The Care of the Hands.

By a Leading Dermatologist.

Article No: 1—"On the Care of the Nails."

IT is important after drying the hands to press the cuticle softly back from the nails with an orange wood stick. This gives the desired length and prevents hang-nails. The pressing down of the cuticle is essential for well-shaped nails. If the operation produces any raggedness, a keen pair of scissors should clip it off. The points should be very fine to insert under this hem of the nail. To give the nails the desired tint and brilliant polish a cosmetic should first be applied and rubbed in thoroughly, followed by the proper nail polish, after which the nails should be rubbed with a chamois buffer. This operation takes but a few minutes and the result more than repays one for the time spent. (We carry in stock a full line of the necessary articles for the proper care of the nails.)

BOARD OF HEALTH.—A meeting of the Board of Health was held on Monday evening, the chairman, Dr. Griffin, presiding. The Inspector was instructed to see that all places wherein scarlet fever had existed be thoroughly fumigated, before the inmates are allowed to go out, and to keep a sharp look out for any new cases which may arise. It is hoped that the disease is dying out. There have only been about a half dozen cases in all. A number of other matters were also discussed dealing with the prevention of disease in the town when spring sets in, and a meeting of the Board will be held later in the winter to deal more fully with it. The Board wishes to impress on the Town Council that in every case where a sewer is accessible to a house, the occupant be immediately compelled to enter the sewer, and also that where sewers are required in the central portion of the town, they be laid. The opinion of the Board was that cess pools and old dry closets should be dispensed with as far as possible within the settled parts of the town, as they are undoubtedly breeders of disease.

The Skunk Industry in Maine.

Official figures show that skunks annually bring the State of Maine between $125,000 and $150,000, double the revenue from the honey making industry. Nearly 25,000 gallons of skunk oil, which is said to have curative properties, are produced annually in Maine. The wholesale price is $5 a gallon. One skunk is supposed to produce a quart of oil. Skunk skins also are valuable. In New York and Pennsylvania there are skunk farms where light covered animals are kept for breeding purposes and the dark are killed for their fur.

The Cost of Sickness

depends, sometimes, upon who puts up the medicines. The price paid for each individual prescription hardly enters into the matter at all; the important part to think of is whether the medicine will do all the good it should or not. If it has not the necessary medicinal value the patient's recovery is slow and longer suffering and heavier doctor bills will be the result.

If we put up your prescriptions the cost of sickness will be light as possible because our pure ingredients accurately and scientifically combined will hasten recovery.
