Sow Clover About the Buildings.

A little clover seed, left after sowing the fields, may be used to excellent advantage by scattering a few handfuls here and there about the buildings, especially in the backyard, and along the lanes and roadsides. If clover were not such a common farm crop, it would be used largely in a decorative way. No other plant makes such an effective flower-bed as a mass of clover bloom. Its foliage is unsurpassed. No perfume distilled by nature or man excels the fragrance of its crimson blossom. Unlike many flowering plants, it is at no stage of its growth unsightly. While it holds the ground, it subdues noxious weeds, and, dying, leaves the soil in better condition to grow whatever may succeed it. If it be considered too common, or not altogether suitable to make a sward for a lawn, it has, at any rate, a place in the backyard. A few pounds of clover seed cost little, and are not worth holding over to another year. Sow it in the bare spots, or the places where the weeds grow rampant every summer. It will help to keep them down. Broadcast it everywhere there is a chance for a seed to sprout. If a few plants come up, they will in all probability, seed more ground next year. And a few plants are better worth while than the exotics in the nursery catalogue.

Points of Etiquette.

Finger bowls are not put on the table until after the dessert is removed.

It is the worst possible form for a man to take a woman's arm, by day or night.

When leaving a car a man should precede the women, so as to assist her if necessary.

In addressing a newly married couple at a wedding reception it is usual to congratulate the groom and to wish the bride great happiness.

It is not looked upon as good form to announce a meal by the ringing of a bell. That custom does very well for a railroad station, but is now seldom used in private houses.

When taking a lady in to dinner or at any indoor entertainment a man offers his left arm, but in the street he must always take the outside, no matter which arm he has to offer.

The expenses incident to a wedding are, with few exceptions borne by the family of the bride. The groom's expenses, with the exception of flowers and souvenirs for the bridesmaids and ushers, begin with the fee to the clergyman.

A Devoted Family.

'Yes,' said the principal of the young ladies' seminary to the proud parent, 'you ought to be happy, my dear sir, to be the father of so large a family, all the members of which appear to be devoted to one another.'

'Large family! Devoted?' gasped the old gentleman in amazement; 'what on earth do you mean, ma'am?'

'Why, yes, indeed,' said the principal, beaming through her glasses; 'no fewer than eleven of Kate's brothers have been here this winter to take her to the theatre, and she tells me she expects the tall one with the blue eyes again to-morrow.'

'It beats me,' remarked the clerk in the hardware store, 'how old-fashioned steel-yards hold their own. I can remember how popular they were with certain farmer's wives when I was a boy in the country, and what a delight it was to me to be allowed to try my hand at weighing a roll of butter or a bag of wool. But even then the women and children were the only ones who seemed to take much stock in steel-yards. The tradesmen who bought our produce very flatly said that the figures that they represented not only could, but did, tell lies and they proceeded to weigh all our stuff over again on scales that were supposed to have the quality of truthfulness.'

'Up to the present day steel-yards have had the reputation of being unreliable, but in spite of their ill-repute people still buy them. Just why so many householders and tradesmen retain their fondness for an antiquated style of weighing machine when there are so many new and approved contrivances on the market is a puzzle, but, even though mystified, we keep a supply on hand for the benefit of those who stick to the old way of doing things.'

Heresy of Faith Cures.

Christian Scientists were emphatically denounced during an interesting discussion initiated by Archdeacon Sinclair at the London diocesan conference the other day.

The discussion arose on a resolution moved by the archdeacon, and carried, in the following terms:

'That this conference, while emphasizing the power of faith in healing, views the main outline of the teaching and attitude of Christian Scientists as antagonistic both to Christianity and science.'

'There is just one good thing about Christian Science, and that is it insists very strongly on the power of faith,' the archdeacon remarked. 'That is the really essential part of Christianity, and it has been somewhat neglected in the church's teachings.'

'Christian Scientists hold that there is no pain, no sin, and that matter is unreal.'

'A lady friend of mine was ill and she was advised to see a Christian Scientist. She did so, but said to the Scientist: 'There is one condition which I must impose before I allow you to treat me.' 'What is that?' said the Scientist. 'That you let me put a pinch of cayenne pepper in your right eye first.' Needless to say, my friend was not treated.'

'Faith will not cook our food, cleanse our rooms, provide sanitation. The works necessary to faith in illness are the accumulated experience and skill of the physician, surgeon and nurse. Faith, when used properly, can work wonders, but I warn all against the babblings of professors of Christian Science, falsely so called.'

Lord Halifax characterized Christian Science as an anti-Christian delusion.

'A friend of mine,' he added, 'was at a Christian Science meeting where a healer was holding forth on the theme there is no pain. My friend could not resist a temptation; he had a pin and inserted it. The healer collapsed, and the Christian Scientists left the room in confusion.'

The Bishop of London repeated his description of Christian Science as 'a gigantic heresy,' which had, however, brought to light several truths.

'The first truth said,' the bishop, 'is the influence of mind over matter. Then we must admit the sacredness of the healing art, which has been so much left out of use in modern times.'

Covered by Insurance.

A girl in the Okanagan country married a young guide and the day after the wedding the guide took out a policy for $1,500. Then, with his wife, he started for Porter's Lake with a party of sportsmen, the wife to cook and wash dishes, the man to clean fish and so on. The young guide was bitten by a rattlesnake one morning and a few days afterward he died. The widow notified her family and friends of his death in a note that said: 'Bill part away yestidy. Loss fully covered by insurance.'—Vernon, B. C., News.

A college professor, from an institution that only recently decided to admit women students, was telling of his difficulty in growing accustomed to the 'co-eds' after he had been used to classrooms full of boys.

'One morning I asked the class to write short essays, off-handed, allowing half an hour in which the papers were to be completed and handed in. The subjects, as I explained, might be of the students' own choice.'

'Select something with which you are most familiar,' I suggested.

'The one "co-ed" in the class was the first to finish her piece. As she left the room, I glanced at the title. It was "How to Make a Seven-Gored Skirt." Well, I just threw it in the wastebasket and graded her 100.'

The Difference Between Expert and Unskilful Tea Blending

THE qualities of different teas prove that there is a distinct difference between expert Red Rose blending methods and the usual methods.

Several kinds of teas may be blended, but if unskilfully selected they will not combine to make a perfect blend; they will retain their original individual characteristics with their roughness and harshness emphasized.

Such tea is bitter, poorly flavored in the cup (and there is much of it in bulk and package form on the market). It emphasizes the result of inexperience, lack of knowledge of combining qualities of different teas, imperfect blending, poor selection, and the hundred and one other causes of poor tea.

But my expert Red Rose blenders select the right grades of strong, rich Indian teas and delicate fragrant Ceylon teas, and produce Red Rose Tea with entirely new characteristics—a tea with that "rich fruity flavor"—a tea so exquisitely different and better than any brand of Ceylon alone, that no one who once tries it ever goes back to Ceylon again.
