Bargain Day.

The married man looked from his paper across the table at his wife, who was busy sewing, says a writer in the Chicago News. He coughed to attract her attention. "My dear," he said, "here's a gasoline engine for sale at a sacrifice."

"My goodness!" said his wife. "What do we want with a gasoline engine? You don't mean an automobile, do you?"

"Of course not."

"There are so many new names for them."

"This is not an automobile," continued the man. "It's a gasoline engine, a two-horse power engine, one of the best makes, and in good order. I think I must look that up."

"But what's the use of it? We don't want—"

"We don't now, I know, but we might at any time, almost. It has lots of uses. We could use it to saw wood or pump water. If we went to live in a suburb where there was no water-supply we could dig a well and pump water all over the house. One-third the cost, it says."

"But is seems to me—"

The man turned to his paper and ran his finger down the column.

"Piano for sale," he read. "Owner must leave city on account of health. Paid five hundred dollars two months ago. Will take sixty dollars cash." How would you like to go over with me to look at it, my dear?"

"But we have one piano."

"We haven't had a new one for over a year," said the man, with some heat, "and we only paid three hundred dollars for it when it was new. Did you understand I could get it for sixty dollars?"

"It can't be any good at that price, and even if it was—"

"Circus men, attention!" read the man.

"A fine, healthy male polar bear five years old can be obtained for less than the cost of his transportation from Spitzbergen. Comparatively good tempered and acclimated. A bargain!"

"William!" exclaimed the wife, with a bewildered air.

"We could make a rug of him if we could get him cheap enough. You know we've been needing a rug for the library."

"Here's a concrete-making machine, I see, also a bargain, and moreover, a delicatessen store and—"

"Are you out of your mind?"

"Elmira," said the man, reproachfully, "did I ask you such a question as that when you were reading over your list of bargain purchases a few hours ago?"

The News—No Pure Drug Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure is—and has been for 20 years. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package. For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must be law be on the label. And it's not only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. To Dine and Sleep at Windsor Castle.

The recent visit of Mr. John Burns to Windsor Castle at the invitation of King Edward was unique, inasmuch as the President of the Local Government Board is probably the only Labor representative who has been honored with an invitation to dine and sleep at the royal residence by the reigning sovereign of the country.

It must have been a curious experience for one who was obliged to commence the struggle for a livelihood at ten years of age to be saluted by sentries as the guest of the King, and to be relieved of even his handbag by a royal footman.

Anyone, however, who is invited to dine with their Majesties is waited upon in practically the same manner as the King and Queen would be themselves. If a large party from London are asked to spend the night at Windsor Castle a special train is provided, and royal servants attend in order to wait upon the guests. In the case of Mr. Burns, a special carriage was reserved for him, and a closed carriage, drawn by a pair of horses in charge of a postilion, met him at Windsor. While, of course, the ordinary rules of royal etiquette are observed, there is always an absence of rigid formality when commoners dine with the King. His Majesty acts the part of genial host to perfection, and with his usual tact never fails to put his guests quite at ease.

During the after-dinner smoke he throws off all reserve, and jokes and chats with his guests just as an ordinary individual. Their Majesties usually retire from the company about ten or eleven o'clock, although that does not mean that the guests must do likewise. They may please themselves in exactly the same way as if they were at home. That their movements are in no wise restricted by any form of etiquette is shown by the fact that Mr. Burns, the morning following his visit to Windsor Castle, was up at six, and was looking round the grounds between seven and eight.

Their Majesties seldom breakfast with their guests. Sometimes they give their farewell greetings the previous evening, if the guest is leaving the following morning. Usually, however, both the King and Queen say 'Good-bye' to anyone who has been staying at the Castle just before the guest leaves.

It may not be out of place here to say a word regarding 'command' theatrical performances at Windsor Castle. At one time the reigning sovereign not only paid all travelling expenses, but also paid the actors and actresses at a certain rate. When, in 1883, however, Queen Victoria resumed something like the old life at court, and asked the late Sir Henry Irving to play 'Becket' at Windsor, the famous actor stipulated that he should be allowed to bear all expenses, and this rule has usually been followed by other well-known actors who, with their companies, have given 'command' performances.

Queen Victoria, however, made it a rule with all her guests that she should bear the travelling expenses, and King Edward has always followed Her late Majesty generous example.

Common Sense View. (Tit-Bits.)

Father, I would like to see you in the library on a matter of business."

"Very well, Viola; come along. Now, then, what is it?"

