"You'll Have to Advertise."

When the Tariff Commission met at Fredericton, N. B., the other day complaint was made by certain Canadian shoe manufacturers that American shoe men advertised their goods extensively in Canada and secured a large share in the Canadian market. To meet this competition a demand was made for an increase in the duties on shoes imported from the United States. One Canadian shoe manufacturer, Mr. Charles Slater, dissented and declared that the present tariff was adequate, and that under it a good Canadian shoe, if properly advertised, would hold its own against any competition from the United States. He further stated that were a reasonable reduction granted on the shoe men's raw material the Canadian manufacturer could far more than hold his own against American competition in the foreign markets. The reply of the Hon. W. S. Fielding to those who demanded higher protection was, therefore, pertinent and reasonable. He said: "Gentlemen, you'll have to advertise. You can get relief from printers' ink."

There is a good deal of practical business philosophy in that advice. It suggests to Canadian manufacturers that, no matter what tariff advantage may be granted to them by Parliament, their industries must languish in competition with wide-awake American firms if they do not mix good brains with their raw materials. Out-of-date machinery and out-grown business methods are responsible for not a little of the trouble for which remedy is sought in a higher tariff. The Canadian manufacturer who produces a good article and makes its goodness known to the purchasing public through the intelligent use of printers' ink is satisfied with the present tariff protection. Other Canadian manufacturers who may make an article equally good but who hide under a bushel all information as to that goodness clamor for more protection from the Government.

The Boston Herald has a fitting word on this point:—"This Canadian complaint that our Yankee shoe men advertise too extensively sounds a bit babyish. Suppose they try advertising for themselves. It will probably open their eyes." And so it would. And the eyes of other complainers might be opened by a similar process. "Gentlemen you'll have to advertise."

Criticism Within the Party.

It is suggestive that the Liberals of North Wellington have taken occasion to point out the rather large yearly expenditure of $81,000,000, and to urge a material reduction before adversity increases the difficulties of retrenchment. This is the line of criticism that usually comes from the Opposition, and that it has proceeded from within the party makes it all the more worthy of attention. It shows that in spite of the absolute failure of the Opposition the government is not absolved from that healthy criticism which seems a necessary steady influence. The Opposition has failed completely in all the useful functions which it is possible for an Opposition to serve. Where the government has heeded the appeal of private interests for favors at public expense the Opposition has demanded greater and greater surrenders. Every easy descent has been encouraged by Opposition influence, and the acceptance by the leader of a salary from the government will make the Opposition, if possible, less useful. In fact the one good purpose served by the Opposition has been the full and complete demonstration of its utter lack of capacity.

In such a situation it is a healthy and reassuring sign that the necessary criticism and candid advice have come from within the party. Our buoyant revenues, unprecedented in our history, are the result of borrowing. It is not European gold, but European goods, that we really borrow. Goods flow not from where they are abundant to where they are scarce, but from where they are for sale to where people are prepared to buy them. During the borrowing era they flow from lenders to borrowers, and during the period of repayment they move back again to the lenders. Our great revenues are the result of the influx of goods of an era of borrowing, strengthened by our great wealth-producing capacity. While it is true that the Dominion's debts have increased but little during the recent period of phenomenal growth, our railways and other large corporations have been borrowing on an extensive scale. All this enterprise is fully justified, but we must not expect to escape the influences of occasional periods of repayment. While there is nothing in sight but a time of expanding outputs from farms, forests, mines, fisheries, and factories, the wisdom of improving the situation to wipe off some of our debts cannot be questioned. Voices of caution from within the party should be heeded, and while they emphasize the failure of the technical Opposition, they serve as a healthy reminder of the need of caution even in times of phenomenal expansion.—Toronto Globe.

Good Books Cost Too Much.

In an article on University Presses The New York Post says that one of the good purposes such a Press might serve is the production of serious literature at a low price.

