

HOME-MADE MEDICINE

Said to Relieve Kidney Trouble and Rheumatism

One ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion;
One ounce Compound Salutarin;
Four ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla;

Mixed and taken in teaspoonful doses after meals and at bedtime, is stated by a prominent physician to give most excellent results in kidney or urinary affections, and also in rheumatism and sciatica. The mixture opens the clogged pores of the kidneys, thus assisting them in their work of filtering all waste and poisonous matter from the blood, and expels these in the urine. To allow this poisonous matter to remain means that it will settle in the muscular tissues or joints, and cause the untold misery known as rheumatism.

The mixture is composed of harmless vegetable ingredients which can be purchased at any good drug store, and mixed at home.

Anyone suffering from any of these affections will no doubt be pleased to learn of so simple and highly recommended remedy.

Mr. Borden's Message to Canadian People.

Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the opposition, sent the following message to the Canadian people on the occasion of the fortieth anniversary of Confederation, in response to a request from the Ottawa Citizen:

"You have asked me, upon shortest notice, to send today a message to the people of Canada. Much might be said of the forty years of union and progress now completed, of half a continent acquired and occupied, of undreamed advancement in material prosperity, in the comforts of civilization and in the standard of living among the people at large. The luxuries of our fathers have long since become our necessities.

"What have we to hope or fear for the future? Increased national wealth beyond doubt. To check seriously or permanently the growth of a country so bountifully endowed would demand the most maladroit blundering. There will be the attendant dangers. A nation as well as a community or an individual may be demoralized by sudden riches. There will be an increasing tendency towards the more unequal distribution of material possessions, and those pernicious degrading extremes of wealth and poverty which have wrought so much evil in older countries. Fortunes must always be unequal, because men are unequally endowed with vigor and intellect; but the state must not emphasize the inequality nor sin against the feeble and unfortunate by denying them some just measure of hope and opportunity. And do not forget that the sins of a nation are never forgiven, but must be expiated in fullest measure and to the end.

"Shall we have higher standards of public and private life? Will public opinion demand more of the pulpit, the press and parliament? Shall we contribute anything of moment to the progress of the world's democracy? It is for the people to decide. The commercialism of sudden prosperity always leaves its deadening influences upon the public conscience, but the signs of today are not without hope. The same influence prevents men from realizing their duty of public service, which is as sacred and patriotic a duty as that of defending one's country. The man who puts it aside, who devotes his entire energies to his own devoted his entire energies to his own personal interests, while he leaves to others the task of struggling against corruption, maladministration, plunder of the public domain, and national dishonor, is as much a recreant and a coward as he who flees from the battlefield. It will not serve to rail at politics with pursed lips and superior air and to declare them unclean. Your excuse disguises only for a moment the selfishness and indolence which it is intended to hide. If they are unclean, you are individually responsible. Come and help make them entirely clean.

"What is Canada's future portion in and relations with the Empire? One would be bold to prophesy. As our country increases in wealth and population, its voice must gather more influence, but our responsibilities will also be greater. Closer trade relations are for the Mother Country to determine. The question is of much higher importance to her than to Canada, and, in my opinion, of infinitely greater moment to the future of the Empire than some British statesmen seem to imagine. Too long a sleep may have a rude awakening.

Caroline, Wife of George IV.

Caroline of Brunswick, consort of George IV., King of Great Britain and Ireland, was born at Brunswick in 1768. Owing to her robust health and fine constitution her mother declared that "Caroline was born for adversity, as nothing could destroy such physical strength as hers." And indeed, it fell to the lot of Caroline to occupy a most trying position as wife to George IV., a position which he never acknowledged.

It was a few days after Caroline's marriage with the Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV) that an envious woman of the court whispered into George's ear the story that his bride had been deeply in love with a young German nobleman who had lost his life in battle. The story was verified by George's agents, who investigated the girlhood of Caroline. This was reason enough for the Prince of Wales to become cold towards his young wife and later to force her to depart from court and live at some distance from him.

