meagre— He leaned towards paragraphing and his philosophy is a collection of terse editorial notes which have become proverbs—"the wisdom of many is the wit of one." Yet, as we say, Solomon was handicapped. The only printing of any consequence in his day was done on bricks—a modern historical novel would have kept a brick yard running overtime for months—and was expensive, even for a king. If he had turned out a column of Pointed Paragraphs daily, the stuff might have lain about his rolltop desk for years before the brickmaker's assistant called for copy. Naturally this was discouraging, and it may be the reason why the king left no proverbs relative to housecleaning. Of course he must have known all about it, for he lived in a palace of enormous size and, no doubt, supported in comfort a large section of the scrub-ladies' union. It may be that like many other men he shrank from the subject, yet it seems to us there is enough heroism displayed by the gentle sex at this time of year to merit some words of approval from the wise. The ordinary woman whose tastes have not run in the direction of Laura Jean Libbey, society or other frivolity can wash the woodwork of three rooms, take up the carpets and beat them, scrub the floors, take down stovepipes, clear them of soot, sweep down the walls and wash windows all in one day. She does not like to do it but she is ashamed to sit in the midst of dirt. Usually her husband cannot appreciate her point of view. He does not care how dirty the house is—at least that is what he says, and he raises Cain when he comes home at night and finds his cold dinner set for him on the top of the upright piano. The woman has to do all the work and gets for it only labored satire and occasional profanity. Surely here was an opportunity for a few comments by a keen observer like Solomon. It is true he left us some general remarks about a good wife, but why did he not go into particulars? He might have told us, for instance, that a virtuous woman insisteth on a tidy cellar, or that a good wife abhorreth dust on the picture moulding. We cannot but regret that Solomon was too busy to write any proverbs of this character.—Toronto News.

$1,450,000,000 a Year for Liquor.

Every man, woman and child in the United States spent $17.94 each in 1906 to quench thirst. This means a total expenditure of $1,677,083,610. Of this amount just 18 per cent went for coffee, tea, cocoa, and the increase over the preceding year is more marked than usual.

This $17.94 represents a per capita consumption of 20.20 gallons of beer, 1.51 gallons of spirits and .55 gallons of wines, a total of 22.27 gallons of alcoholic drinks during the year for every person in all this country. The quantities of the four leading beverages drunk in 1906, according to the American Grocer, were as follows:—

GALLONS.

Beer.....	1,699,985,642
Coffee.....	1,609,452,348
Tea.....	561,730,500
Spirits and wines.....	140,328,339

When nearly $1,000,000,000 was appropriated by the 58th congress for the various branches of the government, the country was amazed. "Watch dogs of the treasury" stood up on their hind legs and bayed, bayed loudly and long at the extravagance of the powers that be in Washington. There is not even a yelp, so far heard, at the spending of nearly $1,500,000,000 every year for drink.

This sum is so vast that the mind works out the "13 14-15" puzzle or "How old is Ann?" before it can afford to even make a clutch at it. It means all sorts of things, but first and foremost it stands for the amount passed, in the main, over the counters of the saloons in this country.

According to Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, the total value of all the farm products of the nation is but little more than four times as great as this; the liquor bill of the nation is $1,450,000,000, while its corn crop is valued at but $1,167,000,000. The liquor bill is double the value of the wheat crop, more than twice the value of the yearly yield of cotton and more than the combined value of wheat and cotton grown in this country.

Just a few more figures to show the extent of the "booze" situation. It is estimated that the 84,000,000 people in the United States spend for maintenance, exclusive of rents, just about $14,000,000,000. Just exactly one-eighth of this goes for stimulants. In other words, for every $14 spent for food, clothing, fuel and other items, $2 is spent for liquor.

While whiskey drinking fell off somewhat, the consumption of beer took such an upward flight as to carry it nearly to the skies. The year 1906 demonstrated that the concoction of which a noted brewer once said "it can also be made of hops and malt," is the great American drink. For the first time in the history of this country, measured by the gallons consumed, it exceeds the quantity of coffee drunk. The world's favorite bean has given place to the brewer's art.

The United States treasury was enriched during the year 1906 just $55,641,859 by the brewers, while during the same period consumers spent just $852,974,955 for their steins, glasses, pitchers, "growlers" and the like. There was a surprising gain in the use of domestic wines during the past year. In its summing up of the situation, the American Grocer says:

"The consoling fact, in viewing the nation's expenditure for stimulating beverages, is that only 10 per cent of the per capita consumption of 22.27 gallons is of whiskey and wine. The milder beverages grow in favor, while spirits show only a slight gain, the per capita used in 1906 being only 0.05 gallons more than in 1903, and just one quart more per capita than in 1900, when less than 18 gallons of beer per capita was consumed, against over 20 gallons in 1906.