It is one of the weaknesses of our Anglo-Saxon civilization (for in this matter the argument applies to England even more than to ourselves), that whereas the price of newspapers, of magazines, and of fiction has steadily tended downwards, such has not been the case with what may be described conveniently as serious literature—literature that ranges from poetry through history to philosophy. How this affects our national position may be shown by a comparison with France. That country has a standard price of publication, 70 cents a volume, at which the bulk of current literature, both light and serious, is produced. Bourget's latest novel and Henri Houssaye on Waterloo appear on the book stall side by side and at the same price. And to say that this is simply because French serious literature is better written than ours is an exaggeration. A few years ago a London publisher set out to produce a translation of the complete works of Nietzsche. The first volume met with little encouragement; the second was accompanied by a slip from the publisher stating that unless the public responded better he would have to abandon the enterprise; the third has never appeared. In France, all of Nietzsche's works have long since been translated, and the least sold had run some years ago into several thousands.

Here we have not a question of style, but of price; not of the positive value of Nietzsche, but of intellectual curiosity. And we get a rough demonstration that in France, with less than forty millions of people, there are probably from five to ten persons who buy serious books to one in the English-speaking countries with nearly four times the population. If that is only approximately so, it is a terrible reproach to our civilization; and it is partly the result of the inflated prices charged for new works of serious literature. It should not be forgotten that the class of the community which buys, or might buy, such books, is one that feels very keenly the difference between paying less than a dollar or from two to six dollars. In Paris the publisher who should raise his price would lose his public; in London or New York the publisher who should lower his price would find the public unprepared and irresponsible.

"Coal Oil Johnny."

Just as the year went out the papers reported that Coal Oil Johnny was dying on a farm in Pennsylvania, in possession of the necessities of life, but no more, and with his faithful wife at his bedside as his only companion. Everybody knows about Coal Oil Johnny. He had the misfortune to grow up in the Pennsylvania oil region before people of superior discernment had protected the folks of that locality from the hazard of sudden subjection to the trials of fortuitous wealth. Johnny was never taught so much as to read and write. At twenty-one, in 1862, he came in, most unexpectedly, to a petroleum fortune of about three million dollars. How he spent it all in seven months is part of the recorded history of the American people. His last forty years, the papers say, have been spent in regret because of his earlier folly. Poor Johnny! He knew no better. Worse men than he, since his day, have spent more money in worse ways. And he had still, at last news, the companionship of a faithful wife! That could hardly have happened to him except by a miracle unless he had got rid of those millions. Poverty is a severe strain on the matrimonial prosperity of persons not used to poverty, and sudden riches are very apt to upset the domestic equilibrium of persons who are not used to money. Whatever turns one's habits of life upside down strains all established relations. Strong characters will keep staunch through all vicissitudes, and disciplined and resourceful folk will adapt themselves to changes better than people of less training. But as far as concerns domestic happiness, the most fortunate adjustment seems to be a moderate and steady progress as years increase towards easier pecuniary conditions. It is probably pleasant to have money to spend in one's old age. In youth there are many other available forms of entertainment.—[Harper's Weekly.]

Mrs. A. A. Vanbuskirk, Robinson Street, Moncton, N. B.; writes:—"For years I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for my children when they have colds in winter. I first used it with my daughter who suffered from a severe form of asthma. The least exposure to cold would lay her up and she would nearly suffocate for want of breath. I must say I found it to be a most satisfactory treatment and it has entirely cured her. It seemed to go direct to the diseased parts and bring the desired relief."

In the hour of emergency, when croup or colds seize your child, the cheap substitutes will fail you, but Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine never disappoints. 25 cts. a bottle, at all dealers.

WHAT A BOY CAN DO.

These are some of the things a boy can do: He can shout so loud the air turns blue; He can make all sounds of beast and bird, And a thousand more they never heard.

He can crow or cackle, chirp or cluck, Till he fools the rooster, hen or duck, He can mock the dog or lamb or cow, And the cat herself can't beat his "me-ow."

He has sounds that are ruffled, striped or plain;

He can thunder by like a railway-train, Stop at the stations a breath, and then, Apply the steam, and be off again.

He has all of his powers in such command, He can turn right into a full brass band, With all the instruments ever played, And march away as a street parade.

You can tell that a boy is very ill If he's wide awake and is keeping still; But earth would be—God bless their noise!— A dull old place if there were no boys. —Sel.
