Besides 1380 feet of new side track placed at Hartland station a 700 foot siding has been added to the yard at Stickney, from which station an increasing quantity of lumber and produce is shipped from year to year. The Peel Lumber Co's mill there gives employment to about thirty-five men, and a little village is springing up.

Building operations are handicapped by a scarcity of carpenters and the wet weather.

Rev. T. S. VanWart has been in poor health for a few days.

Ed. Alexander, the station agent, is taking a vacation and Relief Agent Deakin is here in his stead.

Besides Hartland's somewhat famous "Juniors," a second ball team was organized some time ago. It is styled "The Farmers," but is made up of old sportsmen who played ball when the Juniors were in their cradles. As might be expected, with such disparity in years and experience, the Farmers were victors in a series of five games ended on Tuesday evening. The count stood four games to one. The final game ended abruptly after the second inning wherein the big fellows scored 5 over the Juniors 1 in the first. But the Juniors are stuffy little chaps and are suffering only temporary defeat for there is real sporting blood in their veins. There is a long season yet in which to recoup their fallen fortunes.

The trustees have secured the services of Josiah Barnett, son of the postmaster, as Principal of the High School. Mr. Barnett graduated from the Normal School two years ago and since has taught in different districts hereabout. This summer he passed examination for superior license. G. C. Watson will not rebuild. He has sold what is left of his building on Main street to C. Humphrey Taylor, who will fit it up for rental. Mr. Watson still will carry on his undertaking business. He has moved into his house below town, formerly occupied by H. F. Perkins. He is at present doing business in the Murdock building, corner of Main and Maple streets but has not yet secured a permanent location.

H. R. Nixon is undecided about rebuilding this year. He will re-stock at once, however, having secured a place contiguous to his former stand.

Keith & Plummer are not yet decided about rebuilding this fall. They have however re-stocked, having secured the so-called Ross building at the upper end of Main street opposite the G. E. Boyer stand. While not having such commodious premises as their own store afforded they nevertheless have managed to crowd in goods enough to meet all demands of the trade. The firm wishes to thank the people for the liberal patronage in the past and hope they will not patronize them any the less because they are a little farther up town. Their goods are all entire-

Examination of McNally.

Lorne McNally, charged with being implicated in the kindling of the Hartland fire, was for the third time before Justices Barnett and Everett on Saturday. At the second examination Asa Jones deposed that the accused had told him he knew the fire was kindled with gasoline because he was the one who had the handling of it. This interesting bit of evidence was contradicted by McNally who said he referred to having had the handling of gas in a hotel.

The three witnesses on Saturday were produced with a view to finding out where the gasoline may have been secured.

Appleton S. Perkins deposed that on Saturday night before the fire he examined his gasoline cask and estimated it contained about 10 or 12 gallons; that on Monday after the fire he found the barrel in a potato patch with only about five gallons in it. The barrel had been in a shed that any person could easily enter.

C. H. Perkins corroborated this evidence and declared the fluid could not have escaped while the barrel was being moved.

H. N. Boyer deposed that he owned the building where the gasoline was stored and during the fire he rolled the barrel to a place of safety. He thought at the time it did not contain more than a gallon.

After these witnesses were heard the case was postponed until next Saturday. T. C. L. Ketchum, counsel for the accused moved that the prisoner be released on bail. The magistrates agreed and demanded two sureties of $500 each. Deputy Sheriff Foster offered to give bonds but a second surety was not available, whereupon the magistrates accepted McNally's own recognizance in lieu of a second bondsman.

Some time next week an investigation will begin under the Act for the Investigation of Fires. It will be held behind closed doors, and but one witness will be examined at a time. Any persons who visit may be represented by counsel.

The Highest Salaried Man.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The highest salaried man in the United States is said to be John Hays Hammond, the expert on gold. As a mining engineer it is understood Mr. Hammond derives an income of about $800,000 per year. He is a Californian, was born in San Francisco fifty-two years ago. In the course of his career he has travelled in every part of the world where gold has been found, or where its presence has been suspected. If he says "yes," financial kings will spend millions for purchase or development of gold mines. He has highly skilled assistants, who visit mines all over the world and report to him. It is understood that his present regular salaries come almost entirely from European capitalists interested in South African mines. Of course $800,000 a year is too big a sum to be called salary, but it is interesting to observe that so much can be made by an individual and quite honestly.

Wanted a Place to Stay All Night.

An Irishman, who was walking along through the country in search of work as a farm hand, stopped one evening at a ranch and enquired of the owner if he wanted any more help. The ranchman replied that he did. Pat was at once asked into the house for a bite, after which his wages were agreed upon and Pat went to bed. The following morning Pat was awakened at 3 o'clock, when breakfast was ready. In a few moments Pat came down stairs lamp in hand, and look at the clock, then he started to go outdoors. The ranchman said, "Say, Pat, won't you have some breakfast before you go to work?" Pat replied, "Go to work? No, sir, I'm going to look for a place to stay all night!"

To Save The Railway Builders.

We wonder what provision is being made for ministering to the thousands of navvies and officers engaged in the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. Special difficulties attend this work and special qualifications are required of those who engage in it. In the first place, men are away from home, away from the influences that tend to keep them in order. The withdrawal of public opinion such as exists in well organized communities is sure to induce recklessness in men not under proper self-control. In the second place, at this kind of work a most cosmopolitan aggregation of men will be found. They will speak many languages profess many faiths, and live as Philistines. And lastly they will be strung out over hundreds of miles of railway right of way and, therefore, not easily accessible. It will require men of thoroughly manly instincts, rugged health, love of adventure and boundless patience and devotion to do such work with any degree of satisfaction.—Canadian Churchman.
