All these diseases are serious in themselves, and if not promptly cured in the early stages are the certain forerunners of Consumption in its most terrible forms. Psychine conquers and cures Consumption, but it is much easier and safer to prevent its development by using Psychine. Here is a sample of thousands of voluntary and unsolicited statements from all over Canada:

Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited:
Gentlemen,—I feel it my duty to advise you of the remarkable cure effected by your Psychine and Oxomulsion, which have come under my personal observation. Three men, well known to me, Albert Townsend, Hazel Ripon and John McKay, all of Shelburne County, were pronounced by the best medical men to have Consumption, and to be incurable and beyond the reach of medical aid. They used Psychine and Oxomulsion and they are now in good health. I feel it a duty I owe to suffering humanity to state these facts for the benefit of other sufferers from this terrible disease.

Yours very truly,
LEANDER MCKENZIE, J.P.
Green Harbor, N.S.

Learning to Work.

"I don't know whether you can do anything with this boy," said Judge Mack of the Chicago juvenile court, when he placed a lad under the care of Mr. Milliken, principal of the Jewish Manual Training-School. "He has been in court time after time and seems incorrigible, but I don't want to send him to the reformatory. He'll be a good object to test your theories upon."

"What can you do, Jim?" asked Mr. Milliken, when the boy presented himself at his office.

"Nawthin'."

"What would you like to do?"

"Nawthin'."

"Wouldn't you like to work in the carpenter shop?"

"Naw."

"Do you want to study?"

"Naw, I don't like studyin'."

"Well, then, how would you enjoy seeing other people work?"

"I guess that would be all right," answered Jim, with a sudden gleam of interest.

"Very well, I'll get you a comfortable chair, and you may sit in the workshop and watch the boys work," said Mr. Milliken.

For three days Jim lulled in his seat while the boys sawed, planed and hammered the raw material into all kinds of useful articles. During all this time he looked bored and unhappy, while the rest of the boys were cheerful and gay. On his fourth morning at the school he said, rather shamefacedly, "Say, Mr. Milliken, my mother says she'd like a box to keep things in. Can I make it?"

"Yes, certainly. How big a box?"

"I don't know."

"You must find out the measurements so we can get the lumber for it."

The next day Jim appeared with a soiled scrap of paper on which his mother had written the dimensions of the box she wished.

"Two and a half by three and a quarter feet," read Mr. Milliken. "You must add that to see how much material will be needed."

"I can't add," muttered Jim.

"Don't you know any arithmetic?"

"Naw."

"Well, then, how are you going to find out how much lumber you want?"

"I s'pose I could learn that much arithmetic if any one would teach me."

When Jim returned to the workshop from the classroom he was smiling.

"Say, that teacher showed me how to add them figures easy. She's all right, she is! I guess I'll learn some more from her."

The box was a successful effort, and Jim's pride in it was great. "Mr. Milliken," he said, when it was done, "the boys say they learn how to make a lot of things from books. I kind o' wish I could read 'em."

"Would you like to learn to read?"

"Sure," was the enthusiastic reply, and Jim's "sure" was certain; for to the satisfaction of all his teachers he learned by leaps and bounds, and in one year did the work of four grades. Then his mother moved away from the vicinity of the manual training-school, and he was unwilling to go to the regular grade school, where there was no manual work to keep him interested, and Mr. Milliken secured him a position in a large mercantile establishment. There his quickness and faithfulness are proving the efficacy of the theories tried upon him.

A New Anaesthetic.

John D. Rockefeller's $3,000,000 institute for Medical Research in Washington announces a discovery which is expected to revolutionize the use of anaesthetics in surgery. The discovery relates to cocaine. As an anaesthetic for serious operations ether is less dangerous than chloroform. It stimulates the heart, and after its influence has subsided the patient becomes deathly sick. Chloroform does not produce nausea, but it depresses the heart, and even a slight overdose is likely to cause death during the period of unconsciousness.

Cocaine has heretofore been regarded as available only for minor operations and local applications, such as toothache and external cuts or wounds. Dr. L. Kast and Dr. S. J. Meltzer of the Rockefeller institute after a series of elaborate investigations have found out, however, that cocaine instead of being a mild drug in reality exerts in certain dosage a profound and far reaching influence over the internal organs which will render it available for certain operations. This is a boon to surgeons as well as patients, because cocaine is not at all dangerous to use and has no bad effects.

