Millinery as an Occupation For Women.

The business of making and trimming hats, always open to women and formerly confined to them, is still one of the most lucrative trades for girls who show an aptitude for it. The best opportunities are, of course, to be found in the large cities, for even if a girl who has mastered the trade should prefer to establish herself eventually in the country or in a suburban town, she will have to get her training in the city. Otherwise customers are likely to question her knowledge of styles, and there is no business in which a reputation for being well informed is of more value.

In the city shops girls generally begin an apprenticeship at the age of thirteen or fourteen years, and are usually required to serve six months without pay, except that they get an allowance for car fare.

During this period they will be little more than errand girls, to run from one part of the shop to another, and save the time and strength of persons whose services are of more value. But meanwhile they will be learning the names of material and where it is kept and what this and that is used for, and at the end of the six months should begin to receive wages of three dollars a week.

The first real work that a young milliner does is in lining hats, making frames and bands. Good sewing counts here, and if the girl has acquired some facility with her needle before she entered the shop, it will be to her advantage.

Education counts, too, not so much in a specific as in a general sense. Nearly all employing milliners say that the girls who come to them with a good common-school education display more sense and more intelligence about their work, and so advance more rapidly.

By and by the girl who has been lining hats will be given one to make; that is, she will sew the braid on the frame and leave the hat ready for the trimmer. If she does it well she will soon find herself advanced to the makers' bench, and her wages somewhat increased. Makers receive from six to twelve dollars a week, according to their skill and speed. The copyists are a class of skilful makers who can reproduce a desired shape in any given material. Copying is a stage at which one arrives naturally, by showing a capacity to do the work.

Last of all come the trimmers, the artists of the business, the girls whose deft fingers seem to their less accomplished sisters to be endowed with magic, and whose salaries are the envy and the ambition of every liner and maker.

The payment for this work is, indeed, generous. In all the large cities good trimmers receive eighteen, twenty, twenty-five, thirty dollars a week, and in New York sometimes forty and fifty. It is the trimmers, too, who most often are chosen for such pleasant perquisites as trips to other cities, where famous milliners have "openings" twice a year. Sometimes, too, they are selected to go abroad as buyers of materials for the houses that employ them.

But successful trimming is much more than a skilful trade; it is an art, and hence is not to be acquired at all, no matter how zealously it is sought.

There is, however, this comfort for the girl who hopes that she has the gift: all employing milliners are so eager to secure good trimmers that they give every opportunity to an ambitious aspirant, and do all they can to develop latent genius.

Of late there have been many schools of millinery established in the large cities and no doubt some of them, if not all, give honest and intelligent instruction for the tuition fee which is exacted. But it is only fair to the young girls who desire to make millinery their business to say to them that the employing milliners, as a rule, have so little faith in these schools that a diploma from one of them counts for nothing. Many employers, will take a wholly inexperienced girl in preference.

The Women's Educational and Industrial Unions, having discovered this, are endeavoring to meet the objections of employers by establishing classes in which the instruction conforms to trade conditions; and some unions have even established millinery shops for the sale of their product.—Youth's Companion.

How to be Very Popular.

Never hesitate to talk about yourself and your affairs. This will interest everybody.

Do not fail to throw cold water on other people's plans and discourage their ambition. Nobody is sensitive about this.

Be sure to dwell upon the defects and failings of others, and call everybody's attention to them. Everybody likes to gossip.

Always be on the watch for slights or insults. Remember, most people are your social superiors and are trying to cut you.

Always take the best seat wherever you go, and, after you are well seated offer your seat to others without the slightest intention of getting up.

Just look out for your own comforts. Let other people do the same.

Never do anything that you do not feel like doing.

Never try to force your moods. Let them take care of themselves. Nobody will mind if you get into a rage, or nag or scold, or have the "blues." It is pleasant to have gloomy, moody people with long faces around the house; it is so uplifting to everybody.

Never hesitate to show when your feelings are hurt, or to indicate your jealousy when others receive more attention or are better dressed than you.

If things do not suit you, slam things around the house. Be just as disagreeable as possible. Never mind if you break a thing or two now and then. It will relieve the blood pressure on the brain.

Always remember that praise is a splendid thing for you, but very bad for others. It encourages vanity, and people who are praised get "so puffed up" and "big-headed" that there is no living with them.—Success.

Vigor and Health Fully Restored.

