J. T. G. CARR,

AFTER THE DAWN.

Pale grows the light that shone at dawn of

When rose the sun in yonder eastern skies; The golden flush of morning fades away; The first pure radiance of the daylight dies.

Pass on fair morn! Shall there not come to Another dawn—a Dayspring brighter far, When through the mists my waiting eyes shall see

The rising glory of the Morning Star?

Pass on, fair morn! I would not stay thy flight,
Though night must cast its shade across

Ere I shall stand where dwells the changeless light—

Where night is lost in everlasting day.

The Beginning of Trouble.

"Sometimes when folks give a present they think is just what anybody wants, it turns out otherwise," said Mr. Hobart, as he drew a chair up to the stove and held his thin hands toward the cheerful warmth. "Now there's that diary you gave Brother Eb last Christmas—"

"What's the matter with it?" sharply demanded Mrs. Hobart. "It ought to be good; I gave fifty cents for it. Has the cover ripped off, or what?"

"Nothing's happened to it," said her husband, mildly. "It's Eb that's making all the trouble. He never kep' a diary before, and sometimes he forgets it for a week or so, and then it takes all hands to help him remember the weather and so on, and get it correct.

"Lucinda said to me that they were getting used to it—she and the girls, though she said it did seem as if she should give right up sometimes when she's had an unusual busy day, to have Eb sit down with his pen and that book, and say, 'Now, what did I do last Wednesday?" an' then begin to argue with Ned about it, an' both of 'em get mad inside o' five minutes.

"But she said as I only get over there once a month anyway, she thought twas too bad to have me happen on one of those writingup times, same as I did last night.

"We've fixed it up between us that next month she's to send me a post-card when he's just finished up a week, saying, 'Come to-morrow, if possible,' and I can tell you I shall wait till I get that post-card before I pack my satchell!"

No More Skyscrapees.

The New York World says: The mad mad race among builders for putting up the tallest skyscraper is to be brought to a sudded end by drastic regulations which have been adopted unanimously by the code revision commission. These regulations, which will revolutionize building construction in this city after January 1, provides that no new building shall be over 250 feet in height. This law sounds the doom of the modern freak skyscraper and means that hereafter no more buildings of the Singer or Metropolitan Life class, respectively 593 and 658 feet high can go up in this city. For the next ten years at least, as the aldermen and Board of Estimate approve the new regulations, the height of skyscrapers will be limited to approximately twenty stories.

BADLY RUN DOWN.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills Came to the Rescue After Doctors Treatment Failed.

The life of any constant traveller is always a hard one, but those whose work compel them to take long tiresome drives over rough roads, exposed to all conditions of weather, are in constant dauger of losing their health. The extreme heat of summer or the piercing winds of winter sap their strength, the kidneys become diseased or rheumatism sets in. What is needed to withstand this hardship is rich red blood-the pure blood that Dr. Williams Pink Pills alone can make. These pills are the travellers never-failing friend. Concerning them Mr. George Dalpe, of St. Eloi, Que., says:-"I am a grain dealer and am obliged to make frequent trips, sometimes very tiring. I returning home from one of these trips last summer very much fatigued. I was overheated and tried to cool and rest myself by lounging on the verandah till late at night. I caught cold and the next day I did not feel at all well. I had a headache, pains in my stomach and was very weak. I went to see a doctor but he said I would be alright in a day or so, so I started on another trip. I had not gone far before I felt very Ill and had to return home and go to bed. I had chills, headache, pains in my stomach and kidneys. The doctor came to see me and he said it was overwork. He treated me for several months but instead of improving I continually grew worse. I wasted away almost to a skeleton and really thought I was going to die. One day my wife returned from the village with a supply of Dr. Williams Pink Pills. She urged me to take them as she said they had been very highly recommended to her. I did so and by the time I had taken four boxes I felt enough benfit to decide me to continue them and I took about a dozen boxes. They fully cured me and today I am able to go about my work without feeling fatigued."

Fatigue, on the least exertion is a sign that the blood is poor. Replace the bad blood with good blood and labor will be a pleasure. Dr. Williams Pink Pills make pure, red blood. That is why they cure anaemia, rheumatism, kidney trouble, indigestion, heart palpitation and the nerve-racking ills of grihood and womanhood. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Co., Brockville. Ont.

IT IS FORCING THE SEASON

to talk this early about Christmas? Well, it will not bring winter any sooner by telling you our immense stock of is beginning to arrive. "Immense" is a big word to use in a little town like Hartland, but it aptly describes our various lines of Holiday novelties; for we wholesale these goods to dealers all up and down the river. We have, therefore, a variety unequalled; and our retail department will be stocked with the choicest things for this season's gift-giving. It will be well to remember this. Much more will be said about it a little later.

XMAS FANCY GOODS