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must by law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Sold by All Dealers.

Trusts as Employers.

The United States Steel Trust and Copper Trust combined employ enough men, if brought together with their families, to make a city the size of Philadelphia. Estimated roughly, they have an employe for each forty five hundred dollars of par capital. If these employes are all heads of families, then a mouth is fed for each nine hundred dollars of the capital. The Tobacco Trust, with two hundred thousand employes, has one for each three thousand dollars of par capital, and the Telephone Trust one for each two thousand dollars. Apply this illustration to four hundred industrial, transportation, and public-service corporations, with more than twenty billions of capital. Allow one employe for each five thousand dollars capital. Deduct a percentage for girls, and mass the bread-winners with their families, and we have a community of about fifteen million souls. Now, whether this is a good condition or a bad one let others decide. It shows that the trusts, far from being the personal concern of a few thousand millionaires, ramify, ramify, ramify through the whole nation. Throw a stone anywhere east of the Mississippi, and it is likely to hit some chap who has a grub-stake in a trust. It is known that corporations buy out competitors to perfect their monopoly. But how many persons have heard of a trust buying up a business to get the man at the head of it? One trust has done this in a score of instances. A certain family in the South, two brothers and two sisters, owned a factory that cleared about twenty thousand dollars a year. Each drew out about three thousand dollars a year, and the rest went into the plant. The long arm of the trust reached out, that factory was purchased, its brands disappeared in six months. The sisters got capital enough to give them a better income than the factory had yielded. One of the brothers took a three-thousand-dollar place with the trust. The other brother was the man who was really wanted. He now gets ten thousand dollars a year.

Where Titles Are Cheap.

(From Truth.)

The cheapest country for buying a title used to be Portugal. When a man is made a baron or a count there, his patent recites the service for which the grant is made. It was once in Portugal, and I had some curiosity to discover what were the services for which an Englishman of my acquaintance had been made a Portuguese baron. I therefore looked the matter up, and I found that it was for having introduced into the country a new tree. There used to be another plan for becoming a baron. It appears that there is—or was then—a convent which once had large possessions. All its tenants were, by the fact of being tenants, barons. But the convent had lost its possessions with the exception of one farm. It had an agent in London. For a very moderate consideration the agent let this farm to a would-be tenant. He therefore became a baron; and when he resigned the farm to the next applicant he retained the title.

"Preventics" will promptly check a cold or the Grippe when taken early or at the "sneeze stage." Preventics cure seated colds as well. Preventics are little candy cold cure tablets, and Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. will gladly mail you samples and a book on Colds free, if you will write him. The samples prove their merit. Check early Colds with Preventics and stop Pneumonia. Sold in 5c and 25c boxes by All Druggists.

To See the World.

A singular instance of the precocious development of 'wander-lust' occurred at the Windsor street station, Montreal, on Saturday, just before the departure of the St. John, N. B., train.

Mr. Robert Miller, the station master, came across a group of the passengers by that train gathered round a tiny boy of some seven years, on the platform. The boy was telling them that he was starving and had no home, and that he wanted to get to St. John, New Brunswick, where he had an uncle. Mr. Miller took the boy to his office in order to investigate his case, and see what could be done for him.

Asked for his name, the boy said he had forgotten it. Asked for his home, he replied he had none.

"Where did you have breakfast this morning?"

"Haven't had any."

"Where did you sleep last night?"

"I didn't sleep. I wandered round all night."

"Where did you have your dinner yesterday?"

"Didn't have any. My mother and father is dead, and I want to go to my uncle in St. John."

"You're telling lies," remarked Mr. Miller severely. "You're looking fat and well, and you've had plenty of food to-day."

"No," replied the boy.

A little later on a man came into the office and instantly recognized the boy, giving the name and address of his parents. He listened in some astonishment to the story that the boy told, then turned on the youngster.

"You lying little brat," he said. "I've a good mind—"

But like a flash the boy rushed through the doorway and was gone.—Montreal Witness.
