

Don't neglect your cough.

Statistics show that in New York City alone over 200 people die every week from consumption.

And most of these consumptives might be living now if they had not neglected the warning cough.

You know how quickly Scott's Emulsion enables you to throw off a cough or cold.

GUIDES TO SUCCESS.

Twenty Rules Worth Observing in Your Daily Life.

Here are twenty rules which, if followed, will be of advantage to any man:

Be critical with your work that others may judge it less harshly.

If a man misjudge you, forgive him. To err is human; to forgive, divine.

You may have to pay the price for standing by right principles, but your work will show the result.

Do not have one set of morals in your home and another in business. Right is right and wrong is wrong.

The real worker loves his work and to it will sacrifice any pleasure.

There may be plenty of clouds in your workaday life. Remember that the most beautiful sunsets come often after cloudy days.

Hesitate about giving explanations unless you are asked for them. Apologies often are mistaken for confessions of wrong.

Do more than you are paid for. Remember it takes some people a long time to pay their bills.

Allow people to criticize your work all they like, but resent any unfair attack on your character.

Know more than your work demands. Extra change is a convenient thing.

When you get discouraged try and begin anew.

There are those who achieve much when they are young; more earn their rewards with years.

Don't be a coward. The sun hates to shine on those who are afraid of their own shadows.

Recall some of the things your mother taught you when young—they are worth remembering.

You can beat a dray horse, but a race horse needs sympathy and encouragement.

Today and today make the tomorrows.

Never lie. Honest work is built on true principles.

If your work is not appreciated you have not failed. Experience counts for something.

Make the interest of your home your own.

If your health is gone, regain it first; you can do little without.

Be Not Cast Down.

It conduces much to our content, if we pass by those things which happen to our trouble, and consider that which is pleasing and prosperous; that by the representation of the better, the worse may be blotted out.

It may be thou art entered into the cloud which will bring a gentle shower to refresh thy sorrows.

I am fallen into the hands of publicans and squiremors, and they have taken all from me: what now? let me look about me. They have left me the sun and moon, fire and water, a loving wife and many friends to pity me, and some to relieve me, and I can still discourse; and, unless I list, they have not taken away my merry countenance, and my cheerful spirit, and a good conscience; they still have left me the providence of God, and all the promises of the gospel, and my religion, and my hopes of heaven, and my charity to them too; still I sleep and digest, I eat and drink, I read and meditate, I can walk in my neighbour's pleasant fields, and see the varieties of natural beauties, and delight in all that in which God delights, that is, in virtue and wisdom, in the whole creation, and in God himself. — Jeremy Taylor.

MADAME, MRS. OR MISS

A Pointer for Those Who Are in Doubt About Addressing a Woman.

(Philadelphia Telegraph.)

Now that women are beginning to look upon themselves as entities, and not merely as attachments to man, they are commencing to consider the matter of their title and name.

The Woman Who Thinks is asking why must the title by which she is addressed desiggnate whether she is married or not. A man is plain Mr. whether he is single or otherwise; but a woman is tagged by "Mrs." or "Miss"; plainly, unmistakably. And women are claiming that whether they are married or not should no more enter into their everyday intercourse with the world than it does with men.

One of these Women Who Think wrote her name on a hotel register the other day as "Jane Stevens." "Mrs." or "Miss," inquired the clerk, politely. "Madame, if you please," responded the lady, suavely. "I do not see that it is any concern of yours whether I am married or not." The clerk retired to meditate upon this new phase of feminine perversity. But the woman was only voicing in action what many women have for some time been secretly pondering.

It is generally conceded that Madame is the more dignified address when one is at a loss whether to use Miss or Mrs. Why, then, not use it generally. Let the more private concern of single or wedded bliss go by the board so far as the public are concerned. It is, as the hotel guest said, "nobody's business."

Many so called "advanced" women are also retaining their own names after marriage, a course to which their husbands, who are likewise advanced, willingly agree. A well known Russian writer still goes by the name she has borne all her life, though she is now a happy wife. Why Jane Smith should cease to be Jane Smith and suddenly become Mrs. John Adams has always been a mystery to the Woman Who Thinks.

Fortunately the time now is when women no longer are compelled to accept senseless usages but can say what shall be and what shall not be in the things that concern them.

Liver Trouble From Overeating

THE KIDNEYS AND BOWELS ALSO DERANGED AND CURE ONLY OBTAINED BY USE OF

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Hurried eating and lack of proper mastication of the food are among the most common causes of indigestion, and overeating is undoubtedly the beginning of trouble with the liver and kidneys.