THE OLD TIRED, LISTLESS FEELING, THE SLEEPLESSNESS AND NERVOUSNESS WERE DRIVEN AWAY BY

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The experience described in this letter corresponds to that of thousands of women who have not yet learnt of the marvellous restorative and invigorating power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. Henry Clark, Port Hope, Ont., states: "I have used several boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for nervousness and a completely run-down system and can heartily recommend it as a wonderfully effective treatment. Before using this remedy I had been in very poor health for some months. I seemed to have no energy or ambition, felt tired and listless most of the time and could scarcely drag myself about the house. I was weak, irritable and nervous, could not sleep well and felt discouraged about my health. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has taken away these symptoms and given back my usual health and vigor, consequently I endorse it fully."

Weakness, lightheadedness, dizziness at rising is one of the certain indications of thin blood and an exhausted condition of the body.

The action of the heart is weak, digestion is impaired, and all the vital organs perform their functions imperfectly, giving rise to headaches, feelings of fatigue and depression. Because it goes directly to the formation of new, rich blood, every dose of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is bound to prove of some benefit under such conditions.

Naturally and gradually the exhausted system is restored until every organ is given back its accustomed strength and vigor. The weight is increased, the form is rounded out, and health and vitality drive out weakness, pain and disease.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, the great blood-builder and restorative, 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2.50 at all dealers or Edmanston, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Rescued His Dog from a Wolf.

To have his dog attacked in broad daylight in an open field by a wolf and to witness one of the hardest fights he ever saw was the experience of the nineteen-years-old son of William Bennett, whose story is given in the Register of Iola, Kansas. The dog was nearly killed, and the wolf was driven away only after repeated assaults with a club in the hands of the sturdy farmer boy.

The boy was plowing, and the dog, which is a shepherd of fair size, was playing about the field. Suddenly the boy's attention was attracted by the barking of a dog, and he turned to see the animal fighting full tilt with a large gray wolf.

The fight was fast and furious, the animals went round and round, and finally worked their way up under the plow handles. The wolf was so interested in its combat with the dog that it did not realize that the dog had a faithful ally in his master.

The boy saw that the wolf was getting the better of the bargain, so seizing a club, he hammered the animal with all his strength. The wolf hung on with great tenacity, and it was only after a severe beating that it let go. When it gave up, it made for the woods as fast as its legs would carry it. It made no attempt to attack the boy. The dog was thoroughly exhausted and covered with blood, but was not cowed, and later in the afternoon raised a great rumpus round a pile of rocks in the field near where the fight had taken place.

The boy made an investigation, and discovered the wolf's lair in the rock pile. From the pile of rocks he took eleven young wolves. The game fight which the wolf put up was then explained. The dog had discovered the wolf's den, routed out the wolf, and the animal, for the purpose of protecting its young, had made the hard and determined fight which wild animals know how to make under such circumstances.

Relief From Rheumatic Pains.

"I suffered with rheumatism for over two years," says Mr. Rolland Curry, a patrolman, of Key West, Fla. "Sometimes it settled in my knees and lamed me so I could hardly walk, at other times it would be in my feet and hands so I was incapacitated for duty. One night when I was in severe pain and lame from it my wife went to the drug store here and came back with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I was rubbed with it and found the pain had nearly gone during the night. I kept on using it for a little more than two weeks and found that it drove the rheumatism away. I have not had any trouble from that disease for over three months." For sale by all dealers.

From the Lumber-Camps.

The French Canadian is no stranger to the people of New England, and his dialect is a source of constant amusement. The Portland Express prints a number of stories by way of illustrating the difficulty the Frenchman has with our language. A reform of the spelling would not help him much, for his trouble lies deeper than spelling.

Napoleon Roderick had a horse that he was trying to sell to a prospective customer. Said Napoleon:

"De hoss she don't look good,"—this was true because the beast was blind,—"but I tole, you, if you tak him an' stan' him on de barn for two week, put two quarts of oats on his back, feed him a blanket, and if she don't go in half past two I give you to him."

Pete Brusio went fishing. When he returned he told of his success in the following way:

"This mornin' when I get up befo' brek'fast I'm feeling jus' like go feesh. After I eat myself on de table I take my babboom pole an' go down on Tonker brooks for feesh. I'm get full basket."

"One of de feeshes, he's big one, I weigh it on de feesh market an' she weigh two pound an' ten inches."

"I cut de head an' tail off an' t'row de res' away. I cook him on de stove, an' hones I just soon have chicken as have it."

The following letter was sent by a French contractor to a Portland wholesale concern:

"Wes Milan, N. H., Dec. 15, '06. "M—T—Co., Portland,

"Please sen me 100 pound salt cod fishes wid salt on him, on my wood camp at Wes Milan. I don't want de fishes on de barril but on de packing wid rope tie aroun him."

"Please make hurry wid it cause you don't my man she's goin starve itself to death."

"You don't know sure you can recommend de pos master to me. Truly Alphonse—"
