Haldimand County Councillor tells how Psychine cured his Lung Troubles

"I contracted a series of colds from the changing weather," says Mr. Bryce Allen, a well-known resident of Jarvis, Ont., and a member of Haldimand County Council for his district, "and gradually my lungs became affected. I tried medicine and doctors prescribed for me, but got I no relief. With lungs and stomach diseased, nervous, weak and wasted, I began to use Psychine. With two months' treatment I regained my health. To-day I am as sound as a bell, and give all the credit to Psychine."

There is a proof of what Psychine does. It not only cures Colds and kills the germs of LaGrippe, Pneumonia and Consumption, but it helps the stomach, makes pure, rich blood and spreads general health all over the body. You will never have Consumption if you use

Catching Cold.

It is a curious fact that colds, which are so universal, should be so little understood by even the most acute practitioners of the healing art. "Catarrh specialists" there are in plenty—not only among the advertising quacks, but also, under a more dignified name, among educated physicians.

Some of the physicians have discovered much regarding the nature of colds, and have learned how to mitigate the sufferings of those who are attacked, but an absolute means of prevention and a certain cure are yet among the unsolved mysteries of medicine.

One cause for this confusion is undoubtedly the fact that a "cold" is not a simple disease, like typhoid fever or measles, but that the term is used to cover a number of diseases having similar symptoms but of very diverse origins.

All colds are probably due to the action of some microbe, and so are to be ranked among the contagious or infectious diseases, but it is also probable that the microbes that may cause the malady—or maladies—are of various species. Hence the treatment that will relieve one cold is powerless to cure another, because a remedy that is inimical to one microbe may have no effect upon another.

It is known, however, that all microbic diseases are prone to attack those who are "below par" physically, and nowhere is this more strikingly evident than in the case of cold-catching.

If one who has caught a cold will take thought, he will often find that he has prepared himself for the infection by some tax on his physical condition—some extra work which has depressed his bodily powers, some worry which has preyed upon his mind, some loss of sleep, some undue exposure to atmospheric changes, or some dietary indiscretion.

For indiscreet eating is one of the most prolific and yet the least recognized of all the predisposing causes of a cold. The tramp may suffer from frost-bite, from pneumonia or from consumption, but unless the farmers' wives along his route have been unusually generous, he seldom has a cold in the head. The poor and wretched in the city slums have many miseries, but it is the rich and pampered who have most to suffer from teasing colds.

Let the hearty eaters of rich food, who suffer from repeated colds, try a course of abstinence during the coming winter, and they will be convinced of the truth of these remarks. In this case the proof of the pudding is in the not eating of it.

If you like Coffee but dare not drink it, try Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. It is true that real Coffee does disturb the Stomach, Heart and Kidneys. But Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee has not a grain of true coffee in it. Being made from parched grains, malt, etc., it forms a wholesome, food-like drink, yet having the true flavor of Old Java and Mocha Coffee. "Made in a minute." Call at our store for a free sample. From Wall Street a Call to Piety.

What America needs more than railway extension, and western irrigation, and a low tariff, and a bigger wheat crop, and a merchant marine, and a new navy, is a revival of piety, the kind mother and father used to have—piety that counted it good business to stop for daily family prayer before breakfast, right in the middle of the harvest; that quit field work a half hour earlier Thursday night, so as to get the chores done and go to prayer meeting; that borrowed money to pay the preacher's salary and prayed fervently in secret for the salvation of the rich man who looked with scorn on such unbusiness-like behavior. That's what we need now to clean this country of the filth and craft, and of greed, petty and big; of worship of fine houses and big lands and high office and grand social function. What is this thing we are worshipping but a vain repetition of what decayed nations fell down and worshipped just before their light went out? Read the history of Rome in decay and you will find luxury there that could lay a big dollar over our little doughnut that looks so large to us. Great wealth can never make a nation substantial or honorable. There is nothing on earth that looks good that is so dangerous for a man or a nation to handle as quick, easy, big money. If you do resist its deadly influence the chances are that it will get your son. It takes greater and finer heroism to dare to be poor in America than to charge an earth-works in Manchuria.—Editorial from the Wall Street Journal.

A Slight Disadvantage.

She was only two years old, little Margaret, but there were two younger children, and she had already taken upon her shoulders some of the responsibilities of life, but did not pretend to enjoy them all.

"Where are Helen and Agatha?" asked a visitor who found Margaret sitting on the doorstep one afternoon, looking particularly sober.

"They've gone off to have what mother calls 'mischief' and they call 'fun,' said the solitary one.

"And you didn't go with them," said the visitor, with a hint of sympathy in her voice.

"Oh, no," said Margaret, with a sigh, "mother trusts me so dreadfully! I can't have much of any fun."

The Connellys' Legacy

"I have news for you," the district visitor said, dropping into the Associated Charities' office one noon.

"What," the secretary asked, resignedly, "has happened to the Connellys now?"

The visitor laughed. "You are wrong this time. Mr. Connelly has been at work eight days, the baby is well, and Jimmy has had no accident, barring two or three black eyes, for a week. They have had a legacy."

The secretary dropped her pen. Her voice was full of dismay.

"A legacy! In all my worrying over the Connellys I never once thought of that. Just when we had got them to going, too. How much is it?"

"A hundred dollars," the visitor replied. "But, Anna, I think you are wrong this time. I have had a serious talk with Mrs. Connelly, and planned out with her just how the money could be best invested. She seemed very reasonable. I'm quite sure that we sha'n't have to do anything for them for six months at least."

"Six months!" the secretary retorted, gloomily. "I'll be surprised if they aren't back in six days. You're new—you don't know the Connellys."

"At least," the visitor returned, "I have some confidence in human nature."

