Rev. Mr. Ross's Farewell.

The Rev. George A. Ross who has been pastor of the Methodist church in Woodstock for the last four years leaves tomorrow to assume the pastorate of the church at Hampton.

Last Sunday he preached two effective sermons, to large congregations, taking as his text in the evening a passage from Luke 13, "Strive to enter in by the narrow door."

Following his evening sermon Mr. Ross made a few remarks touching the fact that his term of service as the minister of the Methodist church here had now come to an end. To him it was a solemn and impressive moment. He was closing a chapter in his life's history and he knew that what he had written he had written. He could not tell just what had been the influence of his life and ministry upon all, but his strength was in the conviction that he had ever been actuated by a sincere and honest desire to serve the kingdom of Christ. That his judgment had sometimes been at fault might easily be true and if anything of this nature had rendered his work less successful than otherwise it would have been, it could not but be a matter of sincere regret. He was thankful for the sympathy and consideration which had been shown him during the four years of his pastorate and for the patience with which they had borne with his many infirmities. They had shown him and his many kindnesses for which he was sincerely grateful and which he could never forget. There were some, he feared, who had not understood him and whom perhaps he had not understood. He was laying down his work however with the most cordial goodwill to all though with sorrow at the reflection that he had not helped some as he could wish it had been possible to do. He would ever remember with deep appreciation those who had been constant in their support of their church and minister. The Methodist itinerancy he said furnished them with ministers of varied personality and of varied gifts. This was one of its advantages. Mr. Ross referred to his successor the Rev. Mr. Fulton as a man endowed by nature with gifts far above the ordinary and as one whose public discourses would be both interesting and instructive. He bespoke for him a cordial welcome and a sympathetic support in his work among them. He was coming to preach and to labor, not to please them, but the Master whom he served. He hoped they would trust him and co-operate with him with uniform earnestness in all that was attempted for the glory of God. To do this would be to insure his success and their progress as a church.

Mr. Ross leaves tomorrow for Hampton and on the same day the Rev. R. G. Fulton comes from Hampton to take up the work where Mr. Ross lays it down.

During his pastorate here Mr. Ross has been a working pastor and a serious student. His sermons have been pregnant with deep religious feeling, with scholarship, and with common sense. His life in Woodstock has been for good at every point, for higher religious life, higher intellectual life, good citizenship, interdenominational friendship, everything that makes for progress along right lines. He has made many warm friends not only inside his church but outside it who will be very sorry to have him go away.
