart and head are caused by gases from the stomach. Hutch cures them quickly. You take one when you feel badly. Three at night to move the bowels next morning, then one after each meal and your trouble will go away. It is nature's own remedy for pain. They are chocolate coated and contain nothing that is injurious. There is nothing like Hutch in the world. Its a doctor for ten cents. At your druggists.

Country Editor's Troubles.

From The Polkville (N. C.) Clarion.

A humorist up north is trying to sell us a cash register.

We print our paper Thursdays; everything of importance happens on Fridays.

Running a country newspaper is like chasing an antelope—the longer you run the further behind you get.

Notwithstanding the apparently universal impression to the contrary, the editor of this paper is always willing to accept cash on subscriptions.

Correspondents are respectfully requested to get their communications in by Wednesday noon of each week. We are always full Wednesday afternoon—"we" being used, of course, in the editorial sense.

A young business man of New York, who had not long been married, was fondly greeted by his wife one evening with the joyful announcement that she had that afternoon received a diploma from the cooking school at which she had been an assiduous student.

Evidently the husband did not exhibit that degree of enthusiasm in the matter that she expected, for the young wife said in a disappointed tone:

"Aren't you glad that I have been enrolled as a competent cook? Just see, I've prepared the whole dinner! I gave special attention to this dish here. Guess what it is."

As she spoke the husband had endeavored to masticate a particularly tough piece of the contents of the dish referred to. Seeing his look of wonder, the young wife again playfully said:

"Guess what it is."
"I don't know, responded the husband, uncertainly. "Is it the diploma?"

The losses of one of the foreign fire insurance companies in the San Francisco diaster recalls the fact that this company was originally projected by Daniel Defoe, author of Robinson Crusoe, at the time when he was pamphleteering for the union of Scotland with England. Defoe's fire insurance project was left in abeyance while he turned his energies to the Bank of Scotland. In the first stage of the South Sea speculation this fire insurance company was organized, chiefly for providing parishes with fire engines and paid for by assessments on rate payers. This was the first paid fire department in the world. This old corporation and one other, also hard hit in San Francisco, are the only survivors of the 7,000 projects floated in England in the South Sea era of speculative bubbles.

Abdul The Damned.

The Sultan has partly, and will probably wholly, surrender to the demands of Great Britain that he clear out from what Britain alleges to be Egyptian territory and that the question then be settled by arbitration. The British demand has been put in such a form as involves a final surrender by the Porte of any claim upon Egypt. Considerable credence is given in intelligent quarters to the story that the Sultan is a doomed man and cannot live many months. He is said to be intemperate. If that means alcoholism it is a curious charge against a Mohammedan padishah. The prospects of his death raises surmises as to what may follow. If he has not been a scrupulous, Abdul Hamid has been a strong and astute ruler. Neither his brother the legitimate heir to the throne according to Mohammedan law, nor his eldest son, whom he is said to desire as his successor, has given indications of having the strength of character and genius in statecraft which have enabled him by playing the discordant elements within and without his realm against each other to preserve from destruction a rotten system which has only enemies within it and outside of it, and which is a sad anachronism in the world of to-day. Undistracted by illusions concerning the facts of his situation, untroubled by any scruples of conscience in his manner of dealing with them, Abdul Hamid has had wonderful success in carrying out a policy which has earned for him such blistering appellations as 'Abdul the Damned,' and 'The Great Assassin.' When a man is fighting for his crown and his life, he is hable to grasp any weapon he can. Viewed from any point, a satisfactory solution of the Turkish problem seems impossible. Abdul Hamid has only succeeded in postponing the inevitable disruption and will leave his successor a most unenviable throne.—The Witness.

Intellectual Drinks.

'Tea and coffee are drugs—drugs solely,' said a chemist. 'They stimulate the brain, and the reaction from this stimulation is not perceptible. Hence tea and coffee are excellent brain spurs. For a little while they do, actually, make us more intelligent than we naturally are. That is why they are so popular. It is why we chemists call them intellectual drinks.'

'Alcohol, whether it be taken in the form of champagne or beer or whiskey, is not an intellectual drink, but the opposite. From the beginning alcohol stupefies instead of enlivening the brain. But it makes us talk. If we were not enlivening, how should it make us talk? Alas, alcohol makes us talk, but we say under its influence the things we should not. Alcohol deadens the inhibitory, the prohibitive centres of the brain. It stupefies the brain muscle which knows what things should not be told. And hence while drinking we talk, but oh, how we blush in the cold gray light of the morning after to remember what we said.'

Flying-Fish.

Flying-Fish must have been watched ever since the first mariners ventured upon the sea, and yet the question of the manner in which they perform their flights is apparently unsettled. Doctor Abel of the Austrian Geological Survey, in a recent memoir on these fishes, maintains that the initial impetus by means of which they launch themselves is due to screw-like movements of the tail fin, and that the wings are in no sense propelling organs, but act simply as parachutes. On the other hand, it is maintained by other observers that the flight of flying-fishes is due to incessant and extremely rapid movements of their wing-like fins. It has been suggested that there may be different species of fish, and that consequently there may be truth in both views.

He Had Not Lost It.

A London bus driver had shouted, "Igh 'Oborn!" till the passenger on the seat behind him could no longer resist the temptation to make a joke.

"Excuse me," said the passenger, "but haven't you dropped something?"

"I see you're drivin' at," returned the driver, keenly, "but never mind, I shall pick it up when we get to Hoxford street."—London News.

I once met a little fellow on the road carrying a basket of blackberries, and said to him:

"Sammy, where did you get such berries?"

"Over there sir, in the briars."
"Won't your mother be glad to see you come home with a basketful of such nice, ripe fruit?"

"Yes sir," said Sammy, "she always seems glad when I show her the berries, and I don't tell her anything about the briars in my feet."

I rode on. But Sammy's remarks had given me a lesson; and I resolved that henceforth in my daily life I would try to think of the berries, and say nothing about the briars.—Sel.

It is said that the world "caucus" originated in Boston in the following manner: Samuel Adams and about twenty others, shipbuilder, used to hold a "caulkers' meeting regularly before every election to form plans as to candidates for office. Hence arose the name caucus.

Tea Flavor and Strength

THE greater body and richness of Indian tea when combined with the delicately flavored but thinner tea of Ceylon, produces that "rich fruity flavor" of Red Rose Tea—a tea that is strong and goes further—requires less to make a cup of equal strength than any brand of Ceylon tea alone.

Red Rose Tea combines the strength and richness of Indian tea and the delicacy and fragrance of Ceylon tea.
