The Annexation of Ungava.

Premier Gouin announces that it is part of his policy to bring about the annexation of Ungava to the Province of Quebec. The honourable gentleman has not we fear taken into consideration the tremendous political consequences of such a step. Under the British North America Act, Quebec is the pivotal province of the Dominion. This act provides that: "Quebec shall have the fixed number of sixty-five members in the Dominion Parliament," and that: "there shall be assigned to each of the other provinces, such a number of members, as will bear the same proportion to the number of its population (ascertained at each decennial) as the number sixty-five bears to the number of the population of Quebec so ascertained." This provision is obviously of the nature of a federal compact, intended entirely for the protection of the rights of the French-Canadians who reside chiefly in, and are the most numerous residents in the Province of Quebec. But what becomes of this agreement if Premier Gouin is unfortunate enough to succeed in doubling the area of the Province, without, by the way, materially increasing its white population? Suppose for instance, that the Maritime Provinces were annexed to Quebec, could it possibly be contended that the representation of Ontario in Parliament should bear the same proportion to the number of its population that the number sixty-five bears to the population of Quebec, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island? Obviously the annexation of Ungava would involve nothing less than a constitutional amendment and under present conditions and still more under the conditions likely to prevail in the future, no section of the population of Canada has so little to gain and so much to lose by constitutional amendments as the French-Canadians who not only have their provincial autonomy, but their proportionate representation in the Federal Parliament guaranteed them under a compact which they would be wise to regard as analogous to "the laws of the Medes and Persians which altereth not." Our impression is that upon mature consideration, Mr. Gouin will not press for the annexation of Ungava, and we cannot imagine for one moment that Sir Wilfrid Laurier would consent that such a dangerous question should become a live issue in Canadian politics. In politics as in other businesses it is a good thing to know when you are well off. In was in this kind of knowledge that Premier Gouin's predecessor, Mr. Parent, showed himself fatally deficient.

Aristocrats in the Army.

(Regiment.)
In the army the soldier still loves the real "aristocrat," however much he may dislike the sham one. If officers were elected by their men, the army would be far more "aristocratic" than it now is. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred the officer who is the soldier's best comrade is the officer whose birth has placed him in the highest social position.

The Most Profitable Horse.

The most profitable horse to have on the farm is the good brood mare. She will raise a colt each year, and it will sell for a snug sum in the fall, remarks American Agriculturist. With a little extra care the mare will do as much work as any horse. This is the kind that the average farmer wants and is the kind he should get for his own benefit. Have at least one good brood mare on the farm; raise your own horses and some to sell.

The world has no room for cowards. We must all be ready somehow to toil, to suffer, to die. And yours is not the less noble because no drum beats before you when you go out into your daily battlefields, and no crowds shout about your coming when you return from your daily victory or defeat.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

Hamilton-Fulton.

A very pretty home wedding took place at 3 o'clock on Sept. 25th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fulton, Knoxford, when their youngest daughter, Ida R. was united in marriage to Dudley Lee Hamilton of Greenfield, the Rev. Mr. Bonnell officiating. The bride wore a dainty gown of white Indian muslin trimmed with all-over lace and silk chiffon, with bridal veil, and carried a shower bouquet of flowers. Little Alta Kinney, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl, and looked very pretty dressed in white silk trimmed with lace, and carried a basket of sweet peas and pansies.

Charles Galoupe presided at the organ and the music softly continued through the marriage service. Following the ceremony about one hundred guests partook of a bountiful wedding tea. The groom's present to the bride was a handsome gold locket and chain, and to the little flower girl a pearl necklace. Following is a list of the presents:

Church Union in the West.

