The Good Young Men Are Not All Going West.

Young fellows who do heroic things are the first to make light of them. They are not generally fond of the lime-light, and the two who set out one evening a couple of weeks ago on a raging current, in a home made canvas canoe, to rescue two boys who went down river on a flimsy float, are no exception to the rule. Neither of the chaps knew much about a canoe, and one of them had always been mortally afraid of the water.

To be a brave soldier, when one has been trained to the profession of arms, would not seem to be a hard thing. Many men have been brave soldiers. But to think quickly and to act effectively in a most dangerous undertaking that presents itself to the mind for the first time all in a second, requires more brains, more coolness and more fine courage than many of us think of or remember.

Let those who will go to Alberta or Saskatchewan, as long as fellows like Fred Clark and Tom Gabel stay in this country it ought to be a pretty good sort of country.

Last Friday Mr. and Mrs. J. Chipman Hartley presented to Thomas Gabel and G. Fred Clark each a beautiful gold locket containing on one side the monogram of the recipient and on the other side the inscription "For rescuing R. Parley Hartley, May 4th 1906."
