

ENTITLED TO PARTICULARS

One ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion;
One ounce Compound Salatone;
Four ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla;
Mix, and take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime, drinking plenty of water.

The above prescription has been found invaluable in the treatment of kidney, bladder and urinary troubles, and diseases arising therefrom, such as rheumatism, sciatica, lame back and lumbago, and we feel that the public are entitled to particulars concerning it.

A prominent physician states that the excellent results that have been obtained from the use of the mixture are due to its direct action upon the kidneys, assisting them in their work of filtering all poisonous waste matter and acids from the blood and expelling same in the urine, and at the same time restoring the kidneys to a healthy condition.

He further states that anyone suffering from afflictions of this nature will find it to be very beneficial, and suggests that it be given a trial.

ALL THE OLD FAVORITES.

There are no birds in last year's nests adown the wind of years,
Maud Muller on a summer's day lay dying in Algiers.
Man wants but little here below thy cold gray crags, O sea!
'Tis sweet to hear the watch dog's bark across the sands of Dee.
At midnight in his guarded tent when all but him had fled,
Lifeless, but beautiful he lay, the bivouac of the dead!
Past Fontenoy, past Fontenoy, to hastening ills a prey,
Under a spreading chestnut tree my fondest hopes decay.
She was a phantom of delight that man was made to mourn.
The mill will never grind again; only five grains of corn!
Oh, come into the garden, Maude, and list unto me tell
Of how Horatius kept the bridge when Kosciusko fell!

A Literary Camp Cook.

When Charles G. D. Roberts, the author of 'Red Fox,' goes to the woods, says the New York Globe, in search of material for his nature stories, he always tries, so to arrange the outing that his son, Lloyd Roberts the poet, can accompany him. Years ago Mr. Roberts came to the conclusion that, if he wished to enjoy his life in the woods, he must find some way to avoid the drudgery of cooking. From that moment, therefore, he religiously spoiled every dish he touched, and so he soon succeeded in persuading his companions that, if they wanted anything that was fit to eat, they would have to prepare it themselves. It was as the result of this method of action that Lloyd Roberts has become what he is today, one of the greatest authorities on camp cookery in America.

When Mr. Roberts goes to the woods his first thought is given to the building of his clay oven. This is constructed of rocks so arranged as to permit of the necessary ventilation at the top and bottom. The chimneys are filled with clay, and thus prepared, he finds it possible to cook almost anything. With kettle suspended above the fire, he makes his delicious stews; with a good back log throwing its heat to the front, he planks his fish, or, with a carefully constructed green-wood split, he broils his duck or roasts his larger game. If small game is to be cooked—birds like quail, snipe, or teal—he cleans them, but does not pluck them. Instead, he wraps them in a mould made of white clay and water and buries them in the bottom of the oven. Packing them in hot ashes, he sweeps the red hot embers over them, and, when they have cooled sufficiently, he breaks the mould. When the clay falls away the skin and feathers of the bird come with it, leaving the game a delicious morsel, full of juice and tenderness.

When beans are to be cooked, Mr. Roberts parboils them, and in the evening, after dinner, he rakes out a hole in the bottom of the oven sufficiently large to admit of the insertion of the bean pot. When the beans have been prepared, seasoned with pepper and salt, and a little molasses, and accompanied by the necessary piece of salt pork, the pot, securely covered, is placed in the hole. Around it the hot rocks are piled, over it the hot ashes and embers, and in the morning there is a dish ready for breakfast that is tasty enough to tempt the appetite of a less hungry person than the average hunter.

Rabbits, squirrels, ducks or larger game all lend themselves deliciously to the treatment of the steppan, and even porcupine or muskrat, may be stewed delectably. Mr. Roberts learned the secret of cooking muskrat, from the Indians,] with whom, under the name of 'musquash,' it is a favorite food. In cooking this animal the only point that is necessary to remember is to remove the musk bag. This done, and the quadruped cut into small pieces and cooked with the necessary accompaniment of vegetables and seasoning, no more palatable dish could be imagined.

In treating such birds as the loon, or other flying creatures whose flesh is permeated with a fishy flavor, Mr. Roberts is careful to parboil them thoroughly before subjecting them to the final cooking. In the case of loon, or similar large birds, he would then stuff them with nuts, if he could procure them—the ordinary beechnuts being preferable—and would season the stuffing with plenty of sage. By this means all the strong taste that is so unpleasant would be removed.

When The Knights Held Malta.

It was in 1530, says Frank G. Carpenter in Chicago Record-Herald, that Charles V. of Spain gave Malta to the order of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, who thereupon took the title of the Knights of Malta and fortified it. At this time they had not only Malta, but Goso and Tripoli. They took upon themselves the defence of the Mediterranean. They made war upon the Barbary pirates, attacked the Turks again and again, and defeated the Sultan when he attacked them. They waged war with the Moslems for generations, and it was not until Napoleon Bonaparte, on his way to Egypt, besieged them that they surrendered their fortresses. Altogether they held the island for 268 years, and when the French took it they agreed to give the grand master of the knights an annual pension of about $60,000 and to every French knight resident in Malta a yearly allowance of $140.

