Prelate of the Russian Church Dead

Constantini Petrovitch Povedonostseff, Procurator of the Holy Synod of Russia, from 1880 to 1905, is dead at the age of eighty. His accomplishments were many. He was very learned, his companions were high church dignitaries and princes, but among the Russian people and outside of Russia he will be remembered sorely for his arch-bigotry and political intolerance. When it would have been wise to make concessions to the widely-spreading hope of liberty in Russia, he was ever at the ear of the Czar, advising him not to bate a jot of his prerogatives, and to give no heed to the pleas or demands for popular government. He had the spirit of a Torquemada, and would have burnt heretics just as cheerfully, and with as much confidence that it was best for them. His influence over Russia for a quarter of a century was baleful, but it has necessarily waned of late, since the Czar found it no longer possible to insist upon the claims which his spiritual adviser held it to be his religious duty to maintain.

Books and Digestion.

(Arthur Symonds in London Saturday Review.)

It seems to me that with the multiplication of books we are losing all sense of literature. Leisure and three books, a Bible, a Shakespeare, a Walt Whitman, might make a man truly wise if the seeds of wisdom were in him. I do not know even a wise man whose instinct for wisdom would not be deadened by the frequentation of the Encyclopaedia Britannica. Books should be taken in doses no bigger than music or pictures; they are even harder to digest. There is more drunkenness in a book than in all the vineyards of France. A book may remake a man's soul. Books should be treated with reverence or cast out as dirt. They are in danger of passing out of the service of the temple into the "parcel delivery" of the grocer. Nothing is gained by reading a book unless you give to that book more than it brings to you. All those people who read with their eyes only are fatally wasting their time. A book read superficially makes the reader more superficial, and to read for "information" is to gnaw at the bones of meat.

Game and Disease.

We remember the saying attributed to Huxley that the single ladies of Old England are to be thanked for the superiority of our beef, because they keep cats to destroy the mice that would otherwise exterminate the humble bees that fertilize the red clover on which our cattle feed. Now some one is writing to the Spectator to propose the slaughtering of game in the Zambesi valley in order to prevent the spread of sleeping sickness. The proposal hinges on what we consider to be the mistaken statement by Mr. Austen, of the British Museum, that the tsetse fly cannot exist long without mammalian blood. The other step in the argument is no more sure—namely, that the tsetse fly is indispensable to the spread of sleeping sickness.

The evidence is not sufficient to condemn the game of even a portion of the Zambesi valley. The animal that demands mammalian blood is, we fancy, far greater than the tsetse fly, and the fact that, unlike the deer, he is capable of writing to the papers must not be allowed to prevail.

A SPRING DANGER.

Many People Weaken Their Systems by Dosing with Purgative Medicines.

A spring medicine is a necessity. Nature demands it as an aid to enriching the blood and carrying off the impurities that have accumulated during the indoor life of the winter months. Thousands of people recognizing the necessity for a spring medicine, dose themselves with harsh gripping purgatives. This is a mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicines weaken the system and cannot possibly cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives weaken. The blood should be made rich, red and pure—purgatives cannot do this. What is needed is a tonic, and the best tonic medical science has yet devised is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood, and this new blood strengthens every organ and every part of the body. That is why they cure headaches, backaches, rheumatism, neuralgia and a host of other troubles that come from poor watery blood. That is why the men and women who use Dr. Williams Pink Pills eat well and sleep well and feel active and strong. Miss Mabel Synnot, Lisle, Ont., says:—"I was pale and weak and suffered greatly from headaches, and I found nothing to help me until I began taking Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These have completely restored my health and I bless the day I began taking them."

But be sure you get the genuine Pills with the full name "Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People" on the wrapper around each box—all other so-called pink pills are fraudulent imitations. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The Worst Climates.

(From the Minneapolis Journal.)

A harsh, raw wind was blowing. Now and then a flurry of icy rain fell. The streets were ankle-deep in slush.

"Of these three unspeakable climates I give the palm to the Straits of Magellan. There it rains, on an average 350 days in the year. The wind blows a hurricane from January to December. The thermometer never rises much above the freezing point. A year round of raw, bitter days of rain and snow.

"Next comes Sierra Leone, on the African west coast. That low-lying marshy region has an average temperature of 81 degrees, and the annual rainfall is 189 inches—enormous. There are, too, the 'smokes.' These are mists, smelling like oyster mud, that rise continually from the marshes, giving marsh fever to nine out of ten of the white men that breathe them. A year round of hot and sticky days, with vile-smelling clouds of mist and whirring clouds of mosquitoes.

"Last come the high table lands of Central Asia, where the lack of moisture in the air makes the days Saharan and the nights Arctic. Days like a red-hot furnace, nights like a January blizzard—before this range of temperature no human constitution can stand up."

The Ever-Ready Pump.

William Barclay Parsons the engineer, is a foe to scamped work, and at a recent dinner, he said:

"That man is most unwise who tries to get his work done cheaply. Cheap work can always be secured, but the quality of such work is on its face—"

Mr. Parsons, smiling, interrupted himself to tell a story.

"There was a man," he said, "who entered a dairy and asked how much the milk was."

"Ten cents a quart, sir," the young woman behind the counter answered.

"The man looked disappointed."

"Haven't you got any for six cents?"

"No," said the young woman; "but," she added, "we can soon make you some."

"The typewriter at our office," Mr. Sharpe was explaining to the caller, who was thinking of buying a machine, "is what they call the visible kind." "Visible!" snapped Mrs. Sharpe, entering just in time to hear the closing remark. "She's conspicuous."—Boston Post.

The April Designer.

April was chosen for the Easter number of The Designer because costumes appropriate for Easter are more storable for April than for March. And the designs of the new spring dresses are very attractive. The grace and practicability of The Designer models are winning many new friends among well-dressed women because of the ease of making and correctness in the fit.

Several articles, illustrated in detail, are devoted to the April bride. They discuss some new styles wedding of gown, and besides giving the patterns for them describe the latest accessories that go with them.

New spring hats are illustrated so clearly that they may be copied, and the regular advance article by Laura Seiple, this time on the coming dainties of dress, has its accustomed place in the center of The Designer.

Mary Kilsyth, who is a well-known interior decorator, contributes an illustrated article entitled "Some Unusual Interiors." This, like all such material in The Designer, will be found to be of practical application in the home.

The fiction in the April number is of more than ordinary interest. The continued story begun in the March number, "Economy" Farm," by Miles Bradford, author of "Carlotta and I," has the second instalment in the April number. There is also an interesting article on "My Three Easters in the Far East," by Alexander Hume Ford, a man who has covered the world in travel and has had many interest experiences. An Easter play for little folks will prove to be another possibility for home entertainment. And besides these there are many more articles of use and interest among the regular departments of The Designer which Designer readers know and look for from month to month.
