November.

The wild November comes at last,
Beneath a veil of rain;
The night wind blows its folds aside,
Her face is full of pain.

A barren realm of withered field
Bleak remains of fallen leaves
The pale moon that ever daw
The dreariness of eyes.

Strained Relations Between the United States and Japan.

Some little uneasiness was created in the United States last week by the announcement that a Japanese midshipman who was taking a course at the United States Naval Academy had been ordered by his Government to resign, and return home. The uneasiness developed into something like a sensation when it was learned later that the Japanese Ambassador at Washington had formally complained to the United States Government regarding the treatment of Japanese children in the public schools of San Francisco. These children have been denied the right of access to white schools, and this denial is taken by Japan as a direct violation of the treaty of commerce and amity between the two countries—a treaty which provides, among other things, that Japanese living in the United States shall have all the rights and privileges enjoyed by citizens of the country.

A similar case occurred some years ago, when a number of Italians were hanged by a mob in Louisiana. The Italian Government complained in that case, but the answer of the United States Government was that the control in criminal matters was in the hands of State authorities, and the Federal Government had no power to punish the men who had engaged in the lynching. Italy in that case withdrew her ambassador from the United States, and even yet feels she has an unsatisfied grievance, although the United States Government paid indemnities to the families of those who were killed.

The present situation is more serious than that developed a few years ago, owing to the fact that Japan is a much more powerful country than Italy, and by the further fact that the United States is now vulnerable to foreign attack, in the East, at least, by reason of its possession of the Philippine Islands. Some little time ago, it may be noted, in this connection, the American commander in the Philippines asked for reinforcement in order that he might be put in a position to repel possible attacks.

There is a further fact in the international situation which is deserving of notice. China has just concluded a series of manoeuvres with her new army in which Chinese soldiers are said to have proved themselves equal to European soldiers in drill and discipline.

That they are up-to-date is shown by the fact that the Chinese troops were accompanied in the manoeuvres by a wireless telegraphy outfit, which could be put into operation in thirty minutes from the time of making a halt. Especially significant is the fact that the artillery and principal equipment of the troops were made in Japan. Japan alone would be a doughty antagonist. With the possible backing of China, she would be still more so.

That the United States appreciated the gravity of the situation caused by the formal complaint entered by a country in a position to back up that complaint, was made speedily apparent by the action taken to remove the cause. United States Secretary of State Root at once began looking up the law, and soon found that the Federal Government was not as powerless as it appeared to be at the time of the affair with Italy. He found that article 6 of the constitution of the United States says that the constitution and laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof, and all treaties, shall be supreme law of the land and the judges in every State shall be bound thereby. Following this again came the announcement that the judge of the United Circuit Court in San Francisco had issued an order to the local Board of Education, calling upon that body to show cause why an injunction should not be issued compelling the reinstatement of one of the Japanese pupils who had been expelled from the school. The cause, which is a test one, will be heard on November 5th. Japan has announced her satisfaction with the action taken, and the incident is now regarded as closed.

We Spend Thousands of Dollars.

every year in giving away Celery King with Solution of Ozone (the coupon kind). We do this because we know of no other way by which germ troubles can be cured to stay cured. The Solution of Ozone destroys the germs, that is certain, but being an astringent it does not enable the system to throw off the accumulated refuse matter. This only can be accomplished by taking it together with Celery King, so we supply the Celery King to you free of cost, but be sure and ask your druggist for Ozone (the coupon kind) or you will be disappointed.

The Wall of the Waitress.

(By Ethel M. Kelley.)

He has not come—not ever since the day
He got so huffy that he went away
Because I wouldn't promise not to gad.
I didn't know 'twas in him to stay mad,
Though I said things I didn't oughter say.

He oughter knew that I was half in play;
He'll have to wait till he is good and gray,
Before I'll ever tell him I feel sad.
He has not come.

He oughter think life ain't so very gay;
It ain't so easy cartin' this big tray.
He was the only beau I ever had.
Oh, dear, I guess I got it pretty bad.
How shall I know if he has went to stay?
He has not come!

Millinery Items.

Colors first attract.
Neutral shades rival brilliancies.
Bright colors occupy an important place, though.

Heavy-headed pins have mostly replaced buckles.
Ostrich plumes have never been more magnificent.

Grapes add beauty to many of the new and lovely hats.
Bandeaux are continued and they go all they way around.

A stunning hat of rich yellow felt is trimmed with black velvet and a black lace veil.

Many all-black hats are adorned with ostrich plumes and some, especially the turbans, show the glint of jet.

How to Woo Sleep.

Sleepless nights may be averted by one or other of the following simple remedies:—
Hot milk—which, however, should not be boiled—if taken the last thing at night will be found to induce sleep very readily. An onion, either raw or well boiled, is most efficacious. The disagreeable taste may be taken away by eating a little sugar after it, or some parsley, or a pinch of dry tea. Though it is usually considered unwise to take fruit late at night, the apple is an exception to the rule, and may be eaten with impunity, for it is easily digested, and is an excellent cure for wakefulness. A hot bath taken the last thing before retiring will also be found beneficial.

