A friend of Dr. Slocum Remedies writes: "Send a bottle of Psychine to Mrs. W. . . They have a daughter in decline, and I believe it would help her. I have mentioned your remedies to the family, and also cited some of the miraculous cures accomplished inside the last 18 years, of which I have knowledge."

The Supply of Lumber.

Considering the long period of comparative inactivity which they have been called upon to endure for so many weeks now, it must be confessed that the lumber manufacturers and dealers have the lumber situation well in hand in this country. The story of the coming building season will be written largely by them, and it seems safe to assume that they will see that it is a season of sane expenditure. That it was a bankers' and not a general agricultural and industrial panic that has alarmed us of late must be conceded but when the banks refused to extend their credit and called in their loans and money was locked up in vaults, those businesses already on the verge of collapse paid the penalty for unstableness, while others, truly alarmed, stopped and took account of their belongings. In this class was the lumbering industry.

While no panic exists, or has existed, the business of the country will take some time yet to recover. It is claimed that at present the banks have more actual cash on hand than they have had at any one time for years past, while their hoarded currency is only beginning to come out cautiously in search of quarterly and annual dividends. By summer it is thought that cheap money will be again abundantly available.

The lumbering industry is peculiarly one which, on account of its magnitude, requires large borrowed capital. That capital has been greatly reduced for months past, yet the trade has gone cheerfully along, confident in its stability and power to ultimately win out. That hope is now being verified. The cheering information of mills starting up again, and of a reawakening retail demand, are indicative of the strength that lies behind the industry. Each week is showing an improvement in the call for lumber, while just as surely there also evidence given of a decrease in the available supply. Conditions in the bush in almost all parts of Canada have been far from favorable for cutting, and the supply of material that will next summer be available promises to be unusually small.

This is a matter for congratulation. The buyers and consumers of lumber—with some exceptions, of course—do not want the market broken or even unsettled. These buyers not in the market now are not particularly interested in prices, and it has been no use trying to sell them anything. It has been a good thing, this combination of fortunate circumstances which has been the means of keeping the market stable, and if demand has been slow in reviving it must not be construed as auguring ill for the future welfare of the industry.—Contract Record.

Mind Reading in Leap Year.

"Do you believe in mind-reading, Mr. Simpkins?"
"Why, no, Miss Higgles. Do you?"
"Yes. Would you like to have me show my skill?"
"Yes, Mr. Simpkins. Please fix your thoughts upon some pleasing object and think hard."
"I am thinking."
"Ah, you are thinking about me. Why Mr. Simpkins?"
"What is it?"
"You are thinking of asking me a question."
"Yes, yes. Can you tell me what the question is?"
Give me time, and please think very hard.
Ah, yes. The question begins with "Will."
"Yes, yes. Go on."
"Will—you—be—my—"
"Why do you stop? Can't you get it? There's only one more word."
"But this is so embarrassing."
"Not at all. It's a scientific experiment. Come, the last word."
"Wife!"
"Hurray!"
"George!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

"That was too bad, indeed. Still, they can always boast they had a swell wedding."

The death of Jarvis R. Tracy took place on the 10th instant at his residence while for a few days previous to his death all hope for his recovery was given up by his relatives and many friends, yet when it did come it came as a sudden shock. Mr. Tracy has resided in this place for some fourteen years and built the Tracy Hotel but within the past six years he sold the Hotel to his brother-in-law Mr. A. Harris the present proprietor, and purchased a residence near by. Mr. Tracy on several occasions has represented the parish of Kent at the municipal council and was considered a good councillor. He is the last remaining brother of a large family. He leaves a widow, not ever having any family who with his relatives and many friends keenly feel their loss.

The Dairy of The Near Future.

The present high price of feed and the low price paid for milk to the producer thereof makes it incumbent on the thoughtful dairyman to map out a plan of campaign that shall result in a greater gain for the care, labor and capital invested in the production of this prime necessity of life.

How this result is to be attained is a somewhat vexed question to be answered by each individual in accordance with his abilities and environment: one thing, however, may be clearly stated, that is, that is cannot be reached by applying the methods of the trades union to the sale of poor, dirty, ill-cared for milk. Clean milk from healthy cows properly fed and cared for, milk that has a proper fat content and will keep for some time after reaching the consumer, is being sought for by the medical profession and the laity throughout the length and breadth of this big rich country and the problem for the raiser is to connect himself with those who demand what he must be prepared to supply—pure, well cared for milk of low bacterial content. To the producers of such milk who market in competition with ill-cared milk, we suggest the formation of societies, who shall certify that the milk was produced from tested herds, under good hygienic conditions and that it contains a proper percentage of solids and a minimum of bacteria.—Practical Dairyman.
