E. W. MAIR has just completed some improvements he set out to make in his drug store. The very fine set of silent salesmen and the soda counter in quarter oak added materially to the appearance of the store but the crowning addition is the quartered oak prescription case. This extends clear across the store and contains in the centre a heavy plate mirror flanked by heavy turned pilasters. On either side of this are cases for perfumery. Behind this beautiful piece of furniture is a well appointed prescription counter. The whole thing is finished in the very finest piano finish.