What a solemn and striking admonition to youth is that inscribed on the dial at All Souls, Oxford—"Periunt et imputantur"—The hours perish and are laid to our charge. Time is the only little fragment of eternity that belongs to man; and, like life, it can never be recalled. "In the dissipation of worldly treasure," says Jackson of Exeter, "the frugality of the future may balance the extravagance of the past; but who can say, 'I will take from minutes tomorrow to compensate for those I have lost today?'" Melancthon noted down the time lost by him that he might thereby reanimate his industry, and not lose an hour. An Italian scholar put over his door an inscription intimating that whosoever remained there should join in his labors. "We are afraid," said some visitors to Baxter, "that we break in upon your time." "Be sure you do," replied the disturbed and blunt divine. Time was the estate out of which the great workers, and all other workers, formed that rich treasury of thoughts and deeds which they have left to their successors.

It is not alone the great dailies that are run from the counting room. The following from a Wisconsin weekly is an illustration:

"Miss Jennie Jones and Bob Henry were married at the Jones mansion last night. The bride is the daughter of our constable, Jones, who made a good officer, and will undoubtedly be re-elected in the spring. He offers a fine horse for sale in an another column. The groom runs a grocery store on Main street, and is a good patron of our advertising columns, and has a good line of bargains this week. All summer he paid two cents more for butter than any other store in town. The happy couple left on the ten o'clock train for Milwaukee to visit the bride's uncle, who is reported to have lots of money and Bright's disease. Bob certainly has an eye to business.

Consideration of a Motorist.

"Why," said the traveller, "do you attach so much attention to the dragon? Don't you know there is no such creature?"

"My dear sir," answered Mr. Li Lo, the eminent Chinese philosopher, "I often find the Goddess of Liberty depicted on your public emblems. Yet I have found it impossible to meet the lady personally."—Washington Star.

Change of Occupation.

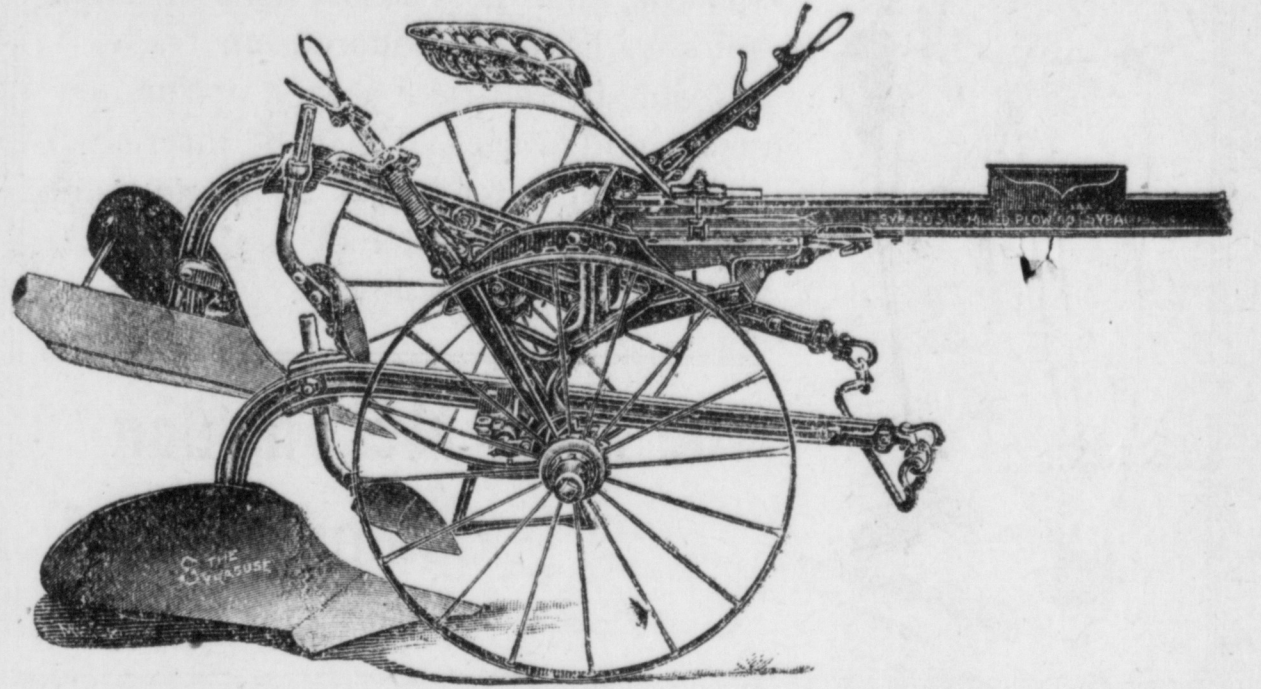

Vicar's wife (sympathizingly)—"Now that you can't get about, and are not able to read, how do you manage to occupy the time?"
Old Man—"Well, mum, sometimes I sits and thinks; and then again I just sits."

So intricate is the mechanism of the modern piano that only an expert can properly understand it. The average person therefore buys a piano on faith, that is, they rely on their faith in the word of the dealer and the reputation of the piano. There are two reasons why you should buy your piano from me. FIRST,—I am always here to stand back of every statement I make about a piano. SECOND,—I have control for this district for some of the best pianos on the market
