The Real Object in the Case.
 (Toronto Sun.)

Under the old arrangement covering the carrying of mail matter between Canada and the United States copies of Canadian publications intended for delivery in the United States paid postage at a Canadian office. In return for this payment carriage was provided by the Canadian postal service to the border, and at the expense of the United States service from the border to point of delivery in the United States. Similarly, copies of American publications intended for Canadian readers paid postage at a United States office, were carried by the United States service to the boundary, and by the Canadian service thence to Canadian readers. The same general conditions prevail still, the only difference being that the rates payable in both cases have been very largely increased. Under the arrangement which existed up to May 8th, our postal department did not receive a dollar for carrying American publications to Canadian readers. Neither will it receive a copper for similar service performed subsequent to that date. The effect of the change made will simply be to decrease the volume of this international traffic in reading matter, and to increase the cost to the individual Canadian subscribers for American publications and to American subscribers for Canadian journals.

It is said on behalf of the Post Office Department that the old arrangement could not be continued because it was one-sided—our post-office service carrying a much larger volume of United States printed matter to Canadian readers than the United States Government carried of similar Canadian material to readers in the United States. The arrangement was not, however, so one-sided as would appear from what has been stated by those who take this line. The bulk of the United States publications sent to Canada are delivered to points such as Montreal, Toronto, Windsor, the Soo, and Winnipeg, all of which are near the border. In all such cases much the greater part of the cost of carriage fell on the United States Government. New York journals, intended for Toronto, were carried by the American Government some four hundred miles to The Bridge, while the Canadian post-office had to furnish haulage for only about eighty miles from The Bridge to Toronto. Similarly, Chicago papers intended for Winnipeg were carried at the cost of the United States Government via St. Paul to the Manitoba boundary, some hundreds of miles, while Canada's share of the service consisted in carrying the few miles from the boundary to Winnipeg.

On the other hand, Canadian publications intended for the United States are mostly published near the border, but are read largely in far off States. For example, London papers have considerable numbers of readers in California. For such papers our Government provides carriage barely more than across one county, while the United States gives transportation from the border over half way across the continent. Windsor papers, ferried across to Detroit, are carried free by the American Government to Kansas and other points all over the Union. In the case of copies of Montreal publication for delivery in the United States, Canada's share in cost of delivery of the bulk of these was covered by hauling a few miles to the frontier, while the United States post office met the cost of free delivery all over New England, in which sections American readers of Montreal publications are mostly located. In all these cases, under the old arrangement (as well as under the new), the Canadian Government secured the revenue while the United States Government furnished the bulk of the service. When the increased length of haul which the United States Government had to provide for in the case of this international traffic in papers and magazines is taken into consideration, it will be found that the old arrangement was a fairly equitable one in point of distribution of the cost of the total service rendered.

But what do we find today? The Canadian post office service will carry Canadian publications from Quebec, Montreal, or Toronto, clear across the continent to Vancouver at half a cent a pound, or much below the cost of rendering the service. Papers and magazines from England are given the same service, and at the same financial loss on the service rendered. The real question with the Post Office Department was not one of profit or loss. What has been done in the abrogation of the old arrangement between Canada and the United States is an arrogant attempt on the part of the Government, at the instigation of special interests, to use the postal service as a means of restricting and regulating the choice of the Canadian people as to what they shall or shall not read.

Canada a Country of Many Languages.

How many languages are spoken in Canada? By one who has not given much thought to this question a very inadequate reply will doubtless be returned. One day last fall I was in a town some sixty miles from Toronto, where I was to lecture in the evening. Having the afternoon at my disposal, I thought I could profitably spend a few minutes in visiting the public school. Entering one of the forms, I asked the boys and girls the question, "What language do you speak in this town?" At first there was no reply, and, thinking that they did not catch the question properly, I repeated it. At that one of the boys lifted his hand, and, snapping finger and thumb together, he shouted "Irish." I said that I did not think that very many of them spoke that language, but if they were to listen they would hear not only the Irish but a great many other different tongues.

I suppose the best place in our country to hear different languages is in Winnipeg. During the past year more than forty-three different translations of the Bible have been sold by the depository there. Preparations are now being made by the Canadian Bible Society to supply the Bible in sixty different tongues. Let me draw attention to some of these—Arabic, Armenian, Bohemian, Burmese, Cree, Esth, Corean, Lett, Micmac, Ojibway, Persian, Romanch, Rouman, Ruthen, Sanskrit, Slavonic, Slovak, Tinne, Urdu and several forms of Yiddish.

The city of Brantford is very much concerned about how they can help to better citizenship the many foreigners in their midst. The chief of police informed me that they have at present between 800 and 1,000 speaking at least eight different languages.

More and more are the people of Canada realizing their responsibilities regarding the various nationalities that are to be found in the land. Churches are trying to reach them, but only a small number of men and women are able to speak direct to these peoples. The only institution in the land that can touch them all is the Bible Society. Through the great work done by the British and Foreign Bible Society the Bible is published today in over 400 different languages. The various auxiliaries in Canada have their depots for sale and free distribution of the Scriptures. They also send out colporteurs who go into the shacks of the settle or miner with their loads of Bibles. Especially is their work appreciated in the newer sections. A short time ago one of these Bible postmen found a Russian to whom he offered a Bible in Russ. The Russian expressed great delight in being able to get a Bible in his own language in this country. Never in the history of our country has there been such an opportunity to do missionary work.

I spent six weeks last summer in New Ontario, and found many new arrivals speaking many different tongues. At Fort William I found a young woman who had fifty foreigners in her house one night speaking twelve different languages. This was in the coal dock portion of the city. In Canada there are now 64 different languages spoken. In 1905 Winnipeg, next Johannesburg, had the largest number of different languages spoken in its borders of any city in the world.

In the Canadian West.

So far as the Province of Saskatchewan is concerned, the general opinion among those who are well-informed is that there is every probability of a yield for 1907 which will break all records, says a correspondent to the Globe. The area sown will not be nearly so large as it would have been under more favorable weather conditions, but nearly all authorities declare that it will be as large or larger than last year.

A. P. Ketchen, Deputy Commissioner of Agriculture, does not think the area sown to wheat will be appreciably decreased on account of the lateness of the spring, and he thinks there is no reason to fear any serious consequences to the crop from the backwardness of the season. It has generally been the case in Saskatchewan that a late spring has been followed by a good growing season.

Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Commissioner of Agriculture, expects the area under wheat to be larger than last year, but not so large as he thought it would be.

Around Regina there is a most cheerful feeling with regard to the whole grain situation, and there is a belief that the present season will be the most successful in the history of the West. The same sentiment shows itself in other centres. In the Saskatoon district prevailing conditions point to a great extension of the agricultural area, especially in wheat, and a most satisfactory growth of the new crop. The same is true in Indian Head, Yorkton, and Moose Jaw. It is understood that practically all the lands that had been prepared for wheat and could not be sown with that cereal is being devoted to oats, barley, and flax.

Dr. William Saunders, Director of Experimental Farms for the Dominion, who has been making a trip of inspection through Saskatchewan, has concluded that there will be an increase this year in the wheat acreage.
