A Word for the Farm.

There does not seem to be quite as great a craze among the young men of our farming community to leave the farm and go into the towns and cities as there was a few years ago, but there is still too much of it. The freedom and independence of a life on the farm is being appreciated more than it used to be and it is too often a great mistake when a young man leaves the farm for the city, expecting that he can get rich quickly and without hard work. The cities are full of people who live from hand to mouth and whose total wealth is represented by the clothing they have on. Years go by and these persons never have a home. They lose that independence that the proud owner of a farm has with the labor saving machinery now in use, the rural telephone systems, the fine comfortable homes, etc. The boy who gives up a good farm for life in a city makes the mistake of life in nine cases out of ten.—Aylmer, Ont., Express.

Whiskey "Charity."

Because Hiram Walker & Sons, Ontario whiskey makers, are said to have provided for the widow of an employe who was smothered to death in their distillery, they are commended for having set "an example of unostentatious charity that many prohibitionist business men would do well to follow." Distillers an example of benevolence to prohibitionists, or to any other person of ordinary human feelings! Just think of it. Why, the fact is the prohibitionist business men, and many who are not business men, are providing for many hundreds of destitute families who have been robbed of their bread-winners by this same Walker concern. A thousand widows weep in hopeless grief, and struggle alone for a meagre subsistence, or are dependent on public or private beneficence, that the Walkers may have wealth. And yet they are credited with 'unostentatious charity,' because they care for the widow of an employe in their deadly business. 'Charity,' forsooth! Spare the word. Unostentatious—pshaw! How careful they are to have the fact spread abroad—an advertisement of their business, and to deceive the people into forgetfulness of its real character. And, strange to say, well meaning people are deceived by such shams. Let it be remembered that the greater part—fully three-fourths—of the publicly supported pauperism of the country is due to the traffic of the Walkers and their kind. Their wealth represents more horrors of every kind than pen can describe.

Stropping a Razor.

"The idea that a razor needs frequent grinding or honing is not in keeping with my experience," said a man who shaves himself. "I have a razor that I got ten years ago which has never been out of my possession, never had any other treatment than stropping, and is today the sharpest and best of six. A razor can only be kept in this condition without honing, however, by using a hard strop—that is one which is rigid instead of flexible and not the kind that makes an arc of a circle when you use it. This latter sort will sharpen a razor for awhile, but it ceases to cut. Why do I have six razors? Well, that is to use them in regular turn and give each one of them a rest. I shave every day, which I find the least troublesome method, and if I use the same blade every day it would soon play out. The edge of a razor needs rest, just like every other machine."

Slavery in Great Britain.

Slavery survived in England much later than is generally supposed. The word "bondage" in Northumberland still means a female farm servant. The coolies and salters—i. e., salt miners—of East Lothian were actually slaves till 1775. If they deserted their service any one harboring them was liable to a penalty of £5 if he did not restore them in twenty-four hours. The last slave in England was not freed until 1799, and in 1842 there was a coolie living who, as well as his father and grandfather, had worked as a slave in a pit at Musselburg.

Clerk—I should be glad if you would kindly excuse me from duty tomorrow, sir. I wish to attend the funeral of my wife's mother.

JUGGLING WITH FATE.

A Young American Girl Takes an Aerial Flight in a Heavy Automobile.

The newest "startler" with the Barnum & Bailey circus this season is appropriately named the "Dip of Death." In Paris, where the act was originally produced, it was known as "L'Auto-Bolide," which, literally translated, means the "auto-meteor." The American title, however, is, according to all preliminary prescriptions of this great act, the more suggestive. It is evidently a "dip of death"—or would be if the mechanism was not kept up to the standard of absolute perfection, or if the engineers who have it in charge should even momentarily grow careless or indifferent. One New York writer says:

"From the serious viewpoint the Dip of Death is one of the most audacious acts ever attempted in an amusement enterprise. The operator takes her life in her hands or in her auto car, when she mounts to the top and on an incline which must be sixty degrees of the arc of a circle, plunges down and trusts to an arrangement of powerful clutches to hold the car in place until it has turned, reversed and is freed from the governing guides. The momentum is so tremendous that the strain on the clutches on the car in place before it turns upside-down, must represent a holding-power of tens of thousands of pounds. The slipping of one tooth in the cog would mean nothing but the flying off of the heavy automobile at a tangent and disaster to its fair occupant. It is, moreover, a singularly pretty and effective act despite its startling danger, and it holds the attention of the audience with a fascination that only those who see the exploit can understand."

The young "woman who dares" in the "Dip of Death" is an American girl—Miss Isabelle Butler. It is said of her that one wonders which to admire most, her beauty or her daring. Her costumes are also said to be of a character to create admiring comment.

The "Dip of Death" is not the only "thriller" being presented with the Barnum & Bailey circus this year. There is a startling novelty, in which two young French bicyclists turn somersaults on their wheels; a remarkable acrobatic performance on a platform suspended in midair, a sensational high-wire exhibition by the Carmen Troupe, wonderful aerial flights by the Imperial Viennese Troupe, and many other startling acts. The show opens with the new "Peace" spectacle, founded on the Russo-Japanese war, and the performance that follows serves to present the best efforts of 300 performers from all parts of the world. Those who have seen the show this year say it has reached the highwater mark of excellence in every department. It will be presented here in all its completeness.

The Historic Eye.

Washington was crossing the Delaware. He stood.

"Better sit down, sir," suggested an aid. "Sit down!" responded lustily the father of His Country. "And, pray, what sort of a picture would that make?"

Blushing under the rebuke, the aid resolved to monkey no more with art.
