Died of Consumption, but this Linden lady used Psychine and is strong and well

"My mother, brother and sister died of consumption," says Ella M. Cove, of Linden, N.S., "and I myself suffered for two years from a distressing cough and weak lungs. I suppose I inherited a tendency in this direction?"

"But thank God I used Psychine and it built me right up. My lungs are now strong. I enjoy splendid health, and I owe it all to Psychine."

Consumption, whether hereditary or contracted, cannot stand before Psychine. Psychine kills the germ, no matter how it attacks the lungs. Psychine builds up the body and makes it strong and able to resist disease. Psychine is an aid to digestion and a maker of pure, rich blood. The greatest giver of general health is

Your Fortune Told by Tea Leaves.

Reading fortunes from the tea leaves left in the cup can, with the exercise of a little imagination and humor, produce much merriment. It comes in opportunely at the doubtful half hour just after a 'company,' when the machinery of pleasure giving is not always running quite smoothly.

After the tea has been drunk—leaving but a few drops to 'carry the grounds'—the enquirer must make a wish, repeating it in mind three times, after which the tea cup must be whirled around vigorously to throw the grounds as much as possible into the upper part of the cup. This must be done three times from left to right, when the cup is turned over into the saucer to 'settle the affairs of the future,' given three turns again from left to right and then handed to the fortune teller, without looking into the cup one's self, or else, so the oracle says, the spell will be broken.

The prophet or prophetess then picks up and begins reading from the bottom of the cup (the past) and then around spiral fashion until the top (present or near future) is reached; or three cups may be used—one for the past, the second for the present, and third for the future.

A man is indicated by a long, hard leaf, with something that suggests a hat or cane or legs that fork.

A woman by a light-colored leaf that spreads to indicate a gown, or with something at top that may be imagined to represent a woman's headgear. A figure in kneeling posture denotes an offer of marriage either made or received. Groups of dots near mean acceptance. If these are absent the suit will be rejected.

One figure alone, surrounded by a group of grounds, promises a lover or sweetheart. A heart promises a love affair and much pleasure.

Two hearts a marriage. Two figures near together, with no grounds very near, means an engagement.

Three figures together is the sign of a speedy marriage.

A love letter is indicated by four dots forming a square, if near the top, it will be received in a short time. An extra dot within the square or just outside, means good news; many small specks about it, bad news. Three dots in a group promises the granting of your wish, as does a triangle.

A number of tea leaves, short and tall, means a company of great and small. Crosses, adversity. A ring a happy marriage.

Dots in the form of a parallelogram sickness or bad news.

Fine dots reaching in a long line, a journey. Many dots clustered about the end of the line means many new friends and pleasures.

An anchor, if at the bottom of the cup, means success; at the top, love; in the middle, constancy. If surrounded by 'clouds' the course of true love will not run smooth.

A star, if not surrounded by 'clouds,' means happiness; if circled by dots, long life.

Mountain, favor of persons of high positions, social success. If clouded on its summit, ill success in society.

Serpent, an enemy. If near the top of the cup, you will be successful, and finally, turn him or her into a friend. If near the bottom and clouded around, the enemy will cause you sorrow.

Fish, lucky news from over seas. If clouds are near, the reverse.

Seven dots in a row, great prosperity. A straight line, if surrounded by many grounds, foretells an illness.

Wavy lines if circled by dots, money; if cloudy, reverse of fortune, either past or to come—according to their position in the cup, near the bottom or top.

Tears are indicated by drops at the bottom of the cup, or by many thick dots there.

A succession of large dots in a line foretells difficulties to be overcome. Many fine dots among them, unfriendliness will be superadded.

A leaf folded over the rim promises something unpleasant.

If the rim of the cup is clear a happy future is assured.

Liquor not to Blame.

People who have an idea that liquor is responsible for sending most convicts to prison would have been sadly disappointed had they been in the office at the Mountsville prison one day last week when twelve new guests were questioned. There were eight white and four colored prisoners seated upon the bench when the clerk appeared and started asking the usual questions.

"What's your name?" he asked the first of the dozen, a young white man from Fayette County.

His name was stated, and the next question touched upon his nationality.

"Of what descent are you?"

After some hesitation, and being prompted by another prisoner, the young man replied: "I was born in America."

"And do you indulge in the use of intoxicants?"

"What's them?" asked the surprised Fayette County man.

"Strong drink," expvined the clerk.