"Father, you are aware that Harry Wilkins has been paying me his attentions the last year?"

"Yes, and I've felt like kicking him! The idea of a Wilkins daring to aspire to the hand of a Grafton!"

"He has asked me to be his wife."

"The scoundrel! Why, I'll!"

"And I've almost promised," she placidly continued.

"What, what! My daughter marry a Wilkins on $25 a week? Never! Go to your room while I seek out this base adven—"

"Father, I want to talk real business to you," she interrupted. "Have you seen the marriage statistics of London for the last year?"

"No, of course not! The idea of Harry Wilkins skulking around after my—"

"Wait! According to the statistics, this city has 871,240 more females than males. There are 226,890 more marriageable girls than can find husbands, to say nothing of 182,321 widows who are very anxious for a No. 2. The number of young men in London earning over $15 a week and in the market is only 22,107. There are after these young men exactly 220,000 young women and 150,000 widows. Three out of every five children born are girls. Death removes two young men to one married man or old bachelor."

The old man turned pale and grasped a chair for support. After a pause she continued:

"From June to October over 80,000 marriageable young women visit fashionable watering places, and it is estimated that 1,442 of them catch husbands, thus further reducing the chances of a resident cockney. Farther, take this pencil and figure out your Viola's chances of catching another man if she lets Harry Wilkins canter away."

"Great Jimminy!" he gasped, figuring for a moment. "Why, your chances are only one in 21,875,948!"

"Just as I figure it out. What shall I say to him this evening?"

"Say! Say! Why tell him you'll have him and be mighty glad of the chance! And don't let him draw a long breath before you add that the ceremony can take place right after breakfast tomorrow morning and that I'm to give you a wedding present of $500 in cash!"

Midnight Sun in Alaska.

(Washington Post.)

"Some time the world will turn upside down again," declared John Lennon, of Dawson, Alaska. "I say again, because I believe that once, perhaps a million years ago, the world turned over, and what is not the north pole was then the tropics. I know many people will scoff at such a proposition, but I think I have evidence sufficient to establish that belief. I have been mining in Alaska for nine years, and in that time I have taken out of the earth, and seen taken out, the bones and skulls of enormous animals that could only have lived in a tropical climate. They are the bones of mastodons, and are of immense proportions. Think of skulls eight feet broad, with four feet between the eyes; tusks eight feet long, and grinders forty inches across. This is not a fairy story, but absolute truth, and can be confirmed by many of the men who have dug into the bowels of the earth in Alaska. Some folk have declared that the cold in that country came gradually; but in that case the animals would certainly have migrated to warmer climates. Anyone knows that the instincts of animals are strong enough to take them into places of safety. Scientists agree that the earth has shifted from its orbit, and is shifting all the time, and as soon as it loses its balance the world will turn upside down again. That may not come for a hundred thousand years."

"It is not necessary for an American to go abroad to see wonderful sights. We have the land of the midnight sun right here in our own country—Alaska. At Dawson, on June 22, it is possible to see the sun for twenty-four hours. One can read a newspaper at 12 o'clock at night just as well as at noon time. There are many wonderful things up there that the people of the East know nothing about."

Had a Nasty Bronchial Cough

AS AN AFTER EFFECT OF PNEU-

MONIA—NOTHING PROVED EF-

FECTIVE UNTIL WE USED

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Many a mother can say, as does Mrs. Harker in the following letter, that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has proven a friend to her in time of colds with the little ones.

Mrs. Walter Harker, Sydenham, Frontenac county, Ont., writes:—

"Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has proven a friend to me in times of colds with my little ones. I have tried many others, but have found none just as good. My little boy about a year old, had pneumonia, and was left with a nasty bronchial cough, but Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is helping him wonderfully, and I am sure it will cure him."

"We have also used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with splendid results, and have great faith in all of Dr. Chase's medicines."

It may not have occurred to you that both bronchitis and asthma are diseases of the nerves of the bronchial tubes and lungs, and that this is why severe attacks of coughing are brought on whenever these nerves are irritated by changing temperature, the breathing of dust or emotional excitement.

It is by its remarkable facility for soothing the nerves and sheathing the delicate membranous linings with a protective coating that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has proven so thoroughly effective as a cure for bronchitis and asthma. Its power in these diseases is unquestionable.

Relief from coughing comes almost immediately and by persistent use cure is gradually and certainly brought about.

When the system is greatly run down it is advisable also to use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in order to assist in restoring vigor to the wasted nerves.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, family size 60 cents, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.