Kidney disease and rheumatism are not usually the first indication of a deranged system, but these troubles follow unheeded headaches, constipation and bilious attacks.

Because of that direct and combined action on the liver, kidney and bowels, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are effective in whatever stage of such derangements they may be used, except when the structure of the kidneys has been wasted away by Bright's disease.

What we would emphasize, however, is the advantage of beginning this treatment at the first indication of trouble with the liver. It is the liver which first feels the result of overeating because of its difficulty in filtering the blood. Keep the liver right by the timely use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and you not only prevent headaches, biliousness and constipation, but entirely escape derangements of the kidneys, which are at once so dreadfully painful and fatal.

Mr. LAWSON, McAdam Jct., N. B., writes: "I have suffered for years from bilious headache caused by indigestion. One day when on the train with Conductor Berryman I was suffering severely with pain in the head, and he recommended me to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. Having some in his possession he gave me several doses, which proved to me their value. I found Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be the best remedy I have ever used, and can with confidence recommend them to all persons suffering from indigestion."

Thoughts for the Thoughtful.

The birds are; glad the brier-rose fills
The air with sweetness; all the hills
Stretch green to June's unclouded sky;
But still I wait with ear and eye
For something gone which should be nigh.
—Whittier.

A CLEVER PRESSMAN.

He Robbed a Great Museum, and Regretted His Moderation.

In a free and easy way a writer for the Paris Journal Intransigent tells an interesting tale. A couple of months ago the statue of Isis, a famous relic of ancient sculpture, was stolen from the Louvre, and the Parisian papers have been since giving much of their space to intimations of their contempt for the keepers and guardians of an institution which permitted such a theft. Of course the authorities of that famous museum declared that it was very difficult to steal from the Louvre. The writer in question, Mr. Felix Mathier, determined, therefore, to steal something, and he stole for his experiment the marble epitaph of Quintus Aurelius from the department of African antiquities. Here is his story:

"I left the office of the Intransigent after breakfast intending to go to the chamber of deputies. The sun was shining, the weather was pleasant, and as I was passing the Louvre the genial idea occurred to me of entering and stealing something. It would make a better story than the dull speech of some member of the chamber. No sooner thought than done.

I entered the nearest gate and soon found myself in the gallery of Egyptian antiquities. The first object of a portable size which caught my eyes was a large plaque on an easel. Circumstances did not seem particularly favorable. There was a custodian at the end of the hall leaning against the wall and keeping watch. Five or six visitors were moving about, among them a charming young mother, who was showing the beauties of Egyptian relics to her two pretty babies.

"A soldier of the 67th regiment of infantry was strolling about trying to pass an idle hour. Opposite me was a venerable old man, with gray hair and spectacles, examining the inscription on a tombstone, and two tourists were discussing in a loud voice, with Biedermeier in their hands. I was resolved, however, to hazard the attempt.

"Almost under the nose of the tourists, while the old soldier had turned his back, I grabbed the epitaph. But great Caesar! I had not calculated its weight. It needed quite an effort to lift it and glide it under my overcoat. However, I got it there, and the weight almost dragged me to one side. I looked toward the guardian, and he stood as immovable as one of the Egyptian statues. The elderly gentleman had continued to pore over the inscription, the soldier had disappeared. I deliberately walked down toward the Venus de Milo. She looked at me with a severe eye. Would she turn informer? The weight under my arm seemed to increase. Six kilos of marble were not easy to handle. I hurried away. At the door two guardians scrutinized closely with their eyes every visitor passing in and out. But they looked no doubt without seeing. I breathed the fresh afternoon air again in the open street, and then I was sorry I had not taken away Jaconda or the Victory of Samothrace."

Skin Disease of Twenty Years' Standing Cured.

I want you to know how much Chamberlain's Salve has done for me. It has cured my face of a skin disease of almost twenty years' standing. I have been treated by several as smart physicians as we have in this country and they did me no good, but two boxes of this salve has cured me.—MRS. FANNIE GRIFFIN, Troy, Ala. Chamberlain's Salve is for sale by All Dealers.

$20,000,000 a Year for Life.

(Cleveland Leader.)

Not an income but a bid—an offer of $20,000,000 every year for only ten years more of life. That is what Alexander K. McClure, long the editor of the Philadelphia Times, says that Andrew Carnegie told him, recently, he would throw into the scale against death if it would avail him anything.

What he means is that he would give $20,000,000 to be set back ten years—to have ten years more of such life as the past ten years and as much prospect of surviving a decade more at the end of that period as he has today.

It puts a tremendous value upon life, after making the due allowance for Carnegie's scant need of the $20,000,000 he would pay for ten years of added enjoyment of earth's opportunities.
