"Not In Our Set."

On the ground, apparently, that her fellow-pupils were not of sufficiently good social standing, Miss Dorothy Rodway, the daughter of a court dressmaker, was withdrawn from the Parkfield Ladies' College, High Barnet.

The sequel was a claim by the proprietress of the school, Miss Russell, in the Bloombury County Court, yesterday, against Mrs. Rodway, the court dressmaker, for £19. Of this sum £16 12s. 6d. was for fees at the college for the term ending August, 1906, in lieu of notice, for the board and tuition of Miss Rodway, while the balance was for singing and sundries for the previous term.

"Why do you resist payments?" asked Judge Bacon of Mrs. Rodway. "When you sent your daughter to school, you knew the rule about notice."

"Well," was the reply, "I complained to Miss Russell about the common girls there were in her school, and she said she was obliged to take them, or somebody else would."

"Did you stipulate with the school mistress," observed the judge, "that all her pupils should be well bred?" [Laughter.]

"Well, I sent her there for a finishing school," said Mrs. Rodway.

Mrs. Rodway went on to complain of other things in connection with the school, but his Honor pointed out to her that in her letter withdrawing the girl, after the term had begun, she had made no complaint of any kind.

In reply to the judge, the girl said there were "a lot of very low, common girls" at the school, whom she would not dream of speaking to in the street. [Laughter.]

"What is your mother?" asked the judge.

"A court dressmaker," answered the girl. "They were very common girls. One even came from Mile End. [Laughter.] My drawing master took no trouble with me—less than any master I have ever know."

"Have you known many in your seventeen years' existence?" asked the judge, amid laughter. "The sooner you are sent to a school where you will be taught firmly, and not fooled by your mother, the better it will be for you. Judgment for the plain-tiff."—English Paper.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last year was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment, Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Newspaper's Influence.

(Montreal Herald.)

The report on the South African war stores scandal, just issued in England, is a surprising reminder to a community, or to a whole nation, by a newspaper's laying itself open to an action for libel. The entire war stores scandal was raised by the Times by way of a libel suit in which that paper was mulcted in $1,250 damages. It would probably have been quite impossible to open the matter up in any way that would not have involved a libel on someone, for the newspaper is debarred from the investigating rights and the privilege of statement that belong to the lawyer in court. But the publicity that the newspaper alone can give is indispensable to the awakening of public opinion that must precede such court investigations; and as in this case, many a newspaper that is convicted of a technical libel is really performing a great and necessary service to the country. There are two ways of avoiding libel suits, one is never to say anything that is not right, the other is never to say anything.

BAD PRACTICE.

One of the worst practices of some of the gospel ministry is that of frequently in public and private complaining of poverty. This thing is a reflection on Jesus Christ, reveals a bad defect in the man's faith, and disgraces bright business men, and degrades the ministry. "The workman is worthy of his hire," and if he attends to God's business, God will care for him.

A most disgusting thing on this line is for a preacher to slick down some man of means in a public meeting and then come around for his reward. The fellow who receives the taffy sees through the slicker; if he is an honest man, he rather admires the fellow who rubs him against the grain.

Wrong Sort of Doctor.

Some time ago one of Missouri's most charming young ladies slipped and fell on the stepping stones in front of her father's house and sprained her knee. It grew so bad that she thought necessary to call in a physician. She had formed a dislike for the family doctor, so her father suggested several others, and finally it was decided to call the spruce young man with a homeopathic case that passed the house every day. They kept a sharp lookout, and when he came along called him in. The young lady modestly raised her skirts and showed him the disabled member. "That certainly is quite serious."

"Well," said she, "what shall I do?" "If I were you," he whispered, "I would send for a physician; I am a piano-tuner."

In a discussion of expensive health resorts and watering places Bishop McVickar, of Providence, said the other day:

"A friend of mine, a very stout fellow, once went to Marienbad, to get his weight reduced. He had heard great things of Marienbad, and hoped to lose 50 pounds or so with no inconvenience to himself.

"But he found the rates excessively high and the regime excessively severe, and after an interview with the hotel physician he said pettishly:

"Spare diet, long walks—I could have managed all that without coming to this expensive place."

"Yes," said the physician, "but you forget the annoyance induced by our high prices. That of itself will go a long way toward reducing your weight."

Hard Luck.

"You've got a little brother," said the nurse at breakfast. "He was born last night."

"Huh!" exclaimed Tommy. "And last night was Sunday! Poor kid! His birth-won't do him much good. Sunday's a holiday anyhow."

George Bernard Shaw, the playwright, has a good deal of contempt for scientists.

"We hold scientists in too high honor," he wrote recently to an American admirer. "We take them too much on faith. We believe every scientific assertion, no matter how incredible it may be.

And how incredible, how preposterous much of this scientific talk is! There's heredity, for instance. I have seen books on heredity that were about as logical as the remark of an old woman whose daughter played on the piano.

"Your daughter plays well," a woman said to her.

"Yes," the old woman replied, "she does have a fine touch, and it's no wonder, for she loves the piano, and never tires of it. Ye see, she's a great taste for music; but, then, that's only natural, for her grandfather had his skull fractured with a cornet at a picnic."—New York Tribune.

Much work is also being done along the line of cross breeding in wheat, and it is expected that some profitable results will accrue from this work in the near future. During the past year many hundreds of hybrid plants were grown, and, judging from present indications, some of these are destined to become the progenitors of very valuable new varieties. For this work only the very best of the standard sorts are used as parent stocks. Among these might be mentioned the Dawson's Golden Chaff, Bulgarian, Turkey Red, Imperial Amber, and Tasmania Red.

In the past hundred years 4,000 lives, 200 ships, and $100,000,000 have been sacrificed in a futile effort to reach the North Pole. Is there any possible gain in sight from the hoped-for discovery that is at all commensurate with the certain cost and suffering caused by the effort to discover?