"This is certainly making progress toward the general exercise of temperance, and should lend encouragement to efforts to decrease the frightful bill occasioned by the immoderate use of alcoholic beverages."

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT.

White Woman on Cent.

The emblem of liberty on the one cent coin is the goddess in an American Indian head-dress, but the face shows no characteristics of the North American aborigine. It is the face of a little girl, Sarah Longacre Keen, upon whose head was placed the feathered ornament of a Sioux Indian. Her father was an engraver and he took the idea and placed his daughter's head on the coin. Sarah Longacre Keen died in Philadelphia not long ago, after having served thirty-five years as the secretary of the city's branch of the Methodist Woman's Foreign Missionary Society.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Excited Nerves, Twitching Muscles

SYSTEM EXHAUSTED BY WORRY AND LOSS OF SLEEP—PERFECT HEALTH THE RESULT OF USING

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Such cures as this make it impossible to doubt the restorative influence of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. E. J. Vanderburgh of Eastern Welland avenue, St. Catharines, Ont., states: "For twenty-one years I was badly afflicted with heart trouble, nervousness and cramps in the limbs, also twitching of the muscles and nervous headaches. I became weak, debilitated and emaciated. My condition was distressing and I was made worse through worry and loss of sleep.

"I tried a hundred remedies in vain and reading about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I decided to try it. After having used half a dozen boxes of this preparation my old trouble had entirely vanished and I was enjoying better health than I had since girlhood. I am now past middle life and am in perfect health. I would not take worlds today and go back to my former state."

There is no more or less mystery and doubt as to the specific action of many drugs, but it is positively and definitely known that iron forms new red corpuscles in the blood, or, in other words, makes the blood rich and nourishing.

But iron alone cannot be taken into a delicate stomach. The great secret of the success of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is in the way iron is combined with certain other restoratives so as to make a preparation that can be used with the greatest benefit by even the most weak and delicate person.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is also slightly laxative as well as a tonic in influence, and while building up the system insures the regular and healthful action of the digestive, filtering and excretory systems.

If you would enrich the blood, strengthen the nerves and replace weakness and disease with health and vigor use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food; 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto.

A Bumper Crop.

A Kansas man was telling stories with reference to the propensity of farmers to overstate the size of their wheat crops, says a writer in the Sunday Magazine. He told of an elderly man in Topeka, who was engaged in the hardware business. A farmer, who was always giving skillfully padded accounts of his wheat harvest, called on the hardware dealer one day, and began his usual boasting.

"You don't tell me!" was the polite rejoinder of the hardware man. "Well, I have been doing some farming this year myself."

"I didn't know that," said the farmer. "I always supposed your interests were confined to the city. So you have a farm, eh? What do you raise?"

"Wheat, just wheat," was the reply.

"Good crop this year?"

"Fine!"

"How many bushels?"

"I don't know just how many bushels," replied the hardware man, in a slow, hesitating tone, calculated to impress every word upon his listener; "but my men stacked all they could outdoors, and then stored the rest of it in the barn."

Higher Criticism.

King Solomon was a wise man who labored under difficulties. Some of these difficulties were domestic, some personal and some public. And each one, no doubt, did its part in preventing the King from turning out a definite amount of copy daily. For forty years he sat on the Israelitish throne and yet the sum of his literary work is exceedingly Good Words for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

People everywhere take pleasure in testifying to the good qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mrs. Edward Phillips of Barclay, Md., writes: "I wish to tell you that I can recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My little girl, Catherine, who is two years old, has been taking this remedy whenever she has had a cold since she was two months old. About a month ago I contracted a dreadful cold myself, but I took Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and was soon as well as ever." This remedy is for sale by all dealers.

Russian Torture.

The London Chronicle gives the following story of Russian torture from the town of New Margelan. The village of Kuva would appear to be in the province of Fergana, in Russian Central Asia, of which Margelan is the capital:—

On February 10 final sentence, was passed in the matter of an attack in the village of Kuva upon the house of a rich money-lender, from whom £5,000 was taken. The temporary Council of War of the district sentenced three men to death by hanging, six to labor in the mines for various periods, and six were acquitted. The trial was conducted with open doors, and many of the public were present.

A disagreeable impression was produced on those present by the disclosure in the course of the trial of torture, to which it appears the accused persons were subjected by the djigitai (officials) of the Kuva village administration at the time of the preliminary examination. They poured kerosene over the back of one of the prisoners, and then set light to it. He showed the burns at the trial. In the case of another prisoner the torture was unmentionable. It is held that the native administration were led away by an excess of caution.