A year after her unhappy marriage Caroline gave birth to a daughter. The child occupied all her time and thought, but she was not allowed the joy of her little one's society long, for the Prince of Wales ordered the child removed from its mother's residence and placed in a castle some miles distant from her. But the grieving mother was allowed to visit her babe once a week. This arrangement continued till the child was grown. Then she was bidden by her father to come to London and be presented to the court. The fond mother never again beheld her daughter for soon after the enforced separation Caroline went to travel on the continent, hoping to ease the gnawing pain at her heart. Soon afterward her daughter was married to a young foreign nobleman, and a little later the sorrowing mother received the news of her child's untimely death. This decided Caroline to remain abroad indefinitely. She did not return to England till the death of George III. made her husband King of Great Britain and Ireland. Then she hurried home and insisted that she receive her rights as the queen consort. In vain she made her plea, George refused to see her or lend ear to her prayer or those of her friends. He commanded the court to ignore her and bade none ever speak her name in his presence. Indeed, he heaped upon his suffering and rejected wife all the insults that a despicable monarch could.

When George IV. was crowned he gave orders that Caroline should not be allowed to enter the church during the ceremony. This last blow was too much, and three weeks after George's Fourth's coronation the broken hearted Caroline breathed her last.

The Doctor Away from Home when Most Needed.

People are often very much disappointed to find that their family physician is away from home when they most need his services. Diseases like cramp colic and cholera morbus require prompt treatment, and have in many instances proven fatal before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. The right way is to keep at hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. No physician can prescribe a better medicine for these diseases. By having it in the house you escape much pain and suffering and all risk. Buy it now; it may save life. For sale by All Dealers.

"Green Terror" Gains Ground in United States.

A Washington despatch says: "Absinthe, the green terror of France," said a botanist of the agricultural department, "is now being produced in considerable quantities in this country, and is being used to an alarming degree.

"In some parts of Wisconsin the wormwood is being cultivated, and it is from this plant that the oil is distilled for making 'the green terror.'

"It is necessary to give the cultivation of wormwood great care, and a certain age of growth must be reached before it is suited for distilled the oil, an oil which is almost worth its weight in gold. Climatic changes have resulted in making certain portions of Wisconsin favored spots for the cultivation of wormwood, and now there are several thousand wormwood farms in that state.

"There is a secret, however, in its cultivation which is carefully guarded by the pioneers, and the consequence is that a number of growers are unsuccessful in raising a plant which will produce the oil in paying quantities. The plan of sowing the seed broadcast has been abandoned, and now the successful growers plant in rows or dills, cultivating as they would corn or tobacco.

"It is just before the plant has reached maturity that it is cut down and sent to the distillery, where the oil is taken from the green plant, being extracted by means of heat, with the exact process of which I am not familiar.

"The Wisconsin growers of wormwood and distillers of the oil at first shipped nearly all their output to Europe, and now they find a good and ready market for it in this country, and at almost fabulous prices.

"The oil is employed in many ways, but its chief uses are in making absinthe and liniments. The penetrating powers of the oil are simply wonderful. When applied to the surface it works its way to the bone, and this makes it exceedingly valuable in compounding strong liniments.

"The by-product, absinthe, is already an awful curse. A person under the influence of the drug experiences the most pleasant dreams and imaginings; but like all excesses, it kills the gentle emotions, freezes kindness, rouses in man the spirit of the beast, and accomplishes more vile deeds than are dreamed of.

"A large drink of absinthe will procure insensibility, convulsions, dilated pupils, sluggish pulse and other serious effects, the after effect often including trembling hands, arms and legs, intense thirst, tingling in the ears, illusions of sight and hearing, and other results. So strong a hold has absinthe gained in France that the government is exerting every effort to suppress its sale, an undertaking which, I fear, will never be accomplished.

"The use of absinthe in America is increasing every day, and the poison is kept in nearly every city and village saloon. A few drops in a glass of whiskey will make the average drinker think and feel that he owns half the earth with a good chance of getting the other half if he takes another drink of it. 'Just a drop of absinthe,' is what one half of the present day drinkers, especially among the upper classes, will say to the bar tender when he orders a drink.

"Two or three drinks with 'just a drop of absinthe' will cause the drinker to get in that condition where he owns it all, knows everything, wants to hug everybody and is the very biggest fool in seventeen states. When the stuff begins to die out he is on the verge of a good case of 'monkeys.' There is no drinking schedule so sure of producing jim-jams in short order as 'just a drop of absinthe.'

"While our Wisconsin manufacturers of the oil which produces absinthe are getting a good quality, France will continue to make the best grade, because the secrets of its manufacture have been known to them for ages, and this secret has never found its way into the laboratories this side of the Atlantic, and I doubt if it ever will.

"Absinthe is a dangerous green eyed fairy and it is to be regretted that Americans are now able to produce the brain killing stuff. It is growing with wonderful rapidity. Mark my words, it will not be a great while before national legislation against its manufacture in this country will be asked for."