It was, perhaps, five days later, as the secretary and visitors were walking home from the office together, that the secretary suddenly stopped.

"Look across the street," she said.

The visitor looked. Upon the opposite sidewalk she beheld the whole Connelly family, gorgeously attired, strolling with an air of elegant and inexhaustible leisure, Jimmy eating bananas, the baby sucking candy, and Mr. and Mrs. Connelly regaling themselves for a paper bag of cream puffs.

"What did I say?" the secretary groaned. "They will be back to us in three days."

It was not three days, but it was about a week later that Mrs. Connelly, gay and beaming, appeared at the office with a demand for work. She met the secretary's reproaches apologetically but unregretfully.

"'Twas the toime of me loife, Miss Prescott!" "Sure, 'tis beyond me power to tell you all we did. We gave a party that made the Flahertys open the eyes of them, and they won't be troublin' us no more for wan while; and Jimmy, he treated the byes in school and took a bouquet to the teacher, an' it's a hero they think he is, an' 'twill be savin' the doctor's bills, d'ye moind, for them accidents they was always gettin' him into. Oh, 'twas a grand toime all round, and it's not the work I'll be moindin' low. I have the grandeur to be thinkin' of all me loife. It's a great thing, Miss Prescott, to know ye was a lady for tin days."

As Mrs. Connelly's broad back disappeared down the steps the secretary and the visitor looked at each other with laughing eyes. After all, it might have been so much worse. "It's a great thing," the visitor quoted, reflectively. "'to know ye was a lady for tin days."

History in Russian Schools.

A writer in the Paris Matin tells of some interesting discoveries in French history as it is taught in Russian schools. A friend of his who was trying to master the Russian language bought a history used in all Russian public school, edited by the national scholar, Professor Ilovaiski. He opened at the following passage:

Louis XVI was a good and peaceful king. After a long and famous reign, in which he was most happy in his choice of minister of finance, he died quietly in Paris, beloved by all his people. His death was caused by a hemorrhage.

The successor of Louis XVI was his son, Louis XVII. During his reign the brave, royal army, commanded by General Napoleon Bonaparte, captured the larger part of the European continent for the French crown.

But the faithless Napoleon showed tendencies toward misusing his power, and was suspected of harboring dishonest schemes against the legitimate ruler. With the help of His Majesty the Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russias, his plans were frustrated, and he was deprived of all his possessions, honors and rights to a pension. He was then exiled to the island of St. Helena where he died.

The future historian of the Russian revolution will find the advertising columns of the St. Petersburg or Moscow newspapers in 1906 a rich source of information as to actual social conditions. Thus the daughter of a nobleman advertises that: "Robbers have killed my parents and stolen everything. I am an honest girl; will not some rich family adopt me or let me do household work or nursing?" Many "want" advertisements begin: "I come from the starving province." The appeals for immediate aid are incessant: "I have expended my last penny for this advertisement," begins one announcement, which makes one wish that there were a St. Petersburg Charity Organization Society to respond. That many others of a similar character come from respectable women genuinely in need of immediate aid is vouched for by a German observer. The terrible crisis of the last year or two has evidently reduced many worthy men and women to absolute want and despair.

Reprint, News-Herald: "There is at least one effectual, safe and reliable Cough Cure—Dr. Shoop's—that we regard as suitable, even for the youngest child. For years Dr. Shoop bitterly opposed the use of opiates or narcotics in medicine, offering $10 per drop to anyone finding Opium, Chloroform, or ANY OTHER poisonous or narcotic ingredient in Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. And the challenge is as yet unanswered. Here is one manufacturing physician, who welcomed with much satisfaction, the new Government Pure Food and Drug Law. The public can now protect itself at all times, by insisting on having Dr. Shoop's when a cough remedy is needed." Sold by all druggists.

A very wonderful physical endowment is the distinctive odor of each and every member of the animal world. A dog will trail its master or mistress through countless multitudes of men and woman. The setter will cross the trail of rabbits, squirrels, deer foxes, grouse, wild turkeys, etc., without pause in its pursuit of the quail. The bloodhound will track a murderer hundreds of miles without losing the scent, though an army may have crossed the trail.

Can Consumption be Cured?

There is plenty of indisputable evidence to prove that Consumption has been cured even after the symptoms were well defined and the lungs actually involved.

On the other hand, there has always been a point beyond which the disease has been considered incurable. Until a comparatively recent date this point had a place at a very early stage of the malady, but modern scientific discovery and common-sense methods of treatment have gradually moved the hopeless point further and further back, until now the Consumptive is not "given up" until the very last stage of the disease is reached.

Nothing in recent years has done so much to improve the chances of Consumptives as the advent of

FERROL

In fact, it is claimed that, with plenty of fresh air, sunlight and comfortable surroundings, FERROL has pushed the hopeless point to the limit, that is to say, where these fail the chances of cure are very slim indeed.

FERROL does not kill the germs of Consumption (anything that will do that will kill the patient), but FERROL does the work by repairing the waste tissue, enriching the blood, toning the nerves, in short, by building up the whole system and thus enabling nature to expel the disease.

The only possible chance of curing Consumption is by proper nutrition, and FERROL is the only perfect nutrient, because it combines in palatable and easily digested form the very essentials of life—Oil, Iron and Phosphorus.

We feel some diffidence in claiming that FERROL will cure Consumption, lest we be misunderstood, but we have not the slightest hesitation in stating that it is an infallible cure for BRONCHITIS, CHRONIC COUGHS, CROUP, WHOOPING COUGH, CHRONIC RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, NERVOUS EXHAUSTION, SCROFULA and all wasting diseases.

For restoring lost weight and building up the run-down system FERROL is absolutely without an equal.