While the question of the union of the churches has been engaging the attention of the leaders gathered in committees in Toronto and elsewhere, the rank and file in the sparsely-settled West have been blazing out a way for themselves. Lamont, in Northern Alberta, is a village about two years old. When it got big enough to think about regular religious services it was found that the population was about evenly divided between Presbyterians and Methodists. After discussion it was decided to build a union church, which was erected—a neat, commodious building on a good site—practically free of debt. Pending the larger union the two congregations have kept up a separate existence, each having its own pastor, who, of course, has some out-stations, but in point of attendance and fellowship the two congregations are one. The following organizations are carried on jointly: Sunday school, prayer meeting, ladies' aid, temperance society, girls' club and reading circle. The Ladies' Aid Society last year raised $700, which was divided between the fund for the manse and that for the parsonage. A similar amount will be raised this year. As the place is growing rapidly the congregation will soon be too large for the building, and unless Church union comes speedily they will have to separate, but, as one of the residents points out, even if they do separate, as provided for in the terms of the union, much good will have been accomplished. Instead of having two weak and debt-laden congregations, with divided, almost antagonistic, interests, they have had one prosperous, united body. Besides it would be impossible for the members of the two congregations ever to hold narrow views or to think harshly of the religious convictions and practices of those with whom they have lived on such close terms. Residents of Lamont believe their plan might be copied with advantage all over the West, and would be a practical step toward Church union.

The Modern Prayer.

"This prayer, reproduced from the San Francisco Star, splendidly characterizes," says the Catholic Fortnightly Review, a spirit and tendency all too common in our day among Christians, even, here and there, among Catholic Christians."

O Lord I come to Thee in prayer once more; But pardon that I do not kneel before Thy gracious presence—for my knees are sore With too much walking. In my chair instead I'll sit at ease, and humbly bow my head. I've labored in the vineyard. Thou dost know I've sold ten tickets to the minstrel show. I've called on fifteen strangers in our town, Their contributions to our church put down I've baked a pot of beans for Wednesday's tea— An "Old Time Supper" it is going to be. I've dressed three dolls for our annual fair, And made a cake which we will raffle there. Now, with Thy boundless wisdom so sublime Thou knowest that these duties all take time. I have no time to fight my spirit's foes, I have no time to mend my husband's clothes. My children roam the streets from morn till night; I have no time to teach them to do right, But thou, O Lord, considering my cares, Will count them righteous and, and heed my prayers.

Bless the bean supper and the minstrel show, And put it in the hearts of all who go. Induce all visitors to patronize The men who in our programs advertise, Because I chased those merchants till they hid, Whene'er they saw me coming—yes, they hid.

Increase the contributions to our fair, And bless the people who assemble there, Bless Thou the grab bag and gypsy tent, The flower table and the cake that's sent. May our whist club be to Thy service blest The dancing party gaye than the rest. And when Thou hast bestowed these blessings—then We pray that Thou wilt bless our souls. Amen.

FORGET IT.

If you see a tall man ahead of the crowd A leader of men, marching fearless and proud, And you know of a tale whose mere telling aloud Would cause his proud head in anguish to be bowed, It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a skeleton hidden away In a closet, and guarded and kept from the day, In the dark; and whose showing, whose sudden display, Would cause grief and sorrow and life-long dismay, It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a spot in the life of a friend, (We all have such spots concealed with out end) Whose touching his heartstrings would play on the reed, Till the shame of its showing no grieving could mend, It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a thing that will darken the joy Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy, That will wipe out a smile, or the least way annoy A fellow, or cause any gladness to cloy, It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

If you know of a thing just the least little sin, Whose telling would cork up a laugh, or the grin If a man you don't like, for Lord's sake keep it in Don't, don't be a knocker; right here stick a pin— It's a pretty good plan to forget it. —Selected.

A Dramatic Child.

When my son was two or three years old he was seated in his high chair at the table eating corn batter cakes and molasses, of which he was fond. After eating as with cakes as were good for him he was told he could have no more. Heaving a great sigh, he took the plate in both hands and licked all the molasses off. Then, looking steadily at the plate as he held it up before him, he said seriously, "I ain't got no more use for you," and threw it back over his head to the floor, where it broke to pieces.
