Dear Mother

Your little ones are a constant care in Fall and Winter weather. They will catch cold. Do you know about Shiloh's Consumption Cure, the Lung Tonic, and what it has done for so many? It is said to be the only reliable remedy for all diseases of the air passages in children. It is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take. It is guaranteed to cure or your money is returned. The price is 25c. per bottle, and all dealers in medicine sell.

SHILOH
This remedy should be in every household.

For Personal Use.

When President Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation it excited at once a great deal of discussion in the army. On one occasion Henry Clay Trumbull, says his biographer, was going through the camp of the regiment of which he was chaplain, when he was hailed by a sergeant and some men who were arguing the subject.

"Chaplain," asked the sergeant, "do you think President Lincoln had any right to issue that proclamation?"

"I suppose he thought he had," replied Mr. Trumbull.

"Well, I suppose a soldier's got a right to hold his own opinions, hasn't he?"

"Oh, yes, certainly he has," answered the chaplain—"that is, if he'll take care and hold 'em, and not always be slinging them round carelessly before others."

Out of School BECAUSE OF COLDS

THOUSANDS OF CHILDREN WILDERLY ACQUIRE LUNG TROUBLES, WHICH COULD BE AVOIDED BY USING

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

The records of attendance at the Toronto Public Schools show that ten thousand children were absent on account of colds during a single month.

"The worst enemy of all to the child, so far as keeping him from school is concerned, apparently is the common, everyday cold," said Dr. Goodchild in his report to the Ontario School Association.

"Not only does the cold prove an enemy in this way," he continued, "but it is well known that many of the more serious diseases follow from the simple cold. As a result of the patient becoming weakened down in his resistance against disease, the germs of various infectious diseases the more easily find a place to multiply somewhere in the organism."

Parents who make a practice of keeping Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house have at hand the most certain means of curing coughs, croup and bronchitis, and positively preventing more serious disease. It is sometimes forgotten that a few ailments possess more possibilities of danger than a common cold.

"For years I have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine for my children when they have colds in the winter. I first used it with my daughter who suffered from a severe form of asthma. The least exposure to cold would lay her up and she would scarcely suffocate for want of breath. I must say I found it to be a most satisfactory treatment and it has entirely cured her. It seemed to go direct to the diseased parts and bring the desired relief."—Mrs. A. A. VanBuskirk, Robinson Street, Moncton, N. B.

Not only is Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine a positive cure for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and severe chest colds, but it is also a preventive of all diseases of the lungs.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

Making Work.

"How long are we to be afflicted with the old exploded theory that extravagant expenditure on luxuries by the rich is beneficial, because it creates work?" asks The Montreal Herald, and the question is pertinent. The case in point is that of a young woman in New York who spends $200,000 a year on clothes and who is defended on the ground that it "makes work." This is a fallacy that raises its head in circles where it should never be allowed to appear. It brings up the distinction between productive and unproductive labor. Workers are only useful to the world in so far as they produce or assist in producing things which feed or clothe or better the world in some way. If the New York lady hired men and women to dance before her all day the world would not be the richer, but the poorer for their dancing; because they produced nothing that helped to feed or clothe the world, while the world had to feed and clothe them. And the case of dressmakers who produce costumes which are worn a few times and thrown away is not very different from that of the dancers. Suppose the lady instead of spending $200,000 per year on clothes had used it to construct a needed railway twenty miles long. More "work" would have been provided than in the first case, and at the end of the year, and for the future the people of that district would have the benefit and use of a railway. In the one case the young woman takes goods which workmen somewhere produce and as good as burns them up, so that at the end of the year the world is that much poorer except for what the dressmakers may have saved; in the other case the goods have been consumed, it is true, but while they were being consumed a work was constructed which makes the world $200,000 better off.

An Angry Ambassador.

A journey from England to Moscow in the seventeenth century was a difficult undertaking. Lord Carlisle, who was sent as an ambassador, and Andrew Marvell, the poet, scholar, and friend of Milton, who acted as his secretary, made the journey in 1664. Their experience is described by Mr. Birrell in his biography of Marvell.