The French siege was followed by one of the English and the Portuguese fleets, which lasted two years. During a part of this time there was a famine in Malta. Fresh pork sold for $2 a pound, dogs and cats were generally eaten and even rats brought an exorbitant price.

While the knights had possession of the island they lived in grand style. Those of each language had a particular post assigned them in case of attack, and there were also palaces or inns where all the members ate and assembled together to transact business. The palace of the grand master was surrounded by the four principal streets. It still stands and is now occupied by the officers of the British garrison.

This building covers more than two acres. It has two entrances and two courtyards, one of which is now used as an amusement court for the British officers. The interior of the palace is elegant, the chief halls and apartments being embellished with paintings commemorating the battles of the order. One of the most interesting parts of the building is the armoury. It is a great hall running the whole length of the structure and containing many warlike weapons and trophies which belonged to the Knights of Malta.

In it there are now ninety complete coats of armour for mounted knights and a large number of weapons used by the infantry of the past. The complete suits of armour stand among the muskets of the garrison, looking like sentinels and giving the whole a very somber appearance. In one piece of armour several slight dents may be seen. They were caused by shooting at it with a musket at 180 feet. The bullets failed to penetrate or break the steel.

The old capital of Malta is six miles from Valletta, and one can reach it by rail or carriage. It is there that the grand masters had their summer residences and there they were inaugurated. They left Valletta early in the morning, escorted by a body guard and bands of music. When the grand master came near the city he was saluted by musketry, and one of the chief citizens came out and gave him a bunch of artificial flowers, making an appropriate speech and kissing his hands. When the grand master arrived at the gates he knelt down before a cross which had been erected there, and the keys of the city were given to him. At the same time he swore that he would respect the privileges and franchises of the city. After this he went to mass and then on back to Valletta.

Jack—Oh, mother, I do love cake! It's awful nice.

Mother (reprovingly)—You should not say "love" cake—say "like." Do not say "awful"—say "very." Do not say "nice"—say "good." And, by the way, the word "Oh" should be omitted. Now, see if you can repeat the sentence correctly.

Jack—I like cake; it's very good.

Mother—That's better.

Jack (with an air of disgust)—It sounds as if I was only talking 'bout bread.

Bourassa's Useful Place.

Mr. Bourassa may give serious offence to the extreme partisan, but he has his place in the scheme of things. He is independent and outspoken, perhaps impracticable and irreconcilable, but there should be room in Quebec for at least one Bourassa, as there is room in Ontario for one W. F. Maclean. In these days, when thoughtful and responsible people are crying out against the evils of hide-bound partisanship, and telling us that the unmistakable sign of our political life are to be attributed largely to the abuse of the party system, resulting in blind and slavish devotion to party names and organizations, a little sturdy independence, no matter how irritating or annoying it may be, is probably needed as a corrective. Too many Bourassas and Macleans might possibly make government impossible, but there is little immediate chance that there will be too many of them. A certain measure of independence is quite as necessary to the proper working of the party system as party loyalty is.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

No Sermons from Mr. Rockefeller.

Mr. Rockefeller's condescending explanation to his fellow-countrymen, this morning, is of a piece with the many attempts he has made, within the last year or two, to placate public sentiment. But he egregiously misconceives the situation. Some one ought to tell him how badly he hits it off. His physician, or one of his many pastors, or his favorite reporter should make an effort to get it into his mind that the American people don't want this sort of thing from him at all. They don't want either economic or moral disquisitions from him. His true role, in the present juncture of his affairs, is silence and very careful attention to the state of his own soul, leaving the country to look after its own salvation as best it can, without any help from him.

I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and my Book on either Dyspepsia, The Heart, or The Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the RESULT of your ailment, and not the CAUSE. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—means Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart, and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me today for samples and free book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by All Dealers.

How to Avoid Cramps.

(From the Nashville Tennessean.)

"You often read of people dying from cramps while in swimming," said James D. Rose, of Martin, Tenn. "People don't die from cramps while in bathing. The water gets in their ears, floods the ear drum and causes the nerves leading to the brain to be come paralyzed. This naturally forces other vital nerves to cease performing their duty, the result being death. If people who go in swimming would put cotton in their ears the number of deaths from 'cramps' would be much smaller."

Proof of Good Blood.

(Chicago Tribune.)

"Mamma, why don't you want me to play with that Kuder boy?"
"Because, my dear, I know the family. He hasn't good blood in him."
"Why, mamma, he's been vaccinated twice and it wouldn't take either time."

The Old-time Religion.

Ottawa Journal.—A Hamilton minister, Rev. J. S. Williamson, jumped into fifteen feet of water at Grimsby Park and saved a woman from drowning. Which was a great deal more like the old Church militant than spending one's life in trying to find out whether or not someone is selling peanuts on Sunday.

"The difference between a woman and a glass," said the funny fellow, "is that the glass reflects without speaking, while a woman speaks without reflecting."
"And the difference between you and a glass," is that the glass is polished!"

"May I introduce to you my friend?" asked a fashionable young man at a recent dance. He is a liteway man, you know."
"Indeed!" exclaimed his partner.
"Aw, yes. He sent the 'Society News' a list of the guests at the last party, and the editah accepted it."—Tit-Bits.