"Never touched it in my life" was the surprising response.

Asked about his religion, he said he had attended the Missionary Church in Fayette County. He knew nothing about denominations, but had heard it was a Methodist mission. Others said they had attended Baptist, Lutheran, and Catholic churches, and only two of the twelve said they ever used stimulants. One said he took a drink occasionally, and the other said he used beer moderately. Not one of the four colored men had been addicted to the use of intoxicants, and only three of the dozen had used tobacco.

"They must have belonged to the same Sunday school class," observed a caller at the prison who heard the responses of the dozen prisoners.

"It is nothing unusual to get a temperance crowd in prison," one of the prison officials stated. Many of them get here through intemperance, but many of them who get here have never been addicted to the use of intoxicants.—[Washington Star.]

The Intercolonial Railway.

Mr. Emerson, in his speech before the House of Commons upon the intercolonial Railway, accounted for the increasing deficits almost entirely because of the low freight and passenger rates which had been established for various reasons. Mr. Moriz, M. P. for Dorchester, however, in answer to questions, was told in the House that the number of employees on the Intercolonial has been increased from 5,037 in 1899 to 8,540 in 1905 despite the fact that the mileage has only been increased by 125 miles in that time. The employees of the government railway have increased, indeed, but about seventy percent, while the length of railway has increased less than eight percent. The length of the Intercolonial Railway at present time is about one thousand seven hundred miles, and the figures quoted show that it has about five employees a mile, while the Grand Trunk only has about three and the Canadian Pacific about one and a half a mile. Railway servants must have very soft snaps, indeed, on the Intercolonial, and 'sinecures may, perhaps, account for a considerable portion of the deficits. Mr. Emerson could discharge 3,400 of the Intercolonial employees; and then have as many per mile as the Grand Trunk, or he could discharge 5,950 and then have as many per mile as the Canadian Pacific. Can it be that this is an army of locusts which is eating up the government railway, or are so many employees really necessary for the businesslike management of the roads.—Montreal Witness.

After a fight on James Island, South Carolina, in 1862, there was among the wounded a young fellow suffering intensely and making an unusual amount of noise. General Williams, in command, when passing through the hospital quarters approached the soldier, and in a gruff voice asked: "What's the matter with you?"

The soldier, pointing to his foot, replied: "I'm wounded."

The General said: "Stop your noise! Stop your noise! There are men lying around with their heads knocked off, and not saying a word."

WHAT DID SHE SAY.

Men Made It Up, but Without Reckoning with Her.

Just as a barber in a shop on 11th, st, near Chestnut, had finished lathering the face of one of his best customers, a well-known business man, there swept into the place a handsomely dressed, young and pretty woman, who, as she rushed up to the man with the soap sudden face, said:

"Dearie, they told me at the store that you came here, and, as I have to hurry to catch the train, I had to run over here to say goodby."

She rattled this off in one gasp, and, stooping over, she landed a smacking kiss on the lathered man's mouth. Wiping the soap-suds off her lips with her dainty handkerchief, the woman bounced out, saying as she went, "Now, remember, you must write to me every day. Goodby."

The barber, in surprise, said, "Why, I didn't know you were married."

He was more surprised when the man who had been addressed as "Dearie" answered, "I ain't, and what's more, I never saw that woman before."

The barber's laughter was interrupted by a man who was being shaved in the next chair, who said, "That was my wife."

Shaving operations were suspended all around until the second man could explain. The story was simple enough. The woman was going to Atlantic City for a short stay, and she was to bid her husband goodby at his place of business, which is near the barber shop. Arrived at the husband's store, the woman found that hubby was at the barber's, and, time being precious, she hurried to the barber shop to say her adieu.

As the first man she came to in the place looked, as he lay lathered, as much like her husband as the husband did himself, the wife naturally mistook him for her lord and master.

"But why didn't you stop her in time?" asked the man who had been kissed.

"I couldn't," was the reply, because my barber was working on a ticklish point on my chin, and if I had opened my mouth I would certainly have got cut. But, of course, I didn't imagine she was going to kiss you."

The kissed man, as if to console the husband, said: "But she thought it was you she was kissing."

The husband, with a "that's so," agreed. After both men had got out of their chairs the husband extended his hand to the man his wife kissed, and, as the two shook, the husband said: "It's all right; let's have a drink."

And they went across the street and had several.—Philadelphia Record.