It was one of Marvell's many duties to remonstrate with the authorities for their cruel and disrespectful indifference. He did so with great freedom, but with no effect, and at last the ambassador was obliged to hire two hundred sledges at his own charges. Sixty he sent on ahead, following with one hundred and forty on January 15, 1664. It was an intensely cold journey, and the accommodations at night, with one happy exception, proved quite infamous. On February 3rd Lord Carlisle and his cortege found themselves five versts from Moscow. February 5th was fixed for their entry into the city in all their finery. They were ready on the morning of that day, awaiting the arrival of the Tsar's escort, but it never came. Lord Carlisle had sent his cooks on to Moscow to prepare the dinner he expected to eat in his city quarters.

Nightfall approached, and it was not till "half an hour before night" that the belated messengers arrived, full of excuses. The ambassador was hungry, cold and furious, nor did his anger abate when told he was not to be allowed to enter Moscow that night, as the Tsar and his ladies were very anxious to enjoy the spectacle. The return of the cooks from Moscow and the preparation of dinner was a mitigation, but no cure for wounded pride; and Lord Carlisle, calling Marvell to his side, and with his assistance, concocted a letter in Latin to the Tsar, complaining bitterly of their ill treatment, and going so far as to assert that had anything of the kind happened in England to a foreign ambassador the King of England would never have rested until the offense had been atoned for with the blood of the criminals.

When, some forty years afterward Peter the Great asked Queen Anne to chop off the heads of the rade men who had arrested his ambassador for debt, he had, perhaps, Marvell's letter before him.

An Astonished "Faker."

The street "faker" who was selling cement near the steps of the court-house stood behind a little table on which, says the London Telegraph, was conspicuously displayed the sign, "A box of this cement given free to anybody who can break any of these apart."

There were spools, blocks of wood and other articles that had been cemented together. Most of them bore marks of having been struggled with by persons whose hands were grimy, in vain attempts to wrench the pieces apart.

A swarthy little fellow who had stopped in front of the faker's stand pointed to a round peg that appeared to have been dipped in the cement and driven into a good-sized shunk of wood, and asked him what would be the reward for pulling it out.

"If you can pull that out," said the pedler, "I'll give you a crown."

The peg projected a little more than a quarter of an inch above the block.

The swarthy little fellow placed his left hand on the block to hold it down, took the peg between the thumb and forefinger of his right hand, and pulled it out with apparent ease, a portion of the wood coming away with it.

"Bless me!" gasped the man, behind the table. "What are you?"

"Me Japanese dentist," replied the little fellow, pocketing the silver and walking away with a grin on his face.

Japanese dentists use their fingers for forceps, and a part of their training consists in exercises and work which develop an amount of power in their hands which would be incredible if it were not so well authenticated.

Why he Didn't.

In the Town Topics trial there was much to contribute to metropolitan gaiety. In examining the talesmen for the jury to try the case against Norman Hapgood, who was charged with libelling Col. Mann, they were asked if they had ever read Town Topics. Three of them said that they had glanced over it in a barber shop. The next talesman had never even heard of the publication. "I shave myself," said he.

RANGES, COOK STOVES AND HEATERS.

Did it ever strike you that when you buy a Stove from Connell Bros., that if by any chance it does not WORK RIGHT, they are at hand to MAKE IT WORK RIGHT. They cannot afford to let the stove do anything else but WORK RIGHT. Their stoves are all built to WORK RIGHT, made from good patterns; of the best material, and by good workmen. Another thing, too, they have all pieces for the stove, so you don't need to get rid of a good stove that was made by them because you can't get the repairs for it. We have repairs for stoves sold 25 years ago.

Get It From Me.

So intricate is the mechanism of the modern piano that only an expert can properly understand it. The average person therefore buys a piano on faith, that is, they rely on their faith in the word of the dealer and the reputation of the piano. There are two reasons why you should buy your piano from me. FIRST,—I am always here to stand back of every statement I make about a piano. SECOND,—I have control for this district for some of the best pianos on the market

"QUEEN" Top Draft Heating Stoves.

Come in and see it at our store. It would astonish you. Absolutely air tight and the cleanest stove in the world, no ashes, dust, &c., can get out, and you never require to remove the ashes more than once or twice a month. It saves the expense of splitting wood as it burns it in large chunks. It makes a regular heat and lasts longer than any stove on the market. Made in different sizes.
